NON-ALCOHOLIC FAMILY ENTERTAINMENT

Thank You

The First Night Committee expresses their sincere thanks to the general public for their great support and acceptance of Quincy's first ever "First Night Event". The attendance far exceeded our hoped for expectations. We continue to receive positive comments and we are most grateful. We look forward to your continued participation in the 1993 First Night celebration.

Mayor James A. Sheets, Honorary Chairperson, his wife, Joann, and Michael Cheney, First Night Chairperson, shown viewing the evening's activities.

An ecumenical service was held in the historic United First Parish Church as part of the opening of Quincy's First Night Celebration. Most of the City of Quincy's denomination of clergy participated in this religious service.

Thank You

We sincerely thank all financial contributors, the major sponsors, location sponsors, grant sponsors, volunteers and in kind services. The First Night event would not have been possible without their support.

There were plenty of happy faces during Quincy's first New Year's Eve celebration.

FIRST FOR QUINCY New Year's Eve festival a success

By Chris Poon
The Patriot Ledger

QUINCY — On the First Night of Quincy, thousands came to see: rock drummers drumming, Irish steppers stepping, a city councilor singing and Quincy Square full of revelry.

The city's first New Year's Eve celebration Thursday night was by all accounts a booming success, from the military parade at the start to the final bang of fireworks at midnight.

Organizers estimate 13,000 people streamed through the blocked-off streets to watch puppeteers, listen to Broadway show tunes and eat fried dough dusted with sugar.

Some revelers abandoned their winter coats as the nighttime temperature peaked at 51 degrees.

"Everything fell into place, including the weather," said city councilor and First Night Chairman Michael Cheney. "We've proven people want to come to Quincy Square."

Karen Morton of Quincy brought her parents, husband and two children to First Night.

"We were just going to stay home. There's nothing else for the kids to do and this is so much better," said Morton as she waited in line with Eric, 6, and Gregory, 7, for the giant inflatable slide ride.

A PROTOTYPE 16-inch 50-caliber gun installed on the battleship U.S.S. Massachusetts is surveyed by U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Director Bill MacMullen. The gun, measuring 60-feet long, was typical of the ordnance installed on the Massachusetts which was built in Quincy in 1943. In all, MacMullen hopes to make about 20 guns, some dating back to the Spanish-American War, part of the museum scheduled to open at the Fore River shipyard in the fall.

USNSM-MWRA Sign Lease Ship Museum Construction Start Seen In Summer

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Officials from the MWRA and the U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum signed a lease Tuesday paving the way for construction to start this summer on a multi-million dollar shipbuilding museum on the banks of the Fore River shipyard.

Once built, officials said the museum honoring Quincy's 200-year maritime history and housing the state's National Guard Military Archives will be the largest such facility in the country.

The lease will allow the USNSM to create their facility by refurbishing two, unused buildings, and utilizing part of a parking area and a pier on a five and a half acre site near the Quincy Point traffic rotary. In exchange, the museum will pay the authority $1,000 per month together with an additional percentage rent based on the museum's gross, according to Maggie Debbie, director of Real Property Planning and Development for the MWRA.

During the first five years of the lease, Debbie said the museum, in addition to the $1,000 base rent, will pay the authority 10 percent of gross over $500,000. The museum would not pay the Authority any additional money during that five-year period if the facility does not generate more than $500,000 annually.

During the second five years and beyond, the museum would pay 10 percent of gross up to $500,000 and 15 percent above $500,000.

"The idea is that they will grow and succeed and we'll share in their success by having been patient and hopefully they will do well and we'll get out payback," Debbie said.

Directly or indirectly, MWRA officials said museum proceeds would help finance the Boston Harbor cleanup, which could lead to some kind of rate reduction.

"In essence, any revenue we take in is used to defray the cost of what we're doing. It goes back to help cover our capital expenses," said MWRA spokesman Paul DiNatale.

Museum Executive Director William MacMullen, who has been working on the museum project for approximately 18 months, said he is pleased with the lease and eager to begin the next phase of the museum.

"I feel really good. Now we have to think about getting the plans approved and moving forward with the building itself."

"This is just another step but it certainly is an important one and now our presence is official now. People know our presence is for real and we're going to move forward."

MacMullen said the museum's next step is to continue its fundraising drive. He and other volunteers hope to raise

Hearing On Newport Ave. Properties Rezoning April 5

The City Council and Planning Board will hold a joint public hearing Monday, April 5 at 7 p.m. for the purpose of discussing proposals to change the zoning category for properties on Newport Ave. now occupied by Stop and Shop and Pneumatic Scale.

Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien has proposed rezoning Stop and Shop from Business B to Planned Unit Development (PUD) and Pneumatic Scale from Industrial B to PUD.

Development projects for areas in PUD category are required to seek a special permit from the City Council subsequent to receiving a recommendation from the Planning Board.

"I am proposing these zoning amendments in response to Stop and Shop's announcement that they wish to build larger retail facilities on the site now owned by Pneumatic Scale," Chretien said. "While there may be some benefits to Stop and Shop's proposal, changing the usage of such a large piece of land from industrial to retail has some very important implications—the most apparent has to do with traffic.

"I am proposing these zoning changes in order to allow area residents a greater amount of control over the project. Because the proposal is so big, the elected City Council will make every effort to understand neighborhood concerns and to implement conditions on the project that would minimize any potential adverse impacts.

I encourage residents of the area to attend the public hearing and to speak in favor of my proposals."

Property Tax Bills Due May 3

Property tax bills for the fourth quarter of Fiscal 1993 have been mailed and are due Monday, May 3, announces Quincy Tax Collector Dana Childs.

Payments received in the collector's office after May 3 will be assessed a late charge of 14 percent back to May 3. Payments are considered late if received after May 3 regardless of the postmark date.

Property owners who have not received a bill should contact the collector's office Monday through Friday between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. New owners since Jan. 1, 1992 are advised that tax bills for 1993 are issued in the name of the prior owner. They should obtain a copy of the bill from the prior owner or the tax office

Failure to receive a bill does not negate interest for late payments.

Mayor's Commission On Women Meeting

The Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women will meet Saturday, April 24 from 8:30 a.m. to noon at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St.

The program will focus on the women in the Quincy community with speakers from community groups such as DOVE and Community Action and a guest speaker to be announced.

Refreshments will be available from 9:30 a.m. to noon. The meeting is free and open to the public.

Sun Citizen Of Year Reception For Stephen Cantelli Sunday

Stephen Cantelli, fifth grade teacher at the Lincoln-Hancock School, will be honored Sunday as The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year.

The reception, which was originally scheduled for March 14 but postponed because of the blizzard, will be held at 2 p.m. in the Golden Lion Suite at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center, 120

Quarry St.

Cantelli is the eighth recipient of the award given annually by The Sun for outstanding community service.

No Separate Business At Cafe

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Responding to concerns raised by a number of residents, The Quincy License Board Tuesday held a hearing regarding the recent expansion of The Garden Cafe, 653

Southern Artery.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said he had received several calls from local residents expressing concern that a "separate (business) operation" was in place at the restaurant site.

Atty. Robert Fleming explained to the board that when The Garden Cafe expanded its premises last February, a separate room for patrons wishing to eat only "lighter fare" such as pizza and salads was added to the restaurant.

Fleming assured Gorman and the other License Board members that the room was part of the restaurant and in no way a separate business.

Gorman was reassured by Fleming's explanation.

"If that's the case, I have no problem," said Gorman.

Soup-Sandwich Shop Approved On 3-2 Vote

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Quincy License Board Tuesday voted 3-2 to grant a request from a Quincy couple for a Common Victualer License to open a soup and sandwich shop at 12 Blanchard Rd.

The matter was continued from the board's March 23 meeting so that the board would have more time to weigh arguments from residents both for and against the request. The board also follows a standard practice of reviewing all Common Victualer requests twice.

Atty. Dennis Harrington, representing applicants Massimo and Marisa Ranalli, said while he acknowledged that there is a "core of several families near the building that are adamantly opposed" to the request, the major of residents in the general vicinity are in favor.

Harrington also briefly reiterated his description of the proposal from the March 23 meeting, saying that the Ranallis wanted to open a 28-seat restaurant, under the name Massimo's Caffé, that would serve a menu of soup, sandwiches and other light foods. No fried foods would be served, Harrington said, and no smoking would be allowed in the restaurant for either employees or customers.

The Ranallis, who own the Fotovision store at the site, want to operate the restaurant from a separate part of the building, according to Harrington. He had also noted at the board's previous meeting that the couple has done an extensive amount of work on the building to improve its appearance.

The requested hours of operation were Monday through Thursday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Friday and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 11 p.m., with the shop being closed on Sunday, Harrington said.

Atty. Robert Johnson, representing the immediate abutters of the site as well as "greater than 50 residents" in the area, also briefly restated his earlier position that his clients had concerns regarding traffic, late night hours, deliveries and pickups, and other effects that could result from the shop's presence in the neighborhood.

Two residents spoke at Tuesday's meeting, one for and one against the request.

Reno Litterio of 25 Hynes Ave said that while he understood the traffic concerns of some of the residents, "you're always going to have that." He also noted that he was "impressed" with the renovations done to the building and called Massimo Ranalli a "very hard working" and "responsible" young man and a "credit to the business community of the city."

Guido Pettinelli of 40

Hardwick Rd. said the intersection near the store is a dangerous one and recalled two separate automobile accidents there that resulted in one police officer being killed and another "totally disabled."

"The whole area is a dangerous area, period," said Pettinelli.

Board members were equally divided on the matter.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman reiterated his position from the board's previous meeting that he felt that most of the business generated from the shop would be "walk-in business" that would have little, if any, impact on traffic in the area.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey voiced similar sentiments and read from a report from Traffic Engineer Jack Gillon which stated that the traffic impact caused by the restaurant would be "minimal."

Police Chief Francis Mullen, however, said "that intersection is a disaster" and said that he could not vote for the proposal in good conscience.

Health Commissioner Jane Gallahue agreed. (Con'd on Page 18)

THINK TWICE ABOUT "SMART" DRUGS

"Cognitive enhancement" made.

"Smart" are the code words for a relatively new family of food supplements and drugs touted as being able to improve memory and boost intelligence. So far, none of the products have been proven effective. However evidence does show that many of these preparations can be dangerous. Severe cramps, diarrhea, chills and even death have been associated with some of the seemingly harmless food supplements. One of the popular prescription medications can actually put people suffering from coronary-artery disease at higher risk of heart attack. Scientists are legitimately searching for drugs to repair brain damage and restore memory. Such discoveries have yet to be

P.S. Consult your doctor before embarking on any programs of drug or food supplements, prescription or not.

It may not be very bright to take the new "smart" drugs. However, you can significantly improve your mental acumen by making sure that you get adequate sleep, rest and nutrition. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or how you can modify your lifestyle to help ward off heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-1550. ## A Wise Decision

Tim Cahill's decision not to run for mayor this year was a wise one.

If he had decided to run he would have needed a football helmet because he would have been banging his head against a political stone wall: Jim Sheets.

After giving it a lot of thought, Cahill came to the right conclusion: "The time is not right."

It sure isn't.

Right now Sheets is riding a popularity wave and the tide doesn't look like it's going to go out on him. Not this year, anyway.

SHEETS

The fact also is that Jim Sheets has done a good job—especially considering the economic woes of today—and no one is going to beat him this year.

Two years from now could be a different story. Sheets might—after three terms—decide that "enough is enough" and step down. Or, he could get an appointment in the political or education field. Or, there might be some real issues to shoot at by then.

Two years from now might just be the right time for Cahill to make his mayoral move. He will seek his fourth City Council term this year and should have no problems there. The last two times out he topped the City Council at-large field. On the strength of that, he would be a formidable mayoral candidate.

As a councillor with mayoral aspirations, he will have a forum to speak out on the Sheets administration and issues affecting the community.

At age 34, he still has plenty of time to run for mayor. If the political climate isn't right in 1995, he'd still only be 38 in 1997.

But this year definitely was not the right time.

His decision not to run will no doubt have an effect on other incumbent councillors this year.

Ward 5 councillor Charles Phelan and Ward 3's Larry Chretien had both been considering at-large bids this year. But without an open at-large seat, they probably will stand pat and seek re-election in their wards and wait to see what things look like in 1995.

And that, of course, will discourage a few potential ward candidates who have been waiting in the wings to see if Phelan and Chretien would go at-large this year.

Cahill's decision not to run for mayor virtually assures Sheets of a third term. No major candidate is going to challenge him. A nuisance token candidate might run just for the hell of it.

If there is no candidate, Sheets will become the first mayor in Quincy's history to twice run unopposed. He had no opposition in 1991.

Only two other mayors have had "free rides" to re-election and only one each: Tom Burgin in 1940 and Frank McCauley in 1983.

CAHILL

MILESTONE: Rep. Michael Bellotti was given a surprise 30th birthday party by friends the other night at Raynham Dog Track night club. But it cost him $10. He bet and lost on one race.

BELLOTTI

BILLY BULGER MAY be the king of quips and one-liners on Beacon Hill and at the annual St. Patrick's Day breakfast, but Quincy's Walter Hannon is certainly no slouch in that department.

The former mayor fires his zingers from the hip and though they might sting a little, they really are funny.

Hannon was in rare form at the retirement dinner for John Gillis, firing away at Mayor James Sheets and former Mayors Frank McCauley and Arthur Tobin.

He had the crowd howling. Maybe he missed his calling. He could have been a good stand-up comedian.

SPEAKING OF THAT dinner, Frank McCauley sort of knocked down his image as a penny pincher when he presented John Gillis with a well researched list of the seven mayors and 38 city councillors Gillis served with as city clerk.

McCauley, who as mayor enjoyed a Jack Benny-like tightwad reputation, surprised everyone when he made the presentation: the list was framed.

THE FUNDRAISER FOR School Committee candidate Ron McCarthy, that had to be postponed because of the March 13 blizzard, has been rescheduled for this Saturday, 7 to 10 p.m. at Pat Flanagan's, Quincy Parkingway.

WHILE WE WERE freezing and shoveling snow, up here, a number of Quincy residents and former residents were enjoying themselves under the sun in Florida.

The occasion was the sixth annual "Quincy Day" get-together at the Cape Coral home of Mae and Russell D'Angelo of Wollaston. Among those attending:

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Barry of Wollaston and former Quincy residents Mr. and Mrs. Joseph O'Brien of Falmouth; Mr. and Mrs. Rico Speranza of North Fort Myers; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Morse of Hiram, Me and Spring Hill, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Morse of Falmouth; Mrs. Raymond Cunningham of North Fort Myers; and Rocky Nook; Edward Hogan of North Fort Myers and East Bridgewater; Mr. and Mrs. Jerry DeGennaro of Naples, Fla.

"One of the highlights of getting together," said Mae D'Angelo, retired Quincy traffic supervisor, "was to pass around The Quincy Sun to keep up with the current Quincy news."

The group have been friends as members of the Wollaston Yacht Club and from long-time association in various Quincy activities.

Incidentally, Mae and Gert Barry are co-chairwomen of the Quincy High School class of 1943 reunion coming up this year.

Central Middle School Raises $665 For Charity

Central Middle School recently raised $665.65 for charities during a basketball shootout featuring students in Divisions 6-1, 7-1, 7-2 and 7-3.

Friends and families sponsored a certain amount of money per basket. Of the money raised, $100 went toward buying clothes for a needy child during the holidays.

The four senate representatives got together and chose five charities from lists made up by the students. The school divided the remaining $565.65 among three charities selected by the students.

Teacher advisors were Brian Flaherty, a science teacher, and Edward Steele, math teacher.

Ship Museum Construction Start Seen In Summer

$100,000 from citizens and corporations to cover preliminary work, including engineering, accounting and legal expenses.

No city or state revenue is earmarked for the museum project.

The museum has received state approval to sell up to $10 million in bonds to pay for renovating the pair of MWRA buildings, which total 200,000 square feet.

MacMullen said the museum corporation expects to sell $5 million in bonds which will pay for landscaping, site work, exterior and interior renovations to the buildings, and exhibit installation. That work is slated to start in about two months, he said.

The museum, which officials expect to open in the fall, will feature hundreds of naval and wartime artifacts. The museum's "anchor" will be the U.S.S. Salem, the largest "big-gun" heavy-cruiser which was built at the Fore River shipyard in 1947.

MacMullen said he is also trying to secure a Sailfish class submarine and a Fletcher class destroyer.

The museum will also be the permanent home for the Massachusetts Military Research Center and Archive which includes artifacts from all U.S. military engagements up to and including Operation Restore Hope.

In addition, the museum will also display hands-on exhibits of artillery, tanks and other equipment both from U.S. forces and their adversaries.

For instance,

U.S. NAVAL SHIPBUILDING Museum donations from the Lexington Association are received by Mayor James Sheets, center and Museum Executive Director Bill MacMullen, third from left. Looking on is MWRA Director Doug MacDonald. The memorabilia, including a chart showing the Lexington's tours of duty and combat missions, was donated by members of the Lexington Association who are original crew members of the WWII ship built at the Fore River shipyard, future site of the museum. From left, association president Roland Kling, Charles Ryberg, Charlie Quayle and Arthur Burke.

MacMullen said the U.S. Naval Ordnance Testing Center in Dahlgren, Vir., has donated about 180 tons in guns, many of which do not exist anywhere else. The director said he intends to place the 20 or so guns in chronological order with information detailing when and why the gun was used.

One gun is a 16-inch prototype gun installed on the battleship U.S.S. Massachusetts which was built in Quincy in 1943. Another is a 14-inch gun installed on the U.S.S. Nevada, the only battleship to get underway in Pearl Harbor during the Japanese surprise attack in December, 1941. The Nevada was built in Quincy in 1916.

Other guns will be part of the exhibit, including a coastal artillery defense gun similar to those manned by the Army around Boston Harbor; and a prototype 24-inch 50 caliber gun, the largest ever built.

MacMullen said the 24-inch gun was built to counter 18-inch guns used by Japanese battleships. The U.S.'s bigger guns were never installed because the war ended.

The lease signing was announced by Authority Director Doug MacDonald and Mayor James Sheets who called the agreement a "win-win situation" for both parties.

Sheets, who serves as chairman of the board of the USNSM corporation, said, "I think it's good for the city of Quincy to have the museum located there and I think it's good for the MWRA because that is the first major use which is non-ship building and ship-repairing apart from the (MWRA's sludge treatment) facility.

I think (the museum is) a higher use, I think it sets the tone, I think it means we can look forward to the revitalization of Quincy Point and I think we can look forward to a development program at the shipyard which is going to provide the highest possible use for that land and therefore give to the ratepayers the highest possible return on their dollars. It's a great opportunity for us to work together and make a decision which is win-win for all of us."

MacDonald added, "The United States Shipbuilders Museum is a wonderful way to say to people, the future of the yard is going to be a dynamic and productive place which will not only be forward looking so far as economic revitalization in this area but also captures the heritage of the shipyard."

Boston Trip Ruled Out By School Committee

The School Committee turned down a request by the senior class at Quincy High School to hold its annual trip at Boston Hotel.

Committee Vice Chairman Dr. Nathaniel S. Hunting noted that all school social functions must be under supervision by school officials and must be held in the city.

A petition signed by more than 300 members of the Class of 1931 claimed that the school gym was too small to hold the expected 600 people who annually attended the reception.

Mayor Thomas J. McGrath agreed the gym was a little on the stuffy side and he suggested that the affair be held at the state armory on Hancock St. instead.

Quincy Historical Society Honors Doris Oberg

The late Doris S. Oberg, first woman president of the Quincy Historical Society, was honored recently by the Society with a commemorative plaque recognizing her many contributions.

Current Society President Joyce I. Baker presented the plaque to Mrs. Oberg March 11. Mrs. Oberg died March 19.

The plaque will hang in the society's headquarters, the Adams Academy, at first in an exhibit on the society's 100th anniversary and then permanently in a prominent place of honor.

The inscription on the plaque reads: "In honor of her forty years dedicated leadership and service to the Quincy Historical Society by Doris S. Oberg, President, First Vice President, Librarian, Photographic Archivist, Guiding Force in building the Society, this plaque is placed in the Adams Academy March 1, 1993."

Mrs. Oberg's devotion to Quincy history and to the Historical Society in particular brought her into manifold activities and positions of leadership.

She joined the Historical Society in 1954 and in 1957 became its librarian. She held this position until 1982 when she was elected president and served in that capacity until 1985.

Mrs. Oberg initiated the Society's education program conducted in all Quincy public elementary schools and for many years did all the teaching herself. She reorganized and expanded the Society's volunteers and thereby increased the range of Society activities.

Perhaps the single most knowledgeable authority on the history of women in Quincy, Mrs. Oberg lectured extensively on a wide variety of subjects, both locally and throughout the region. In addition to her work at the Historical Society, she was a founding member of and long served as the secretary of Quincy Tourism Association. She served on the Quincy Historic District Commission and on many special committees for historical projects and events.

After leaving the Historical Society's presidency, Mrs. Oberg served as its First Vice President and continued to devote herself to its library.

Society Historian and former President H. Hobart Holly said, "Beyond her many contributions, the inspiration she gave to others is Doris' great legacy to the Quincy Historical Society."

PLAQUE honoring the late Doris Oberg for her 40 years of service and leadership to Quincy Historical Society will hang in the society's headquarters, the Adams Academy, in her memory. Shown with the plaque are, left to right, Quincy Historical Society President Joyce Baker, Mrs. Oberg's daughter, Josephine Ellbourn and Mrs. Oberg's longtime friend and Society volunteer for 35 years, Elinor Rapp. Mrs. Oberg served as President, First Vice President, Librarian, and Photographic Archivist at the Academy. The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Squantum School Students Create Historical Models

As a culminating activity for a unit on the history of Quincy, fourth grade students at the Squantum School recently created models of famous historic sites.

Under the direction of Nancy Gillooly and Ann Chizauskas, models were made of First Parish Church, Adams Academy, Dorothy Quincy Homestead, Granite Railway, Moswetuset Hummock, the Adams' Birthplaces, Hancock St., and Squantum Air Station. Several are on display in the front window of The Quincy Sun, 1372 Hancock St.

Students also wrote reports about John Adams, John Quincy Adams, Abigail Adams, John Hancock, Dorothy Quincy and Mayor James Sheets.

Activities were conducted to supplement a week-long program on Quincy's history provided by Janet Meade of the Quincy Historical Society.

QUINCY RESIDENTS Diana Spyrodinidis and Tom Meade recently went on a ski trip to Waterville Valley, N.H. as part of the Quincy Rotary Club's year-long foreign exchange program. The trip is one of several activities designed to prepare the students for their international experience. Behind them is Gary Mansfield, South Shore Bank Vice President and Rotary Essex ski event chairman.

Quincy Rotary Exchange Students Ski In New Hampshire

This year the Quincy Rotary Club is sponsoring two local students, who will participate in a year-long foreign exchange program.

Diana Spyrodinidis and Tom Meade, both of Quincy, have been selected by Rotary's Eastern States Student Exchange Program Inc. for a year of study overseas. The goal of the program is to foster better international understanding through a year of living and study in a foreign country as a high school student.

Before the students leave this summer they will join in several activities designed to prepare them for their international experience. They recently joined eight students from around the world and four other American students from Southeastern Massachusetts on a ski trip to Waterville Valley New Hampshire.

The student exchange program is open to any qualified local student who is in good health, in the top 25 percent of their class, and willing to spend their junior year of high school overseas. Selection interviews occur in the fall. For more information, contact a high school guidance department or Tim Vickery, exchange committee chairman of the Quincy Rotary Club.

'Invent America' Student Exhibit At Presidents Place April 5-7

More than 700 students in the Quincy Public Schools recently completed an educational program called, "Invent America," at Atlantic Middle School, Montclair School, Parker School and Squantum School.

Approximately 200 of these inventions will be on display at the Presidents Place Galleria Monday, April 5 through Wednesday, April 7, between 9:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. The public is invited to tour the exhibit called "Brighten '93 with Creativity."

Teachers and students in the four Quincy schools worked under the direction of Dr. Delores Gallo from the University of Massachusetts for three months and recently held on-site invention conventions.

OBITUARIES

John C. Hayward, 79

Retired Contractor; Helped To Design Atomic Bomb Camera

A funeral service for John C. "Buddy" Hayward, 79, of Quincy, was held March 27 in the Deware Funeral Home, 576 Hancock St.

Mr. Hayward died March 25 at home.

He was a retired contractor who worked with his sons in the construction business on various buildings in the Boston area.

He formerly worked for a firm designing patterns for a special camera used to test the atomic bomb. Some of his patterns were displayed at the Granite Trust Building in Quincy Center.

During the Depression, he won a pony at the Wollaston Theater and sold rides to children to help support his family.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Nearly every mother or father has shown a child how to draw something. Some things can be portrayed on paper... but not everything. For example, when a child asked his Daddy to draw a picture of love, he replied, "O.K. -but first I want you to draw me a picture of the wind." After a few curved lines were put on the paper, the child exclaimed, "Daddy, I can't draw a picture of the wind. You can't see it. You can only feel it."

Feelings are individual emotions. What one person feels, another may not. One of life's greatest tragedies is to allow a feeling of love die. It sometimes happens. Such sad feelings can often be avoided by an expression of concern and love. Any one capable of feeling is capable of saying so. That sort of feeling always makes the listener and the speaker feel good... very good.

Headache Q & As
All headaches are real. If you suffer from one, you're not alone. This often-asked question about headaches and its answer may help.

Q. Could my headache be due to allergy?

A. There is no scientific evidence to suggest that migraine and other common headache disorders are true allergic conditions. According to experts at the American Council for Headache Education (ACHE), since allergy and headache are highly prevalent in the general population, there's bound to be an overlap between the two. In other words, the same person may suffer from both allergy and migraine. Treating the allergy may not benefit the headache. A word of caution: if your doctor plans to give you allergy injections, let him or her know the list of medications you are taking for migraine control, as there can be some unexpected reactions.

For Cancer Control, Experts Advise Weight Control

During Cancer Control Month, experts are advising some positive changes to something that only you can control--your weight.

"Studies are beginning to pinpoint behaviors that put us at risk for developing cancers," said Dr. George Christakis, medical director for weight watchers. "One behavior that is definitely implicated is the overeating, overdrinking and sedentary lifestyles that may lead to obesity."

According to Christakis, certain nutritional excesses appear to contribute to the disease. These include too many calories, too much fat and saturated fat, too much alcohol, as well as too many smoked and pickled foods. In addition, inadequate amounts of protective nutrients, such as those found in fruits and vegetables, as well as fiber, may also influence the development of cancer.

These nutritional factors add up to an eating style that can also result in overweight, and studies are now underway to determine exactly how excess body weight contributes to cancer risk.

With information currently available, it appears that excess body weight may increase risk for cancers of the breast, endometrium and prostate.

"Your weight is something you can control, so it is within our grasp to take a positive step toward disease prevention," said Dr. Christakis. For a more healthful lifestyle, he recommends a moderate weight loss and weight maintenance plan which emphasizes cereal, grains, legumes, vegetables, fruits, fish, chicken and low-fat meat and dairy products.

Chiropractic Update

by Mark C. Jaehning D.C.

ARM AND SHOULDER PAIN

Arm and shoulder pain can have a number of causes, but the large percentage of cases are caused by misalignment of one or more spinal bones (vertebrae), improper posture, spinal curvatures, occupational stresses, or injury to the spine. Any of these conditions may cause irritation or impingement of the nerves supplying the arms, shoulder, and neck. Arm and shoulder pain does not always mean trouble where the pain is felt.

The degree of pain may vary between slight and intermittent, to excruciating. But do not be fooled by the degree of pain; sometimes, a slight pain goes along with a serious condition while intense pain may be a symptom of nothing more than temporary muscle soreness caused by a weekend of unusual activity.

It should be apparent to anyone that arm and shoulder pain may indicate a serious condition. But whether the problem is serious or not, the pain can become quite debilitating. Fortunately, the doctor of chiropractic is eminently qualified to correct arm and shoulder problems. The chiropractor's education and experience have been directed to just such problems that involve the spine, nerves, muscles and joints of the human body.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment please call Dr. Mark Jaehning, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Rd., North Quincy, MA. 773-4400.

Baseball

Rain Threatens Quincy Opener

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Quincy baseball team was scheduled to open the season today (Thursday) against Boston Latin at Adams Field and was slated to host Brookline Friday at Adams, but it appeared both games might be postponed due to the field conditions following the heavy snows.

The Presidents may have to wait at least until Monday when they are scheduled to play at Taunton in their Old Colony League opener. They are slated to host Weymouth next Wednesday and to play at Bridgewater-Raynham next Thursday.

As of press time Quincy, like all other teams, had been unable to practice outdoors and Coach Bob Sylvia felt the team might not get outdoors until the opening game.

"It will be really tough playing without any outdoor workouts," Sylvia said. "Everyone looks good in the gym but you can't tell anything until you get outside."

Sylvia, hoping to improve upon last year's 9-11 season, is also concerned about playing doubleheaders. "I've heard rumors that we might have to play some doubleheaders," he said. "Last year we had a perfect spring without a single game being called off. It was the first time since I've been coach that happened."

Quincy's pitching staff is led by junior Tom Malvesti, who pitched well last season. The regular shortstop, he turned in some fine pitching performances as a sophomore. He played a prominent role in the Morrisette Legion team winning the state championship with some excellent clutch pitching.

Senior John Russell is back and will also play the outfield and the other two pitching hopefuls are junior Sean MacDonald and another John Russell, a freshman.

back as the starting catcher and is backed up by junior John Gangi, who saw some varsity action in 1992.

Big senior Duane Holmes, who put his 245 pounds to good use last year and was a good power hitter, is the first baseman with junior Jim Menz as backup.

Second base will be a strong point with senior Robbie Kane returning. "There isn't a better second baseman in the league," Sylvia said.

Junior Steve Miller will play shortstop when Malvesti is pitching and Jeff Craig, a senior, is back at third base. Junior Mike Caporale is his backup.

In the outfield senior Noel DiBona, a standout last year, is back in center field.

Other outfielders are juniors Tim Messing, Joe McPhee and Steve Provost and sophomore Dave Cooper, who currently is hampered by a bad back.

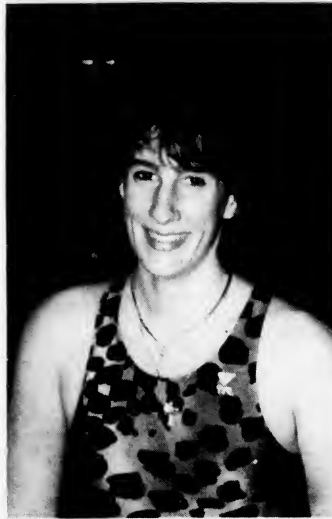

"A lot of the players gained additional experience by playing Legion ball last summer," Sylvia said.

"Malvesti should have an excellent year pitching and I look for Russell to do well. We will be strong defensively and if we hit we should be competitive. Holmes is a fine hitter and Kane and DiBona also hit well. Robbie will be our leadoff batter and I think he will get on base a lot.

"We are in a tough league and we will have to see just how strong the other teams are. Taunton, last year's champion, is a perennial power in baseball and Falmouth, Barnstable and Weymouth are always strong. But we will be competitive. We don't have a lot of quantity but we have quality."

"Taglieri, who played in college, is doing a great job for us," Sylvia said.

team. Liz, a freshman, graduated from North Quincy High and Nancy, a junior, from Abp. Williams.

North Opens Here Monday Against Plymouth

North Quincy baseball coach Leo Donovan hopes the Raiders won't have the same problems as a year ago when they had a frustrating 6-14 season.

Last year North received outstanding pitching from lefty Sean Donovan and righthander Mike Patch, who finished with three wins apiece and were among the leaders in ERA in Eastern Mass.

"Mike had a 1.00 ERA and Sean a 1.25 ERA, and you can't ask for any better than that," said Donovan. "But our hitting was very disappointing and we had a number of errors that hurt us."

North is scheduled to open next Monday against Plymouth at Adams Field and Donovan was worried about getting in indoor practices.

"I think it is possible we will start the season without practicing outdoors," he said. "And you can't tell much about your chances until you get in some outdoor workouts."

Donovan and Patch, both seniors, are back to head a strong pitching staff. They are backed up by junior Danny Duncan, who will also catch and play the outfield, senior Tim Byrne and junior Steve Manning.

"I know Mike and Sean will pitch even better than a year ago and Danny Duncan should do well," Donovan said. "Byrne and Manning also show promise." All are righthanders except Donovan.

Duncan, who will catch when not pitching, will be backed up by seniors John Gladu and Brian Scales.

Charlie Rozanitis is back for his third year at first base and junior Mark Karlson will back him up.

Brian Anderson and junior George Wirtz, who played junior varsity ball last year, are vying for the second base spot. Wirtz also will see action at shortstop.

The starting shortstop will be Adams Calvert, a senior, last year's starter.

Senior Pat Shea, a three-year veteran, is back at third base and is expected to have a banner year.

Save Gas and Money
Shop Locally

by Tony Centorino, Bill Starkie and Kevin McGroarty
AS GOOD AS NEW

After an automobile has sustained damage in a collision, the car owner has the right to expect that the body shop will repair the car "as good as new." This entails repair skills and techniques that are every bit as advanced as today's state-of-the-art cars. Replacement parts should also be every bit as good as the originals. Otherwise, how can one expect to return the car to its original condition with substandard parts? The fact remains, however, that aftermarket parts are available to those who wish to cut the expense of repair work. In some cases, use of aftermarket products invalidates warranties and may compromise the safety of the car. To avoid quality problems, car owners should insist on the use of original equipment manufacturer (OEM) parts and accessories.

HINT: Aftermarket body part may be thinner and way enough to cause improper fit and match with original parts.

It makes good sense to keep every system in your vehicle properly maintained. To help you do this the professional service team at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO is available at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, 843-1550. We are the perfect size to give you and your automobile individual treatment. Hours: Mon-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun 9am-5pm. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

Manganaro In Key Role At BC

Sal Manganaro of North Quincy, a sophomore at Boston College, had a fine season for the Eagles hockey team and he will be a key man in next year's plans.

Manganaro scored his fourth goal of the season in the tie with Providence College that put the Eagles up 2-1. He scored a goal in a 5-4 win at Merrimack Feb. 5, led BC in scoring at the Badger Showdown with two goals and one assist, scored a goal against Moscow Spartak and wound up with four goals and an assist for the year.

Three veterans, Jim Sapienza, a junior, and seniors Dave Reinhart and Mark Cahill, lead the outfielders. All are left handed hitters.

Other outfield hopefuls are seniors Steve Rayne and Danny Burke.

Other candidates are junior infielders Dave Pacino and Lee Hughes.

Most of the players played Legion ball last summer.

"Pitching will be our strong point and I think we will be strong defensively," Donovan said. "Again it will be up to our hitters to come through."

Priscella Team Takes St. John's Lead

Mike Priscella's team has

"Reinhart is an outstanding hitter and Shea also hit well last year. Sapienza came on strong over the second half of the season and Cahill and Calvert should hit well."

Following Monday's scheduled opener, an Old Colony League game, North is slated to play at Falmouth next Wednesday and host Barnstable next Thursday at Adams Field. In addition to its league schedule, North will host Billerica April 13 and play at Billerica April 19.

Dave Perdios is back as the Raiders' junior varsity coach and Jack Outerbridge returns as freshman skipper.

Over a decade of decline

The deterioration of Quincy teachers' salaries

Quincy teachers once were among the best paid in Massachusetts. That meant Quincy could attract and retain the best possible teachers.

But that is not the case today. Over the past 12 years, Quincy's elected officials have allowed teacher salaries to fall to the bottom third of Massachusetts school districts at a time when Americans have realized the critical connection between education and economic prosperity.

Quincy teacher salaries, once among the highest 10% in Massachusetts, have now slid to no better than the 34th percentile. That means they earn less than 66% of all other Massachusetts teachers.

NOTE: Salaries are for teachers with a Masters' degree at the maximum step of the salary schedule. Data provided by the MTA Division of Research.

Quincy teachers are reasonable people

Quincy teachers understand that we are living in tough economic times.

That's why earlier this year Quincy teachers agreed to help the city save an estimated $1.35 million per year in health care insurance costs.

Quincy teachers care

In addition, for the past two years, Quincy teachers, along with their 55,000 colleagues from across the state, have kept the pressure on state legislators and the governor to increase state funding for local public schools. Their hard work produced $819,000 in new state education aid for Quincy this school year (from a total of $186 million statewide) and could mean as much as an additional $3 million over the next six years if the school reform bill pending on Beacon Hill becomes law.

Quincy teachers are working without a contract

Meanwhile, Quincy teachers have been working without a contract for over 7 months. Morale has hit rock bottom. That's the "thank you" Quincy teachers have received for their reasonableness and dedication from the Quincy School Committee and Mayor. In fact, the Quincy School Committee and Mayor have not settled a teacher contract "on time" since 1973!

Quincy teachers ask for your support in their efforts to reach a new agreement.

Quincy teachers deserve a fair contract.

For Outstanding Community Service Stephen Cantelli Honored As Sun Citizen Of The Year

Stephen Cantelli, an innovative fifth grade teacher at the Lincoln-Hancock School who believes in community education—outside as well as inside the classroom—was honored Sunday as the 1992 Quincy Sun "Citizen of the Year."

The eighth annual award was presented at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center attended by approximately 100 family members, friends, city officials and invited guests.

Established in 1985, the award recognizes an individual for outstanding community service or a special achievement.

Sun Publisher Henry Bosworth presented Cantelli, 42, a teacher in the Quincy public school system for 22 years, with a clock plaque as the 1992 award recipient.

"Steve strongly believes in community education and practices what he preaches by bringing members of the community to his classroom to share their experiences and talents with his students. And by taking his students out of the classroom into the community getting them involved in special projects that keep them interested and makes going to school fun and more meaningful," Bosworth said.

Cantelli, who has taught at the Pollard School and Parker School before joining the faculty at Lincoln-Hancock School 11 years ago, was nominated by his wife Julie, who didn't tell him she was doing it. (Cont'd on Page 12)

After Long Delay

Toland Asst. Clerk On 6-0 Council Vote

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Former City Councillor Patricia Toland started a new job Tuesday morning.

More than a month after she was first nominated for the position, Toland was appointed Quincy's assistant city clerk at Monday night's City Council meeting.

The council voted 6-0 to appoint Toland, who resigned from the council in January to pursue the assistant clerk's job, to the position. Councillor Michael Cheney, Ward 2 Councillor Theodore DeCristofaro and Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson voted present on the matter.

Cheney has expressed the opinion that the position should either be abolished or reduced to part-time status in order to save the city money. He objected to the order that would have allowed Toland to be appointed by the council at its March 1 meeting.

The vote was delayed again March 15 upon the request of Council President Charles Phelan, who was unable to attend that meeting but had said he wanted to be present when the matter again came before the council.

Cheney stated Monday night, as he did March 1, that his position has nothing to do with Toland personally. He said he brought up the assistant clerk's position at a May 1992 budget session before any names were considered for the position. Cheney added that he had made a motion regarding the position at the budget session which did not receive a second and never had a chance to argue his position.

Toland, however, pointed out after Monday night's meeting that several names perceived as possibilities for the position, including Toland and Cheney, appeared in The Quincy Sun's "Sunbeams" column in April 1992, a month before the budget sessions.

"There's not a politician in Quincy that doesn't read The Quincy Sun," she said.

Councillor Timothy Cahill also responded at the meeting to Cheney's position, saying he felt it necessary to "defend the integrity of the City Council."

"He (Cheney) made his argument (at the budget meeting), and it didn't convince any councillor to even give him a second on his motion," said Cahill. "Just because it wasn't

Liquor Stores, Bars To Remain Open On Good Friday

By BILL DONCASTER

Quincy bars and liquor stores will remain open all day on Good Friday for the first time in anyone's memory.

Quincy was the last community in the state to place restrictions on alcohol sales in the holy day.

Alcohol sales have traditionally been restricted between the hours of noon and 3 p.m. The decision to reverse the tradition came from a somewhat unwilling board of license commissioners Tuesday who expressed a fondness for the tradition but were bound by the legalities of restricting business for a religious holiday.

"It's sad to see it go," said Joseph Shea, chairman of the license commission. "Personally I'd like to see it remain but we don't have the law to back us up anymore."

that the commission doesn't have the legal authority to ban liquor sales on Good Friday.

Shea's predecessor, John Gillis, had been an ardent supporter of the ban. Shea said he would have liked to see it continue for another year, but felt unable to carry it on.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said, "Since we don't have the authority to restrict liquor sales I don't see we have a choice, although I'd like to see it done on a voluntary basis."

Liquor stores and bars closing voluntarily will be rare. James Nally Jr., owner of Nally's bar on Washington St., also said that it was a nice tradition, but he'll be open. "It was a nice thing to do," he said, "but I guess it was discriminatory." He said he'd been fairly indifferent on the issue, saying it was no problem closing for the three hours in years past but now that the ban is lifted, he'll remain open.

Marcia Fine, of Atlas Liquors on Adams St., says she suspects her store will say open. "Every year when we open the doors at 3 p.m. and there's a line outside. We're the only store on the street closed."

Fr. Cornelius Heery, of Sacred Heart Church and vicar of Quincy, expressed deep regret at the decision. "I understand that we have to live by the law, but I wish we could keep away from all of that on Good Friday," he said.

Fr. William McCarthy, of St. John's Church, expressed similar regret. "It put a little sacredness

Good News:

Potholes Being Filled

The Quincy Department of Public Works will begin a comprehensive program this week repairing roads and potholes throughout the city, announces Mayor James Sheets.

This past winter season was one of the snowiest in recent memory. The abundance of snow and rain and continuous fluctuation in temperature have left many city streets in deplorable condition.

Sheets has instructed DPW Commissioner David Colton to bring in private contractors to assist the DPW crews to make all repairs as soon as possible. DPW crews have already started repair work.

"There is an issue of public safety involved and it is the city's responsibility to make sure the roadways are safe and passable."

Potholes will be dug out and squared off then filled and paved. Manholes and catch basins will be rebuilt.

The city has 221 miles of accepted streets and another 51 miles of private ways. Some private streets will be repaired in extreme cases, Executive Secretary Tom Koch said.

Citizens should report pothole locations to the Department of Public Works, 376-1923.

Board Hears Residents' Noise Complaints At Squantum Firm

By BILL DONCASTER

The Quincy License Board heard complaints from a neighbor of Interstate Distributors, Inc., on Commander Shea Blvd. in Squantum, about late night noise from trucks deliveries, trucks leaving their engines on all night, drivers leaning on their horns, alarm systems going off with, it seemed to him, no one to answer them, that tire repair in the loading bay, and a fork lift that rides over a clanging metal plate as early as 4 a.m.

John Conley, who lives in a 150 unit condominium abutting Interstate Distributors says he's been living with this for years. "Sometimes the noise is so bad the only way my wife can get to sleep is to put in ear plugs. That helped until we found out that with those in she couldn't hear the fire alarm in our building," he said.

Attorney Peter Yilley spoke on behalf of Interstate Distributors. "There are no problems we can't address," he said. But he said that since the company deals in distributing periodicals of a timely manner, there would still be some late night and early morning deliveries.

At that point Matthias Mulvey, member of the license of the board and building inspector, reminded them that there is a city ordinance forbidding the use of machines in a residential area except from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mulvey says he cited the company in 1990 for a violation of that ordinance.

Yilley then said that truck tire repairs would be done inside the building rather than out in the lot, to cut down on noise. Mulvey then reminded Yilley that Interstate was not licensed to be doing repairs anywhere on the property.

Mulvey also said that a portion of the property that the condo rests on once belonged to Interstate Distributors. "They sold it, made a few bucks, knowing it was going to become residential," he said. "They should not be surprised to have to live by residential ordinances."

The board decided that the two parties should make a last effort to reach an agreement among themselves and bring a written agreement back to the board.

Mulvey is waiting to see how Interstate Distributors, Inc., deals with the complaints this time, before he files a complaint with Quincy District Court.

$11,200 Appropriated To Spruce Up Cemeteries

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Hoping to spruce up the city's cemeteries by Memorial Day, the City Council Monday night appropriated $11,200 to the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Department.

The money was taken from the city's Cemetery Improvement Account.

Department Executive Director Raymond Cattaneo told the council that in order to prepare the Mount Wollaston and Pine Hill Cemeteries for Memorial Day (May 31), the department needed $4,200 for six new weed trimmers and a replacement motor for a riding mower.

Cattaneo in a separate request asked for an additional $7,000 for repairs he said were needed on four trucks used at the cemeteries. He added that one of the truck's spark plugs need to be replaced on a daily basis.

City Auditor Robert Foy said there would be no problem taking the money from the Cemetery Improvement Account, which had $22,000 before the two separate appropriations were granted.

Although the appropriations were both passed by unanimous 9-0 votes, Councillor Michael Cheney suggested to Cattaneo that the department should look into buying new equipment. Cheney reasoned that purchasing new equipment would ultimately cost the city less than repairing older equipment on a routine basis.

Executive Secretary Thomas Koch noted that Mayor James Sheets' administration has been working with various department heads on a plan for replacing old equipment and that something could be implemented "in the near future."

Judge Charles Black Appointed First Justice At Quincy District Court

Judge Charles E. Black, a 20-year veteran of the bench, has been appointed first justice of Quincy District Court, announces District Court Chief Justice Samuel E. Zoll.

Judge Zoll notified Quincy District Court Clerk Magistrate Arthur Tobin of the appointment of Judge Black Monday.

Judge Black, 63, of Hingham, was appointed to a five-year term as presiding justice of Quincy District Court. Former first justice of Brockton District Court, Judge Black had been serving as interim presiding justice since the retirement of former Judge Albert Kramer who stepped down from the bench last December.

Judge Black also serves as the regional administrative judge for District Court Region I, located in the southeastern part of the state. In his new capacity, Judge Black relinquishes his position as first justice of the Brockton District Court.

Judge Black, appointed to Brockton District Court by former Gov. Francis W. Sargeant in 1973, became first justice in 1987. He served on the District Court Appellate Division from 1980 to 1989.

Prior to his appointment to the bench, Judge Black served as an attorney, assistant counsel and associate counsel at John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co.

A 1952 graduate of Northeastern University and a 1954 graduate Boston University School of Law, Judge Black has been active in the Army Reserve, where he held

IMPACT QUINCY To Meet In Neighborhoods

In its continuing efforts to involve the entire community in addressing the problems due to alcohol and other drug use in Quincy, IMPACT QUINCY has decided to move its monthly meetings to different sites throughout the city.

The meetings had previously been held at City Hall. The next meeting will be on Wednesday, April 14 at 7 p.m. at Atlantic Middle School.

"We are happy to be bringing our meetings to the community," said Janet Powell, co-chairwoman of IMPACT QUINCY. "Finding new ways to involve every sector of the community in our efforts is essential to addressing these problems. We hope that by going to the neighborhoods, we can make our meetings more accessible."

The decision to hold the first meeting in the Atlantic neighborhood is meant to recognize effort that was recently made to keep a new bar from opening at the site of the former Sagamore Inn.

"The members of the Atlantic neighborhood should be very proud of the work they did," said Mitch Finnegan, IQ Project Director. "Their effort can be an inspiration to the rest of the city in how a community can effectively work to maintain the quality of life that they want for their families. We hope to build on their efforts throughout the city."

The April meeting will devote time to learning more about the efforts in the Atlantic neighborhood.

IMPACT QUINCY: Quincy Coalition for the Prevention of Alcohol and Drug Problems is a community-wide effort to examine the problems within the City related to alcohol and other drug use, and to foster the development of healthy and responsible lifestyles.

Denise Marnell To Serve Two Years With Peace Corps

Denise Marnell of Quincy will leave Saturday, April 10 to begin a two-year stint with the Peace Corps in Cameroon, West Africa, where she will work in the aquaculture program.

"I will provide farmers with an alternative source of income and food. This will be done through construction and stocking of ponds with fish, I hope to teach the farmers the benefits of the fish as a food source and how to market it," Marnell said.

Marnell graduated in 1992 from the University of Massachusetts with a bachelors degree in botany and a minor in zoology. She said she joined the Peace Corps to experience a different culture while helping others.

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Saying he wanted to help produce revenue for the city, Ward 1 Councilor Peter Kolson Monday night introduced a resolve calling for the institution of a Quincy Retail Store that would sell surplus items from all city departments.

Kolson's proposal calls for the cooperation of all departments heads in contributing items such as old parking meters, fire hydrants, street signs, and "just about anything you can think of."

The items would have historical and/or sentimental value to those who purchase them, Kolson said. He added that the creation of such a store is something that would be "fun to do."

Although a site has not yet been chosen for the store, Kolson said that once established, it would be open to the public once a week. Kolson noted that he would like to see the store become a reality "as soon as possible."

The council, including Councilor Michael Cheney, reacted favorably to Kolson's proposal.

"I compliment you for your innovativeness," said

Cheney.

Kolson said Mayor James Sheets is "wholeheartedly behind it (the resolve) 100 percent" and said the proposal should be available in the form of an order at the council's next meeting.

A Political Lullaby?

Election Year '93 right now is shaping up as a political lullaby.

If you like your politics red hot, this one might put you to sleep.

When Tim Cahill decided not to take on Mayor James Sheets this fall, it stopped a few musical chairs.

Sheets, it appears, will go unchallenged again, the first mayor in the city's history to twice seek re-election without opposition.

If Cahill had run for mayor it would have made a main ballot attraction and opened his council at-large seat with either Ward 3's Larry Chretien or Ward 5's Charles Phelan making a move on it.

And that would have created at least one vacant ward seat.

But now not too much action is expected on the City Council front this year.

Joseph LaRaia who was named to fill the unexpired term of Councilor Pat Toland, who resigned to become assistant city clerk, will probably run for that seat this fall. Which will further deter potential candidates waiting in the wings for an opening.

LaRAIA

George Miller who has made successful bids for state representative and councillor at-large, might make another run at-large.

But there's speculation he is now looking at the Ward 2 picture and might challenge incumbent Ted DeCristofaro who will be seeking his seventh term in that seat. Miller would have his work cut out for him as DeCristofaro and Ward 2 are virtually synonymous.

At this point there seems to be only one sure ward council contest. That's in Ward 4 where incumbent Tom Fabrizio will be challenged by Mike D'Amico. The latter is only 18 but is politically active and astute. He is expected to make an official announcement right after Easter.

FABRIZIO

There doesn't seem to be any challengers stirring in the other wards at the present time.

Chretien, Phelan, Ward 1's Peter Kolson, and Ward 6's Bruce Ayers could be unopposed.

Most of the action this year may be in the School Committee campaign.

Incumbents Frank Santoro, Peggy King and Ron Mariano are due up for re-election. Santoro has told friends he probably will step down which would create a vacant seat.

There are already three candidates: John Spada and Ron McCarthy and Sean Barry. If Santoro does vacate the seat there'll be more candidates getting in the race.

Those running will have to keep the voters interested or this could be one of the lightest election turnouts in many years.

Without a mayoral contest—which is an election's main event—and not many City Council races, voters are apt to stay home.

But it's still early and things can change.

Nomination papers won't be available until May 17. Last day to take them out is July 23 and the deadline for filing them is July 27.

The preliminary election (if there's enough candidates to hold one) will be Sept. 14 and the final election Nov. 2.

FORMER SENATOR Paul Harold was honored at the ground breaking for a new Islamic Center of New England's future home in Sharon.

HOW GOOD ARE you when it comes to names? Not remembering them, but creating them.

Bill Morrill, president of Creative Fairs, Inc. is planning a large $1 million family entertainment center in Quincy. And, is looking for the right name for it.

The center will cater to the younger set—toddlers to pre-teen—and feature amusement rides, a merry-go-round, mini-ferris wheel, ski-ball, a children's corner and a play-area for physical fitness.

If a youngster comes up with the best name, he or she will be the guest of honor at a party at the center and will be able to invite 25 classmates or friends to help celebrate.

If a parent wins the contest, he or she will be invited to bring as many youngsters.

You can forward your suggested name for the entertainment center to Creative Fairs, Inc., P.O. Box 15, Quincy, MA 02265.

OOPS! In last week's column we said that Mae D'Angelo and Gert Barry are co-chairmen of the Quincy High School Class of 1943 reunion coming up this year. Shame on us. They're actually heading up the North Quincy High School 1943 class reunion. Sorry, about that, ladies.

OBSERVATION: We're not sure whether it belongs to Quincy or Braintree but there's a crater-like pothole on Independence Ave. near the Braintree-Quincy line. Maybe one or the other could fill it before some car disappears in it.

61 Commended For Adopt-An-Island Program

By MICHAEL WHALEN
City Councillor Timothy Cahill Monday night awarded 61 commendations to groups and individuals for their participation last year in the city's Adopt-An-Island program.

As a token of the city's appreciation, each individual or group was given both a commendation and a small tulip plant for taking part in the program.

"Adopt-An-Island is one of the most successful programs we've ever run in the city," said Cahill. "I think last year was our most successful year, I'm not sure, but (Park Department Executive Secretary) Ray Cattaneo can confirm it."

The commendations mark the end of the fourth year of Adopt-An-Island, which was created by former Mayor Francis McCauley during his administration.

According to numbers Cahill gave The Quincy Sun last year, around 25 islands were adopted in the first year of the program and about 35 in the second. Fifty groups and individuals received commendations last year for their participation.

"I thank you, and the council thanks you," Cahill told this year's recipients. "This helps to beautify the city."

The 61 receiving commendations Monday night were:

Quincy Post Office, Joyce Family, Philip Kenney, Groleau's Landscape Contractors Inc., Curry Hardware, St. John's Girl Scout Troop 4205, Paul Harold, Time

Out Toys, Ayers Bros. Inc., Keohane Funeral Service, Early American Restaurant, National Fire Protection Association, Mary Collins, Ward 2

Rob Ross, A.H. Campbell, Trucks of

Quincy, Brill Family, Germantown Children's Chorus, Don Uvanite, Students of Snug Harbor School, Connolly Auto Sales, South Shore Mental Health, Georgia Peirce, Lawn Salon, AARP Chapter 4097, Mary and Peter Frederickson, Richard Barry, William S. White, Bagen Family, Point-Webster, Beechwood Community Life Center, Michael Morrissey, Quincy Public Schools Student Union, Lawrence Chretien, Montclair-Wollaston Neighborhood Association President Jeff Graeber.

Cattaneo, who was on hand for the presentations, said there are still a few more islands available to be adopted for the start of the program's new year, which begins in May. Those interested in adopting an island in the City of Quincy should call Cattaneo at 376-1251.

Quincy's Yesterdays City Council Votes Down Hillside School

The City Council, flying in the face of popular opinion, voted 6-0 to eliminate the proposed Hillside School from a construction program, thus killing the School Committee's two-school plan.

Councillor David S. McIntosh made the motion that no school be built on the Hillside site and that a large school be constructed at a location on Furnace Brook Parkway.

Councillor Carl W. Anderson seconded the motion and they were joined by Councillors David J. Crowley, Frank E. MacDonald, Alfred E. Helfrich and Amelio Della Chiesa. Councillor Edna B. Austin was out of town.

Atty. Paul Duffey, a member of the School Committee, said a petition campaign by 10 taxpayers may be put together to obtain a court order forcing the council to approve construction of the school.

WOLLASTON MAN ACQUITTED

George D. O'Brien Sr. of Hillside Ave., Wollaston, was acquitted of complicity in the $681,700 armored car robbery in Danvers on March 25, 1952, by a jury that took an hour and 29 minutes to reach a verdict.

In an unprecedented move, Judge George C. Sweeney announced that he personally did not agree with the decision and he polled each of the 12 jurors asking if they had been intimidated. Each answered, "No, sir."

Judge Sweeney explained that Loring C. Briggs of Rutland, the original jury foreman, had been excused of service after he reported his wife was near collapse after receiving a threatening telephone call.

METER EXTENSION PROTESTED

Owners of the downtown Quincy theaters registered their opposition to a proposed ordinance before the City Council that would extend the effective time of parking meters in the city from 6 pm to 9 pm on all week nights.

"It will ruin my business," said Leonard Goldberg, one of the owners of the Adams Theater on School St.

"It will mean that theater patrons not only have to drop in the first coin, but they will also have to leave the theater every hour and drop in another."

Easter Bread

It was always a tradition for our mother to make Easter bread, a round ring of anise flavored bread surrounded by a few eggs. There was always a special drawer where she kept all of her pastries ready for the holiday.

This week, I have made a few of those anise rings which are very simple to do. I first started out making just one, then I doubled the recipe and made three medium sized ones, plus a strip of biscotti which this dough is also good for. Today's recipe is for one large one with three eggs on top.

Easter Bread

- 1 stick of margarine
- 2 beaten eggs
- 2 1/2 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 1/2 teaspoons anise extract
- 3/4 cup sugar
- 2 1/2 cups flour
- 1/2 cup milk

Cream the margarine with the sugar. Add the eggs and beat for a couple of minutes. Then add the flour alternately with the milk and the anise and beat until smooth. When the dough no longer feels sticky it can be worked on. If it is sticky, add a little more flour. Shape into a circle and add the uncooked eggs on top placing a strip of dough securing the egg on both sides. I used three eggs for the large one.

Place on a slightly greased cookie sheet in a 350-degree oven for about 25 to 30 minutes. Here is the recipe for the icing which goes with it.

Icing

- 2 tablespoons powdered sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon anise extract
- a few drops of water

Mix altogether adding more sugar until it is smooth enough to brush over the ring. Sprinkle pastel colored candy dots over them. When I finished making one and icing and sprinkling it, I knew Easter was just around the corner. Happy Easter!

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

20 QHS Students Study Government In Washington, D.C.

Twenty Quincy High School students recently traveled to Washington, D.C. to learn about government through a program offered by the non-profit, Virginia-based Close Up Foundation.

The trip was a true "hands-on" learning experience for the students, according to QHS U.S. History teacher David Lussier. The students listened to speakers at various federal buildings, monument sites, and their hotel, Lussier said.

Among the highlights of the trip were the opportunities to meet Congressman Gerry Studds and Senator Edward Kennedy. Some of the students even had to chance to shake President Bill Clinton's hand.

The students were joined by Lussier and QHS U.S. History teacher Jack Scanlan, who together coordinated the trip. The program was open to all interested QHS students, according to Scanlan.

North Quincy High School U.S. History Tom Bourque was also part of the group, Scanlan said, because it is hoped that North can also be part of the Close Up program in the near future.

Scanlan added that he wished to thank Mayor James Sheets for raising $12,111 through private contributions to help fund the trip. In addition to the mayor's efforts, participating students paid $200 apiece for the experience, Scanlan said.

Lussier also praised Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, who were in Washington at the time, for their part in getting students close enough to meet Clinton.

The Close Up Foundation, founded in 1971, has helped bring more than 335,000 students and teachers from across the country to Washington to learn about the democratic process and the role of the individual.

Protecting Your Skin From The Sun

New York, N.Y., (NAPS)—There's more than a glimmer of good news about the bright idea of protecting yourself from the sun's ultraviolet rays.

Fashion seems to have taken the health warnings to heart. Slathering on baby oil and sunning for hours with a reflecting visor is out. Tanning lotions of SPF 15 and higher are in.

Now, here are more hints to help you survive the harsh, drying effects summer with its sun, swimming and frequent showering can have on your skin.

- Limit sun exposure to early morning and late afternoon when the sun's damaging ultraviolet rays are not as strong. Gradually build your tan, starting with no more than ten to 20 minutes per day.

- Apply a suntan lotion with an SPF of at least 15, reapply after swimming. Watch out for indirect exposure to the sun, reflected off sand and water. Ultraviolet rays also penetrate clouds, so cover up even on overcast days.

- Wash with a mild cleansing bar. Four out of five dermatologists and pediatricians recommend Dove, a mild, non-soap cleansing bar that contains one-quarter moisturizing cream. Extensive clinical research over the past three decades supports this medical wisdom. In fact, in a study that specifically examined subjects with sunburn, Dove caused less redness and was rated as milder and smoother to the skin than well-known mild soap. After showering, apply a moisturizer.

- Drink plenty of water to restore moisture during and after sunbathing or exercising. Caffeine and alcohol are drying agents and should be consumed in moderation, if at all, especially during hot weather.

- Maintain a balanced diet that supplies essential vitamins. Eat high fiber foods and lots of fresh fruits and vegetables daily to ensure that your skin gets vital fluids and nutrients it needs to stay smooth and supple. Vitamin A, found in dairy products and carrots is particularly important to the skin.

- Get enough sleep. Fatigue is damaging to the skin because it impedes circulation.

More Questions About Acupuncture

There are one million acupuncture practitioners in China, attending to the needs of over one billion people. Acupuncture has been popular for 3000 years, helping billions of patients throughout its history. The Chinese government has taken the sensible attitude that if acupuncture works it deserves to be practiced even at the risk of demolishing established medical theories. Acupuncture is recognized as an effective therapy and dispensed together with western medicine.

You may have seen our previous column,

"Questions About Acupuncture." Many people have found it interesting and have asked for more details.

How Often Do I Need Treatment? Most patients with chronic conditions require treatments a week and, as they improve, at longer periods. Certain problems, such as hypoglycemia, may need more frequent sessions.

How Many Treatments? This varies greatly, depending on patient and illness. If one were to average out all cases, it would come to about six treatments per patient. Some will be well after one treatment, while others may need more than six if they have an old chronic condition.

How Long Until I Get Better? An illness will often need years to become established in a person. This same patient may become disenchanted and decide to end acupuncture after three treatments if no quick results can be seen. It is possible that he could have found relief after perhaps another two or three treatments. One should give acupuncture a chance and not break off therapy until 5 to 6 treatments have been given. Sometimes, progress will not be apparent for a week or more after treatment.

How Long Will Improvement Last? Frequently, when the patient notices an improvement for the first time, it may last for only a few hours or a day. This is an excellent sign of progress. Additional treatments will extend this period until relief lasts for months or becomes permanent.

For more information, contact Acupuncture Associates of the South Shore, 12 Dimmock St., Quincy, MA, 01757.

Nutrition And Your Health

Proper nutrition is important to everyone, but for those diagnosed with diabetes, it is a vital necessity. When you have diabetes, what and when you eat affect the level of glucose (sugar) in your blood and how your body responds to diabetes medications. Effectively managing your diet can help regulate blood levels of insulin and glucose. A lack of attention to proper diet can lead to abnormal high or low blood glucose and other serious complications, including:

- Blindness
- Kidney Disease
- Heart Disease
- Stroke

Today there are more than 14 million people in the United States with diabetes, which is a chronic disease that has no cure. Even though at least one person is diagnosed every 60 seconds, more than half those affected are not aware that they have the disease.

Scientists at Ross Products Division, Abbott Laboratories, a world leader in medical nutritional products, have developed a product called Glucerna®. Glucerna is a vanilla-flavored liquid product providing complete balanced nutrition for patients with abnormal glucose tolerance. Consult with your physician about incorporating Glucerna into your diabetic diet as a meal supplement in the amount that's right for you. Glucerna is available or can be ordered in drugstores. In addition, to order Glucerna or request product information call toll-free 1-800-544-7495.

OFFICE ACHES AND PAINS

If you work behind a desk, chances are you are no stranger to neck and back pain. Being sedentary restricts blood circulation, which keeps muscles from getting the nutrition they need and impairs the elimination of waste products. Slouching forward, twisting the head to read, and cradling a telephone between shoulder and neck make matters worse. The result is stiff muscles and joints that are extremely vulnerable to injury. If you must sit for extended periods, find a flexible-back chair that supports your spine and allows you to rest your feet at a comfortable 90-degree angle. Most importantly, get up and move around every half hour or so. If pain persists, don't hesitate to seek your doctor's help.

just as likely to suffer back injuries as a construction worker who does heavy lifting.

Ask your doctor what steps you can take to feel better and stay healthier at the end of a long work day. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can help prevent heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. We are dedicated to the compassionate and caring practice of medicine. When treating patients, I always try to consider how I would like myself, my wife and children or my parents to be treated by a doctor. Office hours are by appointment at 101 Adams St., Suite 24, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals. Have a Happy Easter!

Toland Voted Asst. Clerk By Council

done in Quincy doesn't mean my colleagues and I haven't examined the position. My personal opinion is that we have kept an open mind on this issue."

Cahill said he felt the assistant clerk's position was needed by the city and that Toland was the right choice for the job. Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien, Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio and Phelan expressed similar sentiments. Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers also voted for Toland.

Councillor Joseph LaRaia, who was named last month to replace Toland on the council, drew a few laughs when he stated his position.

"I have no reservations about voting for Pat Toland," he said. "I have no reason not to support her. The only reservation I have voting on it is that the only reason I'm here is because of her departure."

DeCristofaro said that he did not "feel it's proper to elevate anyone from the City Council" to the assistant clerk's position. He added that "I feel very badly that I have to take this position," adding that he has always liked and had great respect for Toland.

Kolson made no comment on his position during the meeting but expressed similar sentiments afterwards, saying he felt "very awkward" about choosing a colleague for the position.

Toland in the past also had received opposition from District 925, a labor organization that said the job is a union position and should have been posted so that others could have applied for it.

City Solicitor Stephen McGrath, however, had told the council in a written opinion that the city ordinance creating the position supersedes the union contract and that City Clerk Joseph Shea, who had pursued the nomination of Toland, should be allowed to choose whomever he wanted for the position.

Toland said after the meeting that the issue of any opposition she received is "a dead horse now" and added that she was "very excited" about the prospects of starting work at the position the following day.

Quincy To Observe 1993 National Building Safety Week

The City of Quincy will join units of state and local governments across American in observing 1993 National Building Safety Week April 11-17, announces Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey.

Observation of Building Safety Week started in 1980 to publicize the importance of construction codes and their administration by units of government. National Building Safety Week has also heightened recognition of the role professional code officials play in assuring safe construction of buildings of various types and sizes.

"The importance of construction codes and their enforcement is often overlooked until some great fire or other construction-related tragedy occurs and shocks people's consciousness," Mulvey said.

Code administration in the City of Quincy is carried out by the city's Building Department. For example, last year the department reviewed building plans and inspected construction in the city for 1,530 construction projects.

This year's National Building Safety Week is endorsed by such organizations as Building Officials and Code Administration (BOCA) International, the Council of America Building Officials (CABO) and the National Conference of States on Building Codes and Standards (NCSBCS).

The City of Quincy is a member of BOCA International, which was founded in 1915 and is the nation's original professional association of construction code officials.

The Quincy Building Department is available to the Quincy residents for assistance or instruction regarding building permits, code interpretation, zoning questions, flood plain information and other inquiries related to construction in the city.

The department is also conducting public safety presentations to the fifth grade children at schools throughout the city, Mulvey said.

Stephen Cantelli Honored As Quincy Sun's Citizen Of The Year

"He has been a wonderful and dedicated teacher for the past 22 years," she said in the nomination. "I can think of no finer friend of the young people in Quincy than he."

Reading the inscription on the plaque, Bosworth said Cantelli is a "dedicated teacher who inspires and motivates his students through his innovative teaching and community activism."

Bosworth said the clock symbolizes "all the time you have given to your students and to your community--and are still giving."

In accepting the award, Cantelli thank the Sun, the judging committee and his wife who nominated him and for those who were a part of the tribute.

"I come here today filled with gratitude to the people of Quincy and I probably am the luckiest man in this city. I have a lovely wife, we've been blessed with three wonderful children, I have a nice home here in West Quincy and I go to a job that I love every day."

"Throughout my teaching career, I have tried to impress upon my students the importance of giving back something to the community that they live in. I have tried to teach them that we're all connected to one another and that when we reach out to help other people, we enrich our own lives as well.

"But I think that my best work has come from showing young people that they are special people just because they are who they are."

Cantelli expressed his gratitude to the students he has taught and the teachers and administrators he has worked with, especially the late Frank Keegan, former principal of the Pollard School.

"Mr. Keegan cared deeply, not only for each student and teacher at the Pollard, but he also was very concerned about the well being of each person in the community."

"I would like to thank him today. I know if he were here, he would be very proud that one of his teachers is standing here today."

Cantelli also singled out his former teaching partner Marcia McCarthy. "From early on, I learned that nothing great is ever accomplished in this profession without an abundance of energy. Marcia has enough energy for a dozen people."

"The reason we have blue ribbon schools in Quincy is because of teachers like Marcia McCarthy."

In addition, Cantelli thanked his friends at Quincy Neighborhood Housing, the Ward 4 Neighborhood Association, and his fellow teachers at the Lincoln-Hancock School.

"I have had a happy, rewarding, wonderful 22 years teaching in Quincy public schools and I look forward to the next 22 years," he said.

A companion award, a special front page of The Quincy Sun detailing Cantelli's selection as the 1992 Citizen of the Year and highlighting the teacher's accomplishments, was presented by Sun Editor Robert Bosworth.

Besides the Sun awards, Cantelli received a State House citation from Rep. Steve Tobin and a City Council commendation from Ward 4 Councillor Tom Fabrizio.

During his teaching career and years of community activism, Cantelli has achieved numerous accomplishments.

For example, for the sixth consecutive year, Cantelli's class will plant a large vegetable garden and flower garden on school grounds and donate all the produce to Father Bill's Shelter.

Mayor James Sheets, who was among several guest speakers and presenters Sunday, recalled when he first met Cantelli as a Ward 4 councillor. Sheets said Cantelli came to him with the idea of the garden which needed city assistance, such as watering lines, to get the program up and running.

"I knew, when that request came in, that whether that project would be successful or not would be determined by the real character of the man who brought the program because out there in that isolated spot, and just about anybody could get to it and destroy it, or steal the fruit and vegetables that would come through months of hard work by the kids, and I knew that if the young people respected Steve Cantelli, they will respect the garden."

"The garden has been an enormous success out there in isolation. And I knew that Steve Cantelli as a young man has the full confidence of the young people and the people in this community and that's why the program has been a success," Sheets said.

Cantelli has accomplished much more during his tenure as a Quincy school teacher.

Last year, he and his class won top honors nationwide from the Scholastic News in its "Kids Care About Their Classroom Community" contest.

The class was honored for repairing the badly damaged gravestone of Quincy Civil War veteran James Ryan who lost his life at age 17.

Cantelli reunited the Ryan family and held a special service for the young veteran at St. Mary's Cemetery and the Common St. home where he lived as a boy. Cantelli donated the $1,000 contest award to the New England Shelter for Homeless Veterans in Boston.

Cantelli is chairman of the Quincy Granite Memorial Statue Committee. His classes have studied Quincy's famed granite industry and are raising money to erect a stone monument in Southwest Quincy in memory of the many granite workers who once lived in that area and worked the Quincy granite quarries.

Cantelli helps promote multiculturalism in the schools by teaching Spanish to his class. He has also voluntarily tutored children and adults in English and has helped as an interpreter for Quincy Hispanic residents.

Promoting the performing arts in Quincy, Cantelli each year directs and produces a show for the Lincoln-Hancock community.

On Veterans Day, Cantelli organizes a party for Quincy men and women veterans and Gold Star Mothers. His students make posters, write letters and learn about the sacrifices of Quincy's veterans.

On Memorial Day, his classes decorate veterans' graves with flags and flowers. The students also bring Christmas gifts to veterans at a Boston shelter.

Cantelli has organized and has run in an annual kids two-mile road race through the streets of South Quincy with money raised going to Father Bill's Shelter.

Outside the classroom, Cantelli also gives freely of his time. He helps the Quincy Recreation Department in the summers, taking youngsters on "history hikes" of Quincy and Boston.

For 12 years, he has volunteered to serve dinner once a month at 1000 Southern Artery. He helps direct and teaches in the Lincoln-Hancock after-school program providing after-school recreational activities on a regular basis for approximately

Several other present and past city officials and school administrators commended Cantelli at the reception.

Former Mayor Francis McCauley, who served as School Committee chairman during his eight years in office, saluted Cantelli as well as Quincy's other educators. With teachers like Cantelli, McCauley said a state education reform proposal to allow students to attend schools outside the community would hardly impact Quincy.

"I don't think, based upon what I've seen, not only Steve Cantelli but many other educators in this city, we aren't going to have many kids leaving our city to go elsewhere because there ain't many other places you can get a better education than in the city of Quincy," McCauley said.

School Supt. Gene Creedon said Cantelli is an example of a teacher who "gives, gives, gives and who does so many wonderful things with children. Steve Cantelli, and so many of our teachers, care for children from all backgrounds, that as a teacher, he is always willing and able to lend a helping hand, whatever the circumstance.

Creedon said Cantelli understands and helps

"(Steve) knows some children's nightmares come in the daytime. Some of whom go to bed hungry and cry themselves to sleep; others who live in rooms which have no heat."

"Steve has provided for these kinds of children, year in and year out," Creedon said. "Steve, Mr. Cantelli, has offered his hand so often that no child is behind."

* A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

All around us we see the resurgence of life. The trees are budding, the spring flowers are blooming, and the grass is not going to slow down. People are busy at all kinds of tasks; cleaning lawns, washing windows, planting geraniums, begonias and bulbs for later. Life is bursting out all over. It's a wonderful time to be alive and to be able to express a hopefulness that is so desperately needed in our world today.

In the celebration of Easter, we are offered the miracle of Resurrection. All things become new in Jesus Christ, not in the cycle of nature; but in the arrival of a new approach to living made possible by the conquering of evil, death and darkness through that new person for all, God's Son, Jesus Christ.

On this side of the Resurrection there is so much that is new; hope over despair, joy over anguish, love over hate, peace over turmoil. This is what is so tremendous. In Jesus Christ, God makes all things new. Let us on our journey of faith see the new things of life...

8 Inducted Into QHS Hockey Hall Of Fame

By TOM SULLIVAN

Eight former players were added to the Quincy High Hockey Hall of Fame at the recent fourth annual awards banquet at the Quincy Sons of Italy Hall.

The new inductees are Jack Burke, 1961; John "Boobie" Chiavaroli, 1962; Gene Nattie, 1962; Mike Haynes, 1964; Mike Furey, 1979; Chuckie Peterson, 1970; Kevin Craig and Ted Walsh, both 1982.

Former coach Bill Hutchinson made the presentations to Burke, Nattie, Haynes, Furey, Peterson and to Chiavaroli's widow and daughter.

Burke, Chiavaroli, Nattie, and Haynes played for Hutchinson, who in December received the prestigious George L. Shiebler Award from the Eastern College Athletic Conference (ECAC).

The presentations to Craig and Walsh were made by Jack Crowley, a Hall of Fame member, former Quincy assistant coach and now head hockey coach at Marshfield High.

Hutchinson suffered a stroke and is confined to a wheelchair but has attended all of the Hall of Fame banquets.

"Nothing can keep me from attending these banquets," he said. "It is wonderful to meet all the former players, especially those I coached. It is a real pleasure for me to be here."

Hutchinson always steals the show with his inspiring talks, spiced with humor. He hasn't lost his sense of humor.

Hutch, former ECAC hockey official who later served as the ECAC's supervisor of hockey officials, coached Quincy Arena for several years, winning several league championships.

On a somber note, it was announced that Chiavaroli died just three weeks before the banquet.

Special presentations went to Beverly Reinhardt, manager of the Quincy Youth Arena and the first woman to be so honored, and Ace Abou, former Booster Club president.

"Beverly certainly deserves this award," said Hall of Famer George Peachey. "She has worked awfully hard with the Quincy and North Quincy hockey teams through the years and has been very cooperative with us."

Quincy and North play their home games at the Youth Arena.

Peachey introduced Jeff Craig, captain of this year's Quincy High hockey team; an Old Colony League all-star and one of the top scorers in the league.

Quincy principal LLOYD Hill spoke and congratulated the inductees.

Many prestigious Hall of Famers were present and among those attending were Tom Benson, a director of the Youth Arena and father of Tom Benson, who coached the North Quincy hockey team to the state Div. 1 semifinals this season.

Also present was Chris Barrett, president of the Hockey Boosters Club.

Kevin Lewis is the Hall's board of directors chairman, Peachey is co-chairman. The other members of the committee are Bob Carroll, Ralph Younie, Russ Erikson, Brian Berton and Richard Vacca.

Dave Perdios and Pat Clifford. Flaherty had two assists and Rick Joyce and Clifford had one each. Mike Manganaro and Jim Mulaney scored for Flibotte's and Gerry DeLuca and Rick Patten had assists. In the playoff openers Beacon played Flibotte's and South Shore Bearing met Adams Sports.

Grumpy's Pub edged Flibotte's Auto Sales, 3-2, on goals by John Andrews.

Rich Gibbs and Mike Owings one each. For Beacon, Skip Manganaro, Bruce Connell and Art Boyle had the goals.

UP AGAINST THE SIDEWALL

Nearly all that a consumer needs to know about tire size is written clearly on the sidewall. The most pervasive sizing system is the "P Metric" system which is represented by a sidewall listing such as "P195/75R14". The "P" stands for passenger. If a light truck tire is being considered, look for the letters "LT." The number "195" represents the tire's sectional width in millimeters, or the sidewall to sidewall width of the tire as measured from its widest point when mounted. The number "75" refers to the tire's aspect ratio, or the ratio between its sidewall height and sectional width (the smaller the number, the shorter the tire). "R" indicates that the tire is radial, and "14" gives the rim's diameter in inches.

HINT: Changing to tires of lower aspect ratio generally improves the handling characteristics of the car.

Residents Divided On Newport Ave. Rezoning

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Residents were divided at two joint public hearings held Monday night by the City Council and the Planning Board regarding the proposed rezoning of properties on Newport Avenue.

Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien has proposed rezoning Stop & Shop on Newport Avenue from Business B to Planned Unit Development (PUD) and Pneumatic Scale, also on Newport Avenue, from Industrial B to PUD.

PUD would allow residents in the neighborhood to have a say in what happens at the sites, Chretien said, by making the City Council the special permit granting body with authority over the properties.

"PUD offers a chance for public process," said Chretien. "A new business (interested in the properties) would have to go to the Planning Board first, then the City Council."

The elected council, Chretien said, would give residents a voice as to what would happen on the properties.

Residents' opinions differed over whether the properties should be rezoned. Some, such as Jeff Graeber of 157 Holbrook Rd., felt PUD was a good idea.

"We want community input," said Graeber, who serves as president of the Montclair-Wollaston Neighborhood Association. "This (PUD) is the best way to maximize the input."

Others, such as Quincy Citizens Association Secretary Dorothy Kelly of 108 Davis St., said the zoning should be left alone.

"Letting the zoning classification stand would take politics out," said Kelly, who added that she was speaking for QCA President Arthur Chandler of 320 Belmont St. "What the city is doing is telling unions and blue collar workers is 'we have no room for you.'"

Representing Stop & Shop, which plans to build a Super Stop & Shop at the Pneumatic Scale site, Atty. David Mahoney of 308 Victory Rd. spoke in favor at the first public hearing and against at the second. Mahoney said Stop & Shop is willing to cooperate with the city if it wishes to rezone Pneumatic Scale, but added that since no major changes are planned at the current Stop & Shop site it should be left as it is.

At Chretien's request, both hearings were recessed, rather than adjourned, so that more community input on the matter can be received in the future.

Trolley License Granted For Tourism Promotion

In an attempt to help promote tourism, the City Council Monday night granted a 60-day license to the Old Town Trolley Company to operate in the City of Quincy.

The company had petitioned the council for permission to operate motor vehicles for the carriage of passengers-for-hire over the city's public ways.

Councillor Timothy Cahill said the council had been asked, if possible, to grant the license before April 18, when the new National Park Service Visitors' Center opens at Presidents Place.

"We don't meet again until April 20," noted Cahill.

Executive Secretary Thomas Koch stressed that the Park Service, not the city, will be contracting with the trolley company.

Cahill said he was in support of the company's petition.

"This allows the trolley the right to drive over our city streets at no city expense," said Cahill. "It's part of the mayor's plan (to promote tourism)."

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson agreed. "I support the measure," said Kolson. "It's a worthwhile tool for tourists."

Cahill, however, said he was "uncomfortable" with the idea of granting a license Monday night, saying he did not know the full details of the trolley plan.

Councillor Michael Cheney, who said he was "100 percent" in support of the petition but also had questions, suggested that a license be granted for a period of 60 days. He said that the two-month period should be enough time to answer any questions from councillors and that the trolley company could always be granted a permanent license after that.

Koch said he was "sure the (mayor's) administration would agree" with the 60-day period.

The route of the trolleys will include:

On Hancock St. between Dimmock and School Sts., on School St. between Hancock and Franklin Sts., on Franklin St. from School St. to the birthplace of the Adamses, on Temple St. from Hancock to Washington Sts., on Washington St. from Temple to Adams Sts., and on Adams St. from Hancock St. to the Adams Mansion.

School crisis approaches

An open letter to Quincy citizens

Contract negotiations between Quincy teachers and the Quincy School Committee have reached the crisis stage. The facts are as follows:

- Quincy teachers have worked over six months without a contract.
- Quincy teacher salaries have steadily declined for the past decade relative to teacher salaries across the state.
- The city of Quincy contributes less of each budget dollar to public schools than neighboring cities and towns.

By contrast, in the 1970s, Quincy invested in its public schools ... and its teachers. We attracted and kept the best educators because our school committee recognized the importance of teacher compensation. Our city's reputation as a pro-education community was well-deserved.

Today, while Quincy attempts to improve the city's image with downtown revitalization, a "Cleaner, Greener Quincy," and development of the shipyard, teachers are considered a secondary concern. But the re-building of Quincy cannot be accomplished when public schools receive only 38¢ of every city budget dollar. Ultimately, school quality translates into property values — one way or the other.

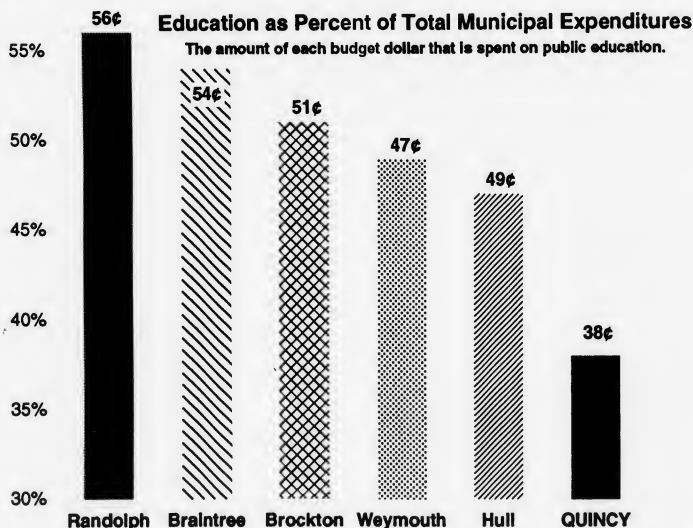

We believe that it is time for the Quincy School Committee to make the case for increased public school funding and to recognize that it must fairly compensate Quincy teachers.

Time is running out. Please call the school committee persons listed below and urge them to settle a fair contract with Quincy teachers. Thank you.

Senator Kennedy Keynote Speaker

Adams Historic Site Visitors Center Opens Sunday

The National Park Service (NPS) announces the seasonal opening of the Adams National Historic Site (Adams NHS) Sunday, April 18, at 2 p.m.

Two new features of the visitors service program are the addition of a site visitor center at Presidents Place, 1250 Hancock St. in Quincy, and state and National Park Service Rangers conducting tours of United First Parish Church, where Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives are interred in the family crypt.

A ceremony for the opening of the visitor center will be held at 2 p.m. Participating in the ceremony will be Senator Edward Kennedy, as the keynote speaker, Congressman Gerry Studds, Mayor James Sheets and National Park Service Officials, including Acting NPS Director Herbert Cables, Jr. and North Atlantic Regional Director Marie Rust.

The U.S. Army Band, Eastern Nazarene College Choir and the Hingham Militia will participate. A part of the celebration will be a one day trolley service which will provide transportation to: the Visitor Center, Presidents Adams Birthplaces, "Old House" and the United First Parish Church. The ceremony and trolley are free to the public. Limited street parking is available at all sites and garage parking is also available at the visitor center.

The National Park Service site includes the Birthplaces of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams, and the "Old House," home to four generations of the Adams family. Occupants of the NATIONAL PARK SERVICE Visitor Center will open Sunday, April 18 at 2 p.m. at Presidents Place, Quincy Center. The center will provide information and orientation to the Adams National Historic Site for a projected 50,000 visitors during its first tourist season. Sean Maguire, vice president of administrative services for The Boston Five, joins Adams National Historic Site Superintendent Marianne Peak inside the soon-to-open center. Presidents Place is owned and managed by The Boston Five.

"Old House" included such members of the Adams family as Presidents John and John Quincy Adams, U.S. Minister and Congressman Charles Francis Adams, and literary historians Henry and Brooke Adams.

Park Rangers at the Adams NHS conduct interpretive tours through the homes, blending the public careers and private lives of the Adams family, thus providing a more personal view of these historic figures. The visitor center will include exhibits on the Adams family and the community of Quincy, a bookstore and orientation information.

Interpretive programs at the "Old House" and John and John Quincy Adams Birthplaces are approximately one hour. The site will be open seven days a week from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., from April 18 through November 10. Park passes may be obtained only at the site visitor center. Reservations for tours of the homes are required for groups of eight or more. The last full tours are at 4:15. NPS fees are: $2 per person, children 16 and under are free and adults 62 and older are free. For more information contact the Adams National Historic Site at 773-1177

The United First Parish Church will be open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on Sunday from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. April 18 through Nov. 10. Tours of the Adams family crypt are approximately 30 minutes. Reservations for group tours may be made by contacting the church directly at 773-0062.

Projects Will Start Soon

$2.7 Million Contract Awarded For New Ed. Center, Addition

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The city has awarded a $2.7 million contract to an Easton construction company for a new early childhood education center on Brooks Ave. and a four-classroom and gymnasium addition to the Bernazzani Elementary School on Furnace Brook Parkway.

Barbato Construction Company of Easton submitted the lowest of nine bids, $2,657,308, according to Public Works Commissioner David Colton. Mayor James Sheets, who accepted the bid Monday after a recommendation from Supt. Gene Creedon, added $50,000 to the project to cover the installation of a sprinkler in the Bernazzani School.

Barbato's bid came in at $65 per square foot. The two projects have a combined area of 41,500 square feet. The highest bid of $3,050,000 or $73.50 per square foot was submitted from P & H Contractors of Everett, Colton said.

No local contractors submitted bids, Colton said.

Creedon emphasized the low bid does not sacrifice quality. He credited the efforts of Jim Wilson, director of plant facilities and the architects, Korslund, LeNormand and Quinn, Inc., for stressing maintenance systems and criteria in the design.

The projects will include full air conditioning for future year-round occupancy and both projects will be handicapped accessible.

Groundbreaking for both projects will take place within the next several weeks, Creedon said. He is hopeful the addition will be ready for occupancy by the start of school Sept. 9 and the education center by the end of October.

"We're very optimistic that the four classrooms will be ready to receive students by the opening of school Sept. 9. That's an expectation we've placed upon the contractor," Creedon said.

"The gymnasium will be ready for occupancy in early October and the education center will most probably be ready by the end of October."

Because the early childhood center students will start the school year in other schools, Creedon said students may not move into the new school until the end of the first marking period or after Thanksgiving.

"Those students will already be in classroom spaces before the education center opens. It's a question of when will be a logical time to open the school."

A community meeting regarding the projects will be discussed by city and school officials Wednesday, April 21 at 7:30 p.m. in the Lincoln-Hancock School. Parents and other concerned citizens are invited to meet the contractor and architect, and discuss what will take place during the next several months at the sites.

Mediator Joins Teacher Contract Talks

By BILL DONCASTER

The Quincy Education Association and the School Committee sat down at the negotiation table yesterday (Wednesday), with an impartial mediator to discuss teachers contracts.

On Tuesday, at prestime, those involved were predicting a marathon negotiation session. Both sides are hopeful but cautiously optimistic about reaching a settlement.

Quincy teachers have been working without a contract since August 31, 1992.

Stephen Durkin, vice chairman of the School Committee, said he "would like to be able to get it settled." He added that he cannot be too optimistic and is looking toward some "very long nights before an agreement is reached."

Jack Pollidori of the Mass Teachers Association said he is hopeful. "I believe this is as close to a settlement as we've been," he said. He added that the next two days are very critical.

Thomas Walsh, president of the Quincy Education Association, said teachers are looking for "some type of reasonable pay increase," but could not go into specific demands. "Quincy teachers' salaries are slipping below every other city and town in Massachusetts," he said.

Walsh hoped negotiations could be finalized by Sunday.

Mayor James Sheets' preliminary budget for fiscal year 1994 calls for a $1.5 million increase in the school budget. If state legislature passes the school reform package, Quincy schools would receive about another $400,000. The Quincy Education Association believes that amount is enough to settle a new contract.

Margaret (Peggy) King, of the School Committee, said, "the School Committee appreciates what the teachers do, and I hope we can reach an equitable agreement."

She also was hopefully optimistic, saying that priorities besides the salary issue must be weighed.

Wednesday, April 7, over 300 Quincy teachers marched on City Hall demanding pay raises.

About 150 remained outside chanting "we want a contract," while the rest crowded the council chambers during a School Committee meeting. There it was agreed to sit down with a mediator on April 14.

A 1991 survey of teacher salaries ranked Quincy teachers at 166th out of 325 communities.

Neighborhood Meeting On Boston Gear Site Tonight

A neighborhood meeting to discuss the development of the Boston Gear site will be held tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chamber of City Hall.

The meeting is being held by Ward 5 Councillor

Chuck Phelan and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers.

Currently, Shaws Supermarket is considering the Boston Gear site for a new store. Although a permit or a notice of intent has not been filed with the city, the councillors said they want to gather neighborhood input on the potential project.

Residents with questions or comments can call Phelan at home (472-6339) or City Hall (376-1341) or Ayers at home (472-9877) or at City Hall.

Convenience Store Seeks Beer And Wine License

BY BILL DONCASTER

The 7-Eleven at 75 Copeland St., West Quincy, wants to add beer and wine to its shelves.

This would be the first convenience store in Quincy to receive a such a license if it is granted. There are already four package stores in that area.

The Quincy License Board had its first hearing on the request Tuesday. The board traditionally hears alcohol license requests at least twice, the hearing is continued to the May 4 meeting.

Atty. Fletcher Wiley said that his client, store owner Aejin Hong, does not intend to turn the 7-Eleven into a large volume liquor store. Rather, he said, "Mrs. Hong will simply be offering the convenience of one stop shopping to those customers who want it." He added that due to lack of storage in the store and the low volume-high turnover nature of the store, she will probably not be able to offer beer and wine any cheaper than any other store.

Two nearby residents, Peter DeWever of 57 Buckley St. and Sebbo Pakkala of 81 Copeland St., asked that the board deny the request because of the presence of unruly teenagers hanging out in close proximity to the store. Both cited drug traffic among the youths and fear that a sparsely staffed store selling beer might worsen conditions.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman noted his fears of the temptations involved with a 24 hour store having liquor sales on the premises. "Not that I'm accusing Mrs. Hong," he said, "but a store like this usually has only one or two people working at a time, and to have it on display at two in the morning could be a pretty big temptation to employees and customers alike."

Health Commissioner

Jane Gallahue said she would have an easier time granting the request if alcoholic beverages could be stored in an independent cooler that could be locked. She said that long multi-doored coolers still allow access to products from the next door down.

John Donovan, a 7-Eleven representative, invited the board to see another 7-Eleven store in Rockland that was granted a beer and wine license last year. He said that license was granted but with similar concerns but has operated without incident since. He also addressed Gallahue's concerns by telling her of 7-Eleven's in Connecticut that put chicken wire barriers between cooler sections and are locked from the outside with a key the owners generally take home.

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio brought the concerns from his constituents against the license, saying it would set a bad precedent of giving liquor licenses to this kind of establishment. He added that Hong ran the store very well, "I go in there once a day myself," he said, "sometimes twice because I smoke too much." Board member Matthias Mulvey noted the existence of four other

Ron McCarthy Candidate For School Committee

Ron McCarthy, 72 Norton Rd., Quincy, announces his candidacy for a seat on the Quincy School Committee.

McCarthy says he believes there are six issues which are "paramount" to the city's public schools: the proposed Quincy College Board of Trustees, overcrowding of elementary schools, continuing enrichment programs, continuing and enacting attendance policies, instituting all-day kindergarten and developing and implementing an AIDS prevention program.

"Addressing and assessing these needs and issues would help to continue our excellent public schools in Quincy," he said.

"We must assure our citizens that our schools are effective," McCarthy said, adding an effective school meets all of the following criteria: strong administrative leadership, an orderly school environment, effective classroom management, clear expectations for students, and a strong parent-teacher-school relationship.

"One way to accomplish these desires is to try and incorporate school-site management into our schools.

"Each individual classroom must produce the best possible students for the future. Therefore, it's imperative that each classroom focuses on some basic elements."

For example, McCarthy said classroom instruction should reflect the mission of the school. He also said students must remain "on-task" and they must realize the importance of attending school.

In addition, McCarthy said classrooms should incorporate student-teacher interaction and apply acquired knowledge to everyday life.

"If classrooms can incorporate these elements, and obviously there are more, then students would have a clearer understanding of why they attend school.

"For Quincy schools to achieve excellence," McCarthy said, "we must reexamine courses of study, curriculums, promotion standards, graduation requirements and employment practices."

He also said the state must reexamine teacher certification and the Massachusetts Education Assessment Program.

"My committee and I hope that we're successful in the fall and that our message is accepted by the voters of Quincy. Let's continue the successes of our schools and make appropriate changes to assure that they move in the right direction for the 21st century," McCarthy said.

McCarthy received his bachelor of arts degree and masters in education administration from Bridgewater State College. A former Middleborough history teacher and G.E.D. instructor, he is a member of the National Council for the Social Studies and a member of the Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development.

Lawsuit Against Chretien, Building Unions Dropped

By MICHAEL WHALEN
A lawsuit against Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien and several local building unions has been dropped.

The litigation had stemmed back to an alleged incident at a picket line last June 30 where it was claimed that some of those picketing used disruptive and abusive behavior towards members of the National Association of Government Employees (NAGE).

The unions, including Building Trades Local Union 12, Labor Union Local 133, Bricklayers Union Local 52, and Ironworkers Local 7, as well as several individuals, staged the picket line outside of a facility located at 159 Burgin Parkway, where NAGE is one of the tenants.

The picket line had been formed, according to Chretien, because the unions alleged that NAGE had used non-union workers in renovations that, at the time, had recently been completed at the site.

Chretien said he had been informed about the picket line "a couple of days" before it occurred and "dropped by (at the picket line) for about 15 minutes to say hello and to provide some sympathy (for the unions)."

Chretien said he merely wanted to show support for some of unemployed union workers from his ward. He added that he witnessed no disruptive or abusive behavior while he was there, noting that a police detail was present at the picket line.

NAGE, however, alleged that those at the picket line acted in a disruptive manner and used abusive language, including a racial epithet directed at one of its workers. NAGE employees, seeing Chretien at the picket line, decided to include him in the lawsuit, according to Chretien.

Chretien said from what he saw, people were allowed to cross the picket line without incident, adding that the line was only being staged as an "informational picket" with no trouble intended.

Assistant City Solicitor James Timmins, who helped to represent Chretien in the matter, said he recently received a call from one of the lawyers involved in the case saying that NAGE had decided to drop the lawsuit.

Timmins said he had no details on what kind of an agreement had been worked out between NAGE and the other unions, noting that both sides had legal representation different than Chretien's. Timmins said that the city solicitor's office had opted to defend Chretien in the matter because Chretien was named in the lawsuit as a city official.

"They seemed to be going after him in his official capacity as a city councillor," said Timmins, who added that NAGE had no evidence that Chretien had participated in any wrongful behavior.

Chretien, who said he had never been sued before in his life, said he was pleased that the lawsuit had been dropped but added that the situation had understandably made him a little uncomfortable.

"It's disappointing to see how easy it is to be sued just for exercising your First Amendment rights (to attend such an event)," he said. "While I was there, nothing unusual happened and I said from the start that it (the lawsuit) was much adieu about nothing. This (decision to drop the lawsuit) validates that viewpoint."

"I'm glad they were able to get the issue settled."

INROADS TO CURING IMPOTENCE

Although impotence has often been classified as a psychological problem, research now indicates it is usually caused by a chemical imbalance. Scientists have identified nitric oxide as a substance essential to producing erections. A deficiency of this chemical, which is normally manufactured throughout the body, could be the real culprit responsible for the type of impotence that affects many American men. Since the mid-1980's, injections of several drugs have been used to treat impotence, although it was not known precisely why they worked. Researchers now think the drugs may enhance the body's nitric oxide, and they hope that this knowledge may be used to develop a pill or skin patch to fight impotence.

P.S. Nitric oxide is also a key chemical in the body's immune response system.

Many men are relieved to learn that the cause of their impotence is physiological rather than physical—and that the new research being done may soon lead to better treatments for this devastating problem. If you would like to learn what you can do to stay healthy and ward off the dangers of heart attacks, feel free to call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. ## The Yakoo And The Kids

They're after the Yakoo again.

The symbol of North Quincy High School pride and spirit for 36 years is now under investigation as an alleged racist mascot.

I find the charge hard to believe. But civil rights representatives from the U.S. Education Department in Boston have been at the school investigating the symbol, a caricature of a Native American with a featherband carrying a stone hammer and NQHS pennant.

Edward Grogan, a teacher—not at NQHS but at Atlantic Middle School—kicked up the ruckus over the Yakoo two years ago. He says the symbol is offensive, especially to American Natives, and filed a civil rights complaint.

The Education Department officials have talked with School Supt. Gene Creedon and NQHS Assistant Principal Eileen Feehey. They also obtained the names and addresses of minority students at the school apparently with the intention of questioning them, too.

I hope they also plan to talk with other students in the school and with parents. To the vast majority of students and parents, the Yakoo is a beloved symbol for which they have the utmost respect.

I also hope someone tells the investigators about the ad hoc committee comprising students, parents and alumni who in 1991 overwhelmingly voted to keep the Yakoo as the school's symbol after Grogan raised the issue.

And, that someone tells them about the school referendum in which 88 percent of the students participating voted to keep the Yakoo just the way he is. (7.8 percent favored retaining him but perhaps altering his appearance.)

And that the referendum and the ad hoc committee's vote came after students invited representatives on both sides of the issue to speak at the school.

The Yakoo is not offensive to all American Natives. Jeff Hemley, director of Harvard University's Native American Program and a Chippewa Indian from North Dakota thinks it is.

"A group of people have been reduced to a mascot. It perpetuates racial stereotypes," he said.

But Louella Fallis, a Sioux Indian originally from South Dakota who came all the way from New Mexico to speak to the students, disagrees.

"The students have so much pride behind the mascot that I can't understand the controversy," she said. "I don't find anything derogatory about it."

And, she added: "With all the other problems today...to take this issue and put it under a microscope...I'm just appalled."

After everyone had a chance to be heard, NQHS Principal Peter Chrisolm recommended to then School Supt. Robert Ricci that the Yakoo be allowed to remain as the school symbol.

Ricci, who was school superintendent less than four years, ordered the symbol removed from the gymnasium floor, official documents, athletic uniforms and school property.

It looked like the Yakoo was a goner. But later that year, the School Committee, on a 4-to-3 vote, overruled Ricci and restored the mascot to good standing.

Now, his honor is on the line once again.

The ironic part of this is that the Yakoo is not modeled after a Native American, but after Dr. Allan Yacubian, a Wollaston dentist, and a 1958 graduate of North Quincy High School, who is an Armenian American.

He finds no fault with the YACUBIAN symbol.

Critics claim the stone hammer is a tomahawk and the Yakoo is projecting a fighting stance.

But Dr. Yacubian doesn't see it that way.

"The hammer denotes hard work," he says. "His look is that of determination and perseverance. Critics have miscalculated that whole image."

He and others see it as actually a competitive stance for the football field, the basketball court and the cinder track.

And, if it is a fighting stance, what's so wrong about that?

American Natives, down through history, have been known to take a fighting stance when needed. Custer found that out at Little Bighorn.

As noted here in the past, there are so many sports teams with Indian names and symbols which are a tribute to Native Americans.

If the Yakoo is banished as a racist, what else are we going to ban?

Change the name of the Washington Redskins? Rip the tomahawk from the Atlanta Braves uniform? Silence the tom-toms in the Cleveland Indians Municipal Stadium? Tell the Chicago Blackhawks to get new uniforms?

After that, how about telling Notre Dame to change its "Fighting Irish" nickname because someone might feel offended that it denotes that all the Irish want to do is fight.

And what about, as we have asked before, the Boston Celtics' leprechaun-like symbol? Surely someone could take offense—or be convinced to take offense—because they don't like the way he grins or because they don't believe in leprechauns.

And while we're at it, let's ban Santa Claus. Why should all the skinny people in the world have to put up with that jolly fat guy every Christmas? And we could get rid of Uncle Sam, too, because someone might not like his beard or think his hat is out of style.

Some people could find a reason to ban just about anything and rile up others to go along with them.

I, for one, hope the Yakoo is found innocent because I think he is innocent.

I trust the judgement of the kids at North Quincy High School.

The Yakoo belongs to the kids who think he is pretty special.

Why can't some adults see this, and leave Yakoo and the kids alone?

City Losing A Good Friend

Rev. Roger Kvam Leaving Pastoral, Coalition Posts

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Members of Quincy's First Presbyterian Church, the homeless population and the community at large will lose a true friend next month.

Rev. Roger Kvam, pastor of the church and president of the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition (QISC), the organization which operates the Quincy homeless shelter Father Bill's Place on Broad Street, will step down from both posts upon his May retirement.

Kvam, 62, said he and his wife Deborah will be moving to South Carolina to spend some time with their family.

"I've retired to South Carolina mainly because there are four wonderful boys (his grandchildren) there and I want to teach them how to fish."

While his family is the reason for the move, however, they did not influence his decision to stop working.

"I've got lots of things I want to do, reading, writing and traveling, and we're still young enough and healthy enough to do it," he said, "and that one of the reasons we're doing it."

His life has certainly been an active one. A minister since 1957, he graduated from Princeton Theological Seminary and first served as pastor of First Presbyterian Church in Cranbury, N.J. He then went to Harvard Graduate School to study politics and became assistant professor of political science at Ohio University.

Kvam next assumed the presidency of Mackinac College, a small Christian school in Michigan. Finally, after returning to Harvard to do some more studying, he became pastor of First Presbyterian in Quincy 18 years ago.

He was an early crusader in the battle against homelessness, even before the establishment of the QISC and the opening of Father Bill's Place in 1984. Kvam said there are fears and stereotypes about homelessness that are completely unnecessary, noting that most homeless people have "received terrible breaks" and only need a hand getting back on their feet.

He also noted that he is "very proud" of the work done by the QISC in helping to alleviate the problem.

"It's really been tremendous," said Kvam. "We've had a wonderful program that has sought to help these people put their lives back together."

Two of Kvam's closest associates praised him both as an advocate for the rights of the homeless and as a human being.

QISC Executive Director Joseph Finn said the community is losing someone with more on his mind than congregational matters.

"His concern goes way beyond his own congregation, that's for sure," said Finn. "We're losing a minister that had extreme care for the community and those who are disenfranchised. He has always been very conscious of those who have less."

As a Roman Catholic, Finn does not attend First Presbyterian Church but said that one of the things that most impresses him about Kvam is the faith that he displays.

"He's a very faithful person," said Finn. "He's someone who takes the Gospel very seriously and puts it into concrete action. He's a tremendous witness to the Gospel."

Finn said the QISC plans to honor Kvam with an invitation-only luncheon May 5 at The Common Market in Quincy.

Rev. William McCarthy, pastor of St. John the Baptist Church in Quincy and himself no stranger to helping the homeless--Father Bill's Place is named after him--also had nothing but kind words for Kvam.

"He's been a great friend for the 16 years I've known him, and a great churchman," said McCarthy. "He has been dedicated not only to his

School Committee OKs Salary Hikes For Some Teachers

The School Committee approved salary increases for 56 individual teachers and school employees, effective in September. It was estimated the increases would cost the city $7,250 a year.

Committee Vice Chairman Heslip E. Sutherland emphasized that the pay hikes were simply adjustments to correct salary discrepancies and not intended as cost of living raises.

Most of the increases were in the $100 a year range with elementary teachers going from $1,600 to $1,700, high and junior high teachers from $2,400 to $2,500 and assistant principals to $2,200.

Frank E. MacDonald, chairman of the salary committee of the Quincy Teachers Association, called it, "a step in the right direction" and added he hoped the committee would study further advances.

MacDonald pointed out that the per capita cost of instruction in Quincy of $69.08 per pupil was well below the average for 38 cities of $82.53 and the state average of $75.11.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

was formed known as the Quincy Park Improvement Committee. The committee has raised sufficient funds to restore the most heavily utilized children's playground in the city.

Collins Rest-A-While was installed in 1969 and dedicated to J. Ernest Collins who at the time had served 32 years as a member of the Quincy Park and Recreation Boards and Commissions for his dedication and devoted service to Quincy and its youth.

Cattaneo requests that parents keep their children away from the playground during the preparation and construction period.

Committee Seeking Names

Memorial Planned For Deceased QHS Alumni Who Served In Military

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Three local organizations are planning to erect a memorial for deceased Quincy High School alumni who were killed in action or died of injuries resulting from service to their country in any war or conflict.

The Quincy High School Veterans Memorial Committee is comprised of the Friends for a Better Q.H.S., Q.H.S. R.O.T.C. and Quincy Veterans Council. Committee member Robert LaFleur of the Quincy Veterans Service Department said the memorial will be an appropriate and permanent tribute to Quincy High alumni who gave the supreme sacrifice.

"With this memorial, we hope students of Quincy High School remember past students who have given their lives during war time.

The committee wants the students to walk by that memorial every day and see the names of students from their school who gave the supreme sacrifice.

"You'd like the students to remember that the reason they still have a school is because of these past students. A lot of students left school early and didn't graduate to serve their country.

"They felt they had an obligation to serve," said LaFleur, a 1968 Q.H.S. graduate and a Navy veteran of the Vietnam War who experienced the loss of several classmates during that conflict.

Deceased veterans qualifying for the memorial are those who attended Q.H.S. or Trade School, graduated from Q.H.S. or Trade School, were killed or are missing in action, or died from injuries sustained during a conflict.

After many hours of research, the memorial committee has compiled a list of deceased veterans. Anyone who knows of a loved one or a friend that is not on this list is asked to contact by phone or letter Col. Joseph Ciampa, Q.H.S., 52 Coddington St., Quincy, MA 02169, 984-8845 between 7:30 a.m. and 3 p.m.

The memorial will stand about eight feet tall and eight feet wide inside Quincy High, just outside the school's Pride Room. Names of deceased veterans will be engraved on name tags and placed on blue felt. The memorial will be encased in glass.

Students at the Quincy Center for Technical Education are doing the wood work for the memorial, LaFleur noted. A dedication is expected to take place before the end of the school year, either in May or June, he said.

The committee is also seeking donations for the memorial. Checks can be made out to "Friends for a Better Q.H.S.", c/o Chris Barrett, Q.H.S., 52 Coddington St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Committee members are Chris Barrett, parent and veteran; Co. Joseph Ciampa, R.O.T.C.; Robert LaFleur, Department of Veterans Services; Principal Lloyd Hill, Joseph Mazzarella, director of Center for Technical Education; and George Peachey, Friends rep and veteran.

Currently, the committee lists more than 140 deceased veterans for the memorial: They are:

site of the former Lincoln School in South Quincy, calls for a two-story classroom unit connected to the main administration/cafeteria/discovery room" area via ramps.

Making the recommendation, Creedon thanked the efforts of the mayor's office, school committee, city council, the building committee, and "the many, many other persons who supported and assisted in accomplishing the fulfillment of this program.

"We could not have done this without them," he said.

The Bernazzani addition will alleviate overcrowding at the school by adding four classrooms and a gymnasium which will also serve as a cafeteria and permit after school use by the community. Existing school space will be reorganized for meet needed uses, such a library/media center and music and resource rooms.

The early education center will consist of two pre-kindergartens, six kindergartens, six first grade classrooms and ancillary function rooms, as well as a community room with accessory rooms. "The plan's success is based on it being inexpensive to build, economical to operate and conducive to learning," Creedon said.

The center will be constructed using concrete block walls, metal studs and plastered walls, brick veneer, and metal roofing.

As for classroom arrangement, the only doors to classrooms will occur in the main area complex from the cafeteria. All others in the two-story unit are open to the "discovery room" and to each other.

In January, Barbato Construction hired the architects and began meeting with school planning committees and educators to formulate their approach. The architects also drew from Wilson and his staff for maintenance issues and solutions.

liquor stores within a close proximity to the store, and that he would be apprehensive about adding another one.

"I believe in the free market," Wiley responded, "and I'm not sure it's this board's responsibility to protect other businesses from fair competition."

Mulvey agreed, but added, "With today's economy it's something we like to keep an eye on, and certainly those other store owners are part of the neighborhood you're in." He went on to compare his apprehension to the overabundance of restaurants in Quincy Center. "One more restaurant and it could be the straw that broke the camel's back."

"One of the wonderful things about Massachusetts liquor laws," Wiley said in closing, "is that there isn't a lot of red tape in taking a license away. If granted, and it proves to be a safety concern, or you find Mrs.

Hong or her employees are breaking any liquor laws about time of sale, storage or sale to minors it is your right and responsibility to suspend or remove the license."

Before the board meets again on the subject Wiley and Hong are to have a meeting with Councilman Fabrizio and any concerned neighbors. Also, members of the board will visit the Rockland 7-Eleven and see how it operates.

church, but also to the community.

"His concern was always very much for the poor. He gave a lot of his time and talent to both the Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition and to Father Bill's Place, and also his wisdom in guiding us.

"He was always interested in his fellow men and women, constantly."

While Kvam was appreciative of both tributes, he suggested that he has actually received more in life than he has given.

"I'm a theologian, and we (theologians) don't deserve a lot (of praise)," he said. "We receive a lot of love and blessings from God, and it's really how you respond to it that matters.

"I've had a great time wherever I've been, and now it's time to be driving off into the sunset. It's going to be fun."

Finn said QISC Vice President Michael Wheelwright will replace Kvam as president on an interim basis until new officers are elected in November. The church, Kvam said, will likewise use an interim pastor until a permanent replacement is found.

North Quincy Restaurant Granted Liquor License

By BILL DONCASTER

Iguana Cantina Corporation was granted an All Alcohol Beverage Restaurant License for Tullio's Restaurant and Grotto, at 150 Hancock St., North Quincy, by the Quincy License Board Tuesday.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers held two meetings with residents in the area, one in the restaurant itself, and said that they're concerns were satisfied provided Tullio's didn't have a sit down barroom. The restaurant will have a 21 seat waiting area where customers may purchase drinks, without food, while waiting for a table. Ayers saw no conflict in this.

The hearing was a continuation of a March 30 meeting where Atty. Carl Johnson described the proposed restaurant as having "an ambience of an Italian marketplace." It will feature an Italian menu and have 59 seats for dining.

At that meeting, Police Chief Francis Mullen said, "I think the city's looking for this, I'm happy for a facility of this type."

Joseph Donahue Begins 35th Year As Architect

By STEVE KAVANAGH
Back in 1958 Joseph Donahue had hopes that his fledgling architecture business would be a success.

Now, 35 years and more than 200 buildings later, signs of that success can be seen throughout Quincy and New England.

Donahue, of Crabtree Road Squantum, earned a degree from the Boston Architectural Center and worked as an apprentice in Boston for 10 years following World War II. He moved his family to Quincy in the late 1950s and started his own business.

In the early years, Donahue had a partner and the business was known as Hanlon & Donahue, Architects.

Today, Donahue Associates, Architects-Planners is going strong behind the leadership of its 70-year-old founder.

"He is still working seven days a week, if only just a few hours on the weekends, and he has made no mention of retirement plans," said Donahue's son Brian, vice president of the company and also an architect. "Architects are a funny breed. It's not unusual for them to be very productive, and in fact do some of their best work, long after their contemporaries in other fields have retired."

Some of the company's top local projects include the multi-million dollar new wing at Quincy Hospital; Tobin Towers, the elderly housing complex at 80 Clay St.; Quincy District Court on Chestnut St.; the North Quincy branch of the Thomas Crane Public Library; the Lantana

JOSEPH DONAHUE

Function Building in Randolph; the Cathy Pacific Restaurant in North Quincy; and the Quincy Center Professional Building, at 21 McGrath Highway, where Donahue maintains his office.

Currently, Donahue's most ambitious project is at Quincy Hospital. He is responsible for planning a new obstetric suite, a new outpatient surgery suite and major alterations of surgical and radiology facilities.

The company recently completed work on the new rectory at Sacred Heart Church in Weymouth and is working on alterations at the church.

Even though he is devoted to his business, Donahue still manages to find time for his other passion—golf.

After taking up the game he became a member of Wollaston Golf Course when it was located in Quincy at what is now President's Golf Course.

When the club moved to its current home in Milton, Donahue was able to combine business with pleasure. He designed Wollaston's new clubhouse.

Designing buildings is not Donahue's only talent with pen and ink. A Navy veteran of World War II, Donahue had a collection of his memoirs published in the late 1970s called "Tin Cans and Other Ships." Although it was against regulations, Donahue kept a diary of his days on the U.S.S. Niblack between and the U.S.S. Oklahoma City between 1941 and 1945.

The book features Donahue's accounts of the Niblack's maneuvers and combat action in the North Atlantic and the Mediterranean and a similar chronicle of his experiences on the Oklahoma City in 1945 in the Pacific. Highlights include invasions, sinking a German submarine, and rescuing British sailors whose ship had been torpedoed.

An old ship mate saw a copy of the book in a bookstore and contacted Donahue. The two discussed old times and before long they decided to organize a reunion. It was so successful (more than 200 attended) that the crew's got together for six reunions between 1980 and 1991.

They met in different parts around the country, some where the two ships had anchored, including, San Diego, Charleston, S.C., Baton Rouge, Boston and Bath, Maine, where the Niblack was built. A reunion in Chicago is being planned.

Donahue and his wife, Frances, are the parents of four other children, a son Paul and daughters Patricia and twins Joan and Judy.

He is a past president of Quincy Rotary and past president of the Boston Architectural Center Alumni Association.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

A crisis and confusion is part of living. Each of us must face some sort of crisis and confusion sooner or later. To face a crisis requires courage - and courage is a personal matter. Courage can not be leased, borrowed or bought. It must be drawn from one's self for one's self. And when courage is shown, confusion can and often does disappear.

Ever since time began, the greatest source for courage has been traced to a foundation on a faith. Faith creates hope. Without faith and hope, courage is difficult to come by. In spite of dark clouds, faith, hope and courage will always be the means to let us see the rays of sunshine again...

"Life would not be truly worth living without faith. Faith in God; faith in ourselves; faith in our fellow-men; we should omit none of the three. Without faith in God, there is no hope for the soul; without faith in self, life is a miserable failure; without faith in each other, we should miss the sweet joys of friendship. Keep your faith bright, let its lustre never grow dim!" - Ida Scott Taylor

Quincy Off To Good Start After Weather Delay

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Quincy baseball team had to wait a week to open the season due to the heavy snow and rain, but once they got under way the Presidents started off with a bang, winning their first two games.

Quincy opened with a last-inning 4-3 win over Weymouth and followed up by rolling over Bridgewater-Raynham, 20-3.

The weather caught up with them again this week and Monday's scheduled game at Boston Latin was postponed. They hoped to get back into action yesterday (Wednesday) against Plymouth and Friday they will play at Falmouth.

Duane Holmes was the batting star in both Quincy victories as he drove in the winning run in the bottom of the seventh against Weymouth and went 5-for-6, including two home runs and eight RBI, in the B-R game.

After the thrilling Weymouth win, the B-R game was like batting practice as the Presidents hit everything that came at them.

Holmes, Quincy's big first baseman had a field day with his eight RBI, including a grand slam home run.

Starting pitcher John Russell went 3-for-5 with three RBI and Noel DiBona went 3-for-5 with four RBI.

Russell pitched five scoreless innings, including no-hit ball for four innings and Sean McDonald finished up for the Presidents.

"Russell pitched excellent ball and everyone hit the ball," said coach Bob Sylvia. "Bridgewater-Raynham used to be a league powerhouse but is down this year. I know how they feel, as we have gone through days like that."

Opening day was a far different story as Quincy and Weymouth played an excellent game that wasn't decided until the last inning.

Tom Malvesti pitched all the way for Quincy and was immense over the final four innings after giving up three runs.

"This was a super opening game," said Sylvia. "You beat Weymouth and you are beating a real good ballclub. It was a gutsy performance by Malvesti to go the distance. He got stronger down the stretch as the weather began turning colder."

Malvesti and Weymouth's Eric Smith were sharp through three innings until the Wildcats scored their three runs in the top of the fourth.

Quincy got a run back in the bottom of the fourth when Steve Miller, who had two hits and a key sacrifice that led to a run, singled to left. Malvesti was a hit by a pitch. Jeff Craig walked to load the bases and Miller scored on DiBona's fielder's choice.

In the fifth Mike Caporale walked, Robbie Kane had a bunt single and both runners moved up on Miller's sacrifice bunt. Malvesti's fly ball to right was dropped, scoring Caporale, and Holmes brought Kane home with a squeeze bunt to tie the score.

In the bottom of the seventh Miller singled to right, Malvesti flied deep to center for the second out, Miller stole second and scored the winning run on Holmes' double to right.

"Holmes is capable of the long ball and he's one of the boys you want up there for a hit in that spot," said Sylvia.

North Gets Good Pitching But Splits First Two

The North Quincy baseball team received two fine performances from its two top pitchers, Sean Donovan and Mike Patch, but the Raiders had to be satisfied with a split in their first two games.

After giving up two unearned runs in the last inning and losing to Falmouth, 6-5, the Raiders came back to edge Barnstable, 4-3, with a run in the final inning.

North's scheduled game Monday at Silver Lake was postponed. The Raiders were scheduled to face Billerica Tuesday, will host Taunton Friday at 3:30 at Adams Field, will be at Billerica on Patriot's Day at 10:30 a.m. and will host Plymouth Tuesday at Adams, also at 10:30, in the makeup of the scheduled opening day game.

The Raiders came from behind to edge Barnstable as Patch went all the way, giving up four hits, one earned run and striking out eight. He breezed through the first three innings, retiring the first nine batters without allowing a base runner. He struck out the side in the third and had five strikeouts in the first three innings, retiring the first nine batters without allowing a base runner. He struck out the side in the third and had five strikeouts in the first three innings.

Tied, 3-3, in the bottom of the seventh, Dave Reinhart (2-for-3, two runs scored, an RBI, a walk and a stolen base) doubled to deep left-center field. Adam Calvert (3-for-3, two RBI and a walk) followed with a high fly to shallow center. The center fielder overran the ball and it dropped in for a hit, scoring Reinhart with the winning run.

"Calvert and Reinhart did a nice job for us today," said coach Leo Donovan. "They hit the ball very well and both have to keep doing that for us to be successful."

North took a 1-0 lead in the second when Danny Duncan was hit by a pitch, was sacrificed to second by Brian Anderson, went to third on Charlie Kozanitis' ground out and scored on a wild pitch.

Barnstable scored two unearned runs in the fourth, both runs scoring on errors.

In the fifth Pat Shea led off reaching on a dropped third strike, Reinhart tripled to deep left-center and Calvert drove him in Quincy, including two Old Colony League all-star selections, two Patriot Ledger all-scholastic selections and both the Boston Herald and Globe all-scholastic selection.

Joanne also was chosen by her peers as the high school homecoming queen.

Track

North Squad Large But Inexperienced

The North Quincy girls' track team, with Geoff Hennessy in his fifth year as coach and Maureen Roche in her fourth as assistant, has a large squad but overall inexperience will hurt the team in dual meets.

"We have a great freshman class which covers every single event, but our inexperience will hurt," said Hennessy. "By season's end we'll be solid, just in the time for the 'big meets.' It will be fun to watch the new people develop."

North lost three standouts, Amy Wong, now at Princeton, Tricie Hughes, at Springfield College, and Trish McNamara, at Fitchburg State.

The returnees are led by seniors Susanne Hamilton, springs and high jump; Suzanne Lewis, distances; Heather Rendle, jumps; Stacie Minukas, javelin and shot put; Kerry Evans, hurdles; Karen Leary, 800; Jenny Marks, sprints; and Jen Santry, throws.

Juniors are Katy Deady, sprints; Mel Gaziano, 800; Katie McNamara, 800;

Erin Duggan, distances; Meghan Barry, throws; and Chrissy Herman, distances and hurdles.

Hennessy has several fine sophomores in Laurie Blaikie, distances; Ursula Feurtado, 800; Tracy Grossi, throws; Danielle Rinella, sprints; Erin Skehan, sprints; Julie McDonald, sprints; Angela Rizzitano, sprints; and Sarah Radell, sprints.

Promising newcomers include juniors Winnie Fong, hurdles; Heather Simmons, javelin; and Amy Shea, hurdles.

Sophomores are Marla Levine, distances; Mei Truong, sprints; Debbie O'Donnell, throws; and Erin McVeigh, throws.

Outstanding freshmen include Phyllis Poon, sprints; Aja Jackson, sprints and jumps; Uchechi Kalu, 400; Jessie Ceurvels, 800; Erica Doherty, distances; Kelly Duggan, distances; Lynn Garland, hurdles; Suk Ng, hurdles and jumps; Amalia Solano, 400 and triple jump; Linda Jellison, high jump; Meg Goodwin, throws; Maryann Patch, throws; Chandra Leister, sprints; Jen Pineo, sprints and throws; and Leah Campanale, hurdles.

Although North was wallowed by defending state champion Falmouth, 99-32, in its opener, Hennessy wasn't too disappointed.

"They had three and a half weeks training on their track, while we had snow and rain and only days on our track," Hennessy said.

"Also, we were missing some key people but overall I was pleased with our kids, especially the rookies and freshmen."

North's only winners were Lewis in the two-mile (12:46.6) and Gaziano in the 800 (2:43.5).

Finishing second were McNamara, 800; Ng, 100 hurdles and 300 hurdles; Jackson, long jump; and Barry, shot put.

Taking third places were Hamilton, 200; Duggan, mile; Evans, 300 hurdles; Gaziano, long jump; Hamilton, high jump; Pineo, shot put; and Santry, discus.

with a hit to right.

Donovan pitched a fine game at Falmouth in the opener but was victimized by errors just as he was a year ago. He went all the way, striking out 10, walking one and giving up three earned runs.

Jim Sapienza had a single, double and triple and scored two runs and Reinhart and Shea each had two hits for the Raiders.

"It was tough to lose like that," said Donovan. "It was just like last year when Sean and Mike pitched excellent ball but lost several games due to errors. Each won three games and their ERAs were among the lowest in the Old Colony League."

"Our pitching will be strong again and we will hit all right. If we can just get away from those costly errors we should hold our own."

LEVEL OF CONCERN

The ease with which automatic transmissions work on newer cars may cause some car owners to believe that they require no maintenance. However, regular checks of the automatic transmission fluid can help prevent potential problems. More than merely a lubricant, automatic transmission fluid transmits power to the torque converter, activates clutches and bands, controls hydraulic valves, lubricates gears, bearings and bushings, as well as cools the transmission. By simply correcting low fluid levels, such operational problems as clutch slipping, shift flare, incorrect shift timing, abnormal noise, or loss of a gear may be avoided. This bit of maintenance is a small price to pay in light of the expense involved with repairing a transmission that ran short of fluid.

HINT: The auto technician can use the condition of automatic transmission fluid as an indicator of specific problems.

People generally put a great deal of money into their cars. With the initial purchase price, insurance, tune-ups and repairs, you can end up with a sizable investment. Doesn't it make sense to make sure you have your car serviced and repaired by the best technicians around? You and your car deserve the very best and here at LEO & WALT'S SUNCOCO you'll get it. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree, 843-1550, we invite you to take advantage of our ALL-DATA computer system. Hours: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. Youngsters at Virginia's Day Nursery in Quincy will learn about physical disabilities next week through a special Easter Seal program sponsored by T.J. Maxx.

The Easter Seal HOP-N-ING teaches children about the causes of disabilities and their effects on people's everyday lives. The children also find out how wheelchairs, crutches and other specialized equipment work.

The event also gives the children a chance to help. They hop as many times as they can in three minutes, earning money pledged by family and friends for each hop.

A message to the Quincy School Committee...

It's time to settle the teacher contract.

Mayor James Sheets recently announced that he will recommend a $1.5 million increase in next year's school budget.

And ... if the legislature passes the school reform bill as expected, Quincy will receive approximately another $400,000 in state school aid.

That's almost $2 million in new funds for the 1993-94 Quincy school budget.

Thomas Walsh, president of the Quincy Education Association, appeared with over 300 Quincy teachers at last Wednesday's school committee meeting.

Enough to settle a new contract with Quincy teachers? We think so. The time is now.

Quincy teachers are reasonable people. After working over 7 months without a contract, Quincy teachers are prepared to negotiate around the clock to settle a new agreement.

Please call members of the Quincy school committee and ask them to settle a fair contract.

SEN. EDWARD KENNEDY, right, and his wife, Victoria Reggie, join Mayor James Sheets and his wife, Joann, in Pledge of Allegiance during dedication of National Park Service Visitors Center in Presidents Place, Quincy Center.

TROLLEYS ARE BOARDED by visitors that will take them to various sites in Quincy along the historic trail during a trial run as part of the opening of the National Park Service Visitors Center. Park Service rangers will man the trolleys and provide information on site. Trolleys are expected to run regularly starting next month or early June.

Now Open At Presidents Place National Park Service Visitors Center Expected To Attract 60,000 Tourists

By BILL DONCASTER

The Adams National Historic Site opened for the season on Sunday boasting a new Visitor Center at Presidents Place.

Superintendent of the Adams National Historic Site Marianne Peak estimates that 60,000 people will visit the site this year, an increase from last year's 40,000, as a result of the new Visitor Center.

"Those people will shop in Quincy stores and eat at Quincy restaurants," said Mayor James Sheets.

The new Visitor Center was made possible by $925,000 in federal budget increases and project funding.

According to Sheets, the center will be vital in making Quincy historical sites easier to visit and in making "tourism a larger slice of Quincy's economic pie."

"Quincy is a community rich in history," said Sheets, "and Quincy history cried out for recognition."

Sheets said he began work to increase the resources of Quincy historical sites six months after election. He thanked Sen. Edward Kennedy, Sunday's keynote speaker, for his help in increasing federal funding to the Adams National Historic Site.

He also said Kennedy's presence on Sunday is indicative of the new importance placed on the site in Washington by the National Park Service.

"It's important to remember," said Kennedy, "that although we in New England don't have large spaces under the National Park Service, we do have valuable places, we do have important places, such as here in Quincy."

The same National Park Service that manages the comparably tiny Adams Historic Site, also manages huge areas like Yellowstone and the Grand Canyon.

Kennedy went on to praise the historical importance of Presidents John and John Quincy Adams saying that "they understood the notion of public service, too often those chosen to serve the people forget that." He also called John Adams "the real genius behind the Constitution."

Charles Francis Adams, a sixth generation descendant of John Quincy Adams and founder of Raytheon, commended the National Park Service for their treatment of his ancestral home.

Budget Figures Not Final But:

Sheets Sees No City Layoffs

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday that although final numbers on the city's FY94 budget are unavailable, no layoffs are planned for the coming fiscal year.

The mayor said he is also considering the possibility of hiring new firefighters to replace fire department retirees.

Sheets said he could not project a bottom line figure for the budget because too many numbers were still being calculated. Final numbers, which he planned to discuss this week with department heads, will not be known until sometime Friday, he said.

The fact that no city workers are to be laid off, however, is definite, according to Sheets.

"I can tell you that no layoffs are planned in the budget," he said.

The mayor said FY94, which begins July 1, would most likely be a "strange budget-building year" with some departmental budgets going up and others going down.

"I have no idea where we are, really," said Sheets. "Some will be up, and some down. Some areas could change by as much as $500,000 or $600,000, but we've been working on the budget for about a week and it has to be put together piece by piece."

Sheets said that the one concrete figure he has is the FY94 school budget. The mayor said he plans to submit a school budget of $38,784,074 to the City Council at its May 3 meeting.

The increase is about $1.5 million over the FY93 school budget, he said.

Sheets said the additional funding was allowed because it was projected that the money would be there for the schools to use.

"That's what we thought would be available," said Sheets. "When we looked at the revenue income and backed the budget into it, we thought that's what would be there."

Sheets said he did not know how the additional funding would be used by the School Committee.

"It's up to the School Committee how it's allocated," he said. "I just give them the bottom line."

Sheets could not give specifics on two of the larger budgets, those for the police and fire departments. He noted that while the figures would probably increase over those from FY93, "we don't expect they'll be up that much."

The mayor noted that the 17 new police officers that are to be hired by the police department will not impact the budget because the money to be used for their salaries was already available in the FY93 budget. The FY93 funds were used for overtime, Sheets said.

Sheets said figures for the fire department were likewise unavailable. He added, however, that the hiring of new firefighters to replace retirees is a possibility.

Regarding the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority of assessment, Sheets said a projected increase of 18.9 percent is probably a bit high. The mayor said he suspects that state aid allocated to the city, which Sheets said should total about $25 million, "should offset the costs of the MWRA" and bring the increase down to 10 percent or even seven or eight percent.

Sheets said, however, that while some figures will be increasing, figures for "some of the old budget-busters," such as health insurance and pensions, should be down for FY94.

Health insurance should be down in the vicinity of $180,000 to $200,000 "as a result of the city's going to a single carrier in November," according to Sheets. He added that the health insurance figures would probably have increased by about $2 million if the city had not gone to a single carrier.

Pensions, the mayor said, are "a fixed cost given to us by the state retirement board. We can't reduce it or increase it." Sheets added, however, that he believes the FY94 pension figure should be "down roughly $100,000" from the FY93 total, which he said totaled approximately $1.1 million.

Request for Dance-Marathon Party Continued By Board

The Quincy License Board Tuesday continued for two weeks a request from Primary Productions, Inc., for a permit to hold a dance-marathon party, from June 5 to 6, at Neponset Flea Market in North Quincy.

David Mayer, from Primary Productions, said he'd be hoping to have "between 1,500 and 2,000 people" at the party. A portion of the proceeds, he said, would go to the Aids Action Committee and Greenpeace.

According to Mayer, his organization threw a similar party at the Shriners Hall in Wilmington, "we had about 1,500 people and we had no problems."

When board member Matthias Mulvey noted the limiting amount of parking at the Neponset Flea Market, Mayer noted that parties in the past have brought people from as far as Washington D.C. Those people usually arrive by bus, the buses will park at local hotels during the party.

The hearing was continued until next week so that Mayer might bring in a more detailed plan for specifics about the party; lighting, stage area, food, portable toilets, etc. Also, Mulvey and Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said there were concerns over existing zoning of the site and whether the site were safe for a crowd of that size.

It was also suggested that Primary Productions, Inc., contact Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, to see about possible concerns or objection from the neighborhood.

Four Held On Drug, Robbery Charges

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Three people pleaded not guilty to charges of trafficking in cocaine, armed robbery, kidnapping and assault and battery while being arraigned Tuesday in Quincy District Court.

A fourth suspect pleaded innocent to the same charges while being arraigned Tuesday at Boston City Hospital. The four were arrested Monday at approximately 4 p.m. at the Presidents City Motel in Quincy.

All four cases were continued until April 30.

Pleading not guilty at the court were Kim Fox, 24, of Dorchester; Roberto Matias, 42, of Jamaica Plain and Daniel Medina, 37, of Roslindale. Judge Joseph Welch set bail at $100,000 cash for Matias and $150,000 cash for Medina. No bail was set for Fox in exchange for her promise to appear in court when the case resumes.

The fourth suspect, Curtis Bradford, 29, of Dorchester, was shot by police Monday while trying to flee the scene at the motel. He was arraigned Tuesday while in his hospital bed. Judge Geraldine Lombardo set bail at $100,000 cash.

Police Chief Francis Mullen said Tuesday a team comprised of members of the Quincy Police Drug Unit and U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Gang Unit arrested the suspects Monday afternoon at the motel. Boston City Hospital.

Mullen said Tuesday

that the three men entered a room at the motel occupied by a female undercover officer and another police agent while Fox waited outside in a car.

Court officials said the officer and agent were bound, gagged and robbed of cocaine they planned to attempt to sell to the defendants as well as their money and jewelry.

Officers in an adjacent motel room, as well as outside the motel, then attempted to arrest the suspects as they left the room, according to Mullen.

Shots were fired, Mullen said, resulting in Bradford being hit.

Mullen refused comment on how police obtained knowledge of the alleged drug operation.

"These are dangerous times and we try to keep abreast of illegal operations," he said. "Between our two units, we had something going."

Algae May Affect Water

The Massachusetts Water Resources Authority announces a possible algae bloom has occurred within the agency's reservoir system.

The Authority's routine sampling program has found high algae concentrations in some areas of its reservoirs, a spokesman said. If sampling continues to show high concentrations, the MWRA will take the proper measures to treat the reservoir, she said.

High concentrations of algae could result in taste and odor problems in the communities supplied by the MWRA.

Customers with further questions can call the MWRA Public Affairs Office at 241-6057.

Quincy Key Link In South Shore Heritage Trail

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Among the ideas being considered to help establish a South Shore Heritage Trail between Quincy and Plymouth are a new video, highway signage and a "liveability magazine," according to officials involved with the project.

A tourism brochure designed to promote the trail, which would also encompass Braintree, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Kingston, Marshfield, Scituate and Weymouth, was unveiled last week at a press conference in the office of Mayor James Sheets.

"The real goal we have is to bring the South Shore together as an historical entity," said Sheets. "We ought to all work together to market the South Shore historically. There are historical sites and locations people should visit; the South Shore has a tremendous amount it can offer."

"We need to seriously make our people aware that tourism is a major factor in all of its cities and towns."

Organizations involved with the Heritage Trail include the mayor's office, Quincy Tourism Association, Quincy Savings Bank, the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, the Plymouth Area Chamber of Commerce and the Plymouth County Development Council. The project is being funded, in part, by $250,000 in state grants from the Weld Administration, with Quincy Savings being another major financial contributor.

South Shore Chamber of Commerce General Manager Terry Fancher said that the brochure is the first of "a number of joint projects to promote the area." Fancher noted that "some sort of liveability magazine through the Chamber, the like of which has not been done since 1974," is one idea being considered, as well as "the chance to do a video" for companies interested in settling in Quincy.

"It's going to bloom, as I guess you would say on the South Shore," said Fancher, referring to Quincy's Cleaner-Greener Program. "There's a lot more things out there (to see) besides Boston and Cape Cod."

Brooks Kelly, executive director of the Plymouth County Development Council, also expressed optimism in the future of the program but said that "some kind of signage program" will be necessary in aiding motorists along the South Shore Heritage Trail.

"If you can't find something," said Kelly, "it does no good."

Quincy Tourism Association President Maryanne McMahon stressed that teamwork between the organizations involved will also be crucial to the success of the program.

"We have to work on a cooperative effort," said McMahon. "If we do, we're just really going to be 100 percent (successful)."

McMahon said the brochure is to be distributed to tourist information centers and other area locations.

Quincy Savings Bank President Charles Simpson said the bank is proud to be a sponsor of the project.

"We're very happy to be a part of this, and we'd do it again," said Simpson.

Sheets, whose tourism efforts have helped bring to Quincy the new National Park Service Tourist Center at Presidents Place which opened Sunday and a U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum at the Fore River Shipyard which should open in the fall, said the collaborative South Shore effort will be particularly helpful to international travelers.

"When you have international visitors, you want them to see the sites, but also the context in which they (sites) occurred," said Sheets. "That's why working together is so important."

McMahon agreed. "Foreigners are very interested in how we live," she said, "and we have a story to tell."

Doane Street Gates Topic At Neighborhood Meeting Tonight

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson announces that a neighborhood meeting regarding the planned closing of the gates on Doane Street in Germantown will be held tonight (Thursday) from 7 to 9 p.m. in the City Council Chamber at City Hall.

The gates were installed in November following complaints from residents about motorists driving past "Do Not Enter" signs on the street as a shortcut to Palmer Street, the main road in Germantown. Kolson said the site has been a safety hazard for a long time.

"It's been a problem constantly," said Kolson.

"There's been an awful lot of near misses."

Kolson said a majority of the neighbors want to see the gates closed, but added that several public housing residents are opposed to the idea because they see them as a barrier between their neighborhood and the private homes on Doane Street.

According to Kolson, a tentative agreement he made with some of the residents had resulted in leaving the gates open during the winter so that fire engines and snow removal trucks could pass through the area.

However, the agreement, which called for closing the gates for the rest of the year, fell apart last week when the city planned to close the gates for good.

Kolson said he asked the Department of Public Works to delay closing the gates until after the neighborhood meeting so that residents will have a chance "to air their opinions" on the matter.

He also suggested that closing the gates permanently might be best for the area.

"The one indisputable piece of information," Kolson said, "is that when we closed the gates, it worked."

Rabies Clinic April 24

The Quincy Health Department will hold a rabies immunization clinic Saturday, April 24 from noon to 3 p.m. at the Quincy Animal Shelter, 56 Broad St., behind the VFW Bryan Post and Father Bill's Place.

The clinic will be held rain or shine. Cost is $8 for each dog and $8 for each cat. The health department strongly encourages pet owners to have their pets immunized against rabies, a serious disease.

Rabies is a viral disease transmitted mainly to dogs and cats through bite wounds from wildlife such as bats, skunks, foxes and raccoons. The usual fatal disease is extremely rare in humans and has been fairly uncommon among animals in this part of the country.

However, an outbreak of wildlife rabies among raccoons has progressed to the southwestern part of Massachusetts. To date, two raccoons have tested positive for rabies, one in Ashby and one in Fitchburg.

The health department advises pet owners to have their dogs and cats vaccinated and to avoid contact with wild animals.

For other preventive measures or information on rabies, contact the Division of Communicable Disease Control of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health at 522-3700 ext. 420 and/or the Quincy Health Department at 376-1273.

Remembering Joe Malick

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
The eight-line obituary in the April 3, 1993 edition of The Patriot Ledger simply stated that Joseph Malick, a Master Shellfish dealer for 60 years, entered into rest on April 1. But for those of us young boys growing up in Houghs Neck in the 1940s and 1950s, Joe Malick was a very important person.

After we considered ourselves too old to deliver newspapers (nowadays grownups deliver papers by automobile), digging clams became our source of income. Clam digging, like other occupations, had its good points as well as bad points. On the plus side, the hours were short and as teenagers we could earn good money. On the downside, you froze in the winter and sweated in the summer. We used to poke fun at ourselves by pointing out that the major qualifications for being a clam digger were "a strong back and a weak mind;" clam forks were affectionately known as "idiot sticks."

Since most clams had to be purified before consumption, a clam digger had to dig for and sell his clams to a master digger, who was required to transport the clams to Newburyport for purification. Joe Malick was a master digger and many of us dug for him over the years. In a rough, tough business, Joe Malick was an honorable man. He paid promptly for the clams that we dug and was always competitive with other master diggers.

When times were tough (if the bay was frozen over or you had a heavy date coming up), Joe was always there to advance a $10 or $20 bill or even more to tide us over the rough spots.

Joe was never a pillar of any religion or a civic or community leader, but by his example he taught us how to get along in a very competitive world. Joe Malick's alumni include those who went on to become successful in business and the professions (many a tuition payment was made from money earned on the clam flats). A few of Joe's boys even made it as politicians.

Joe Malick has passed on, but many of us have good memories of our association with him.

Remembering Fr. McMahon

Fr. John McMahon liked to look ahead.

Last year he was looking a whole year ahead to something special this year: the 50th anniversary of his ordination as a priest, the 55th anniversary of his graduation from Boston College and—his 80th birthday.

The retired pastor of St. Mary's Church, West Quincy, often dropped by The Sun office to chat or leave one of his famous letters-to-the-editor. Usually a protest of some sort. Example: People and businesses that refer to Christmas as Xmas.

He came by last May to say he was planning that triple celebration for this May 16.

"I've already booked the church (St. Mary's) for the Mass and the hall (Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center) for the reception."

And, he grinned: "I want to reserve the back page of The Sun for early next May to announce it."

He was excited as he spoke of the triple milestone celebration that he was so looking forward to. He looked great.

But just two or three weeks later—June 18—he died in his sleep. His celebration was not to be. Or, so it seemed then.

But now parishioners of St. Mary's Church where he served 24 years—four as assistant and 20 as pastor—are planning a special substitute celebration for May 15.

They are asking the City Council to rename the section of Reardon St. between St. Mary's church and the rectory from Crescent St. to Furnace Brook Parkway, "Fr. McMahon Way."

Plans are to dedicate it May 15 at an outdoor ceremony at 5:30 p.m., weather permitting. In the event of rain, the ceremony will be moved inside the church.

At 6:30 p.m. a Birthday Anniversary Mass will be celebrated in the church by retired Bishop Lawrence Riley, a long-time friend of Fr. McMahon. He was to have delivered the homily at the mass planned for May 16.

A dinner-dance will be held in Mullarkey Hall, downstairs at the church, following the Mass.

Proceeds will go to a newly established Fr. McMahon Scholarship Fund. It is planned to award $1,000 scholarships to two eighth grade graduates of St. Mary's School expecting to attend a Catholic high school in the fall.

Leo Meady, a close friend of Fr. McMahon, is chairman of the general committee planning these events. Rev. Ronald Bourgault, now pastor of St. Mary's, is actively involved in the tribute to his predecessor.

Dinner tickets are $16 per person and may be obtained at St. Mary's rectory or school or from members of the ticket committee: Elaine Reynolds (ticket coordinator), Elizabeth Beatson, Irene Eames, Steve DeRoche.

Reservations for tables of 10 may be made. Deadline for tickets is Sunday, May 9.

Fr. McMahon would have loved to be there. Somehow, you feel he will be.

QUINCY HAS BEEN unfairly painted a racist city by certain pop-offs in the past. It's too bad they weren't at the recent City Hall awards ceremonies held in conjunction with National Community Development Week.

The event, as City Planning Director Richard Meade put it was "an opportunity to showcase the Community Development Block Grant Program" which aids the needy in Quincy and in the nation.

A number of awards were presented to deserving persons who have helped make the program tick in Quincy.

Also showcased during the ceremonies were the first graders from Snug Harbor School, who sang several songs, winning the hearts and applause of those attending.

It wasn't just the songs. It was the youngsters' faces. A sea of beaming faces—white, black, Asian and Hispanic. All having the time of their lives performing together.

A racist city? No way!
Alex Rodriguez, David Harris and the Boston Globe, who have all tried to pin racist labels on Quincy should have been there. They would have found it enlightening.

Rodriguez, who frequently ran off at the mouth while director of the Massachusetts Commission Against Discrimination is now employed at the Cambridge Licensing Commission. And his mouth allegedly has gotten him into trouble.

A 21-year-old female co-worker claims Rodriguez continued telling jokes and stories of sexual nature so she filed charges of sexual harassment against him with—ironically—the MCAD he used to head.

LOOKS LIKE THERE could be a primary election contest for the Ward 4 City Council seat.

Steve Hawko, of White St., a state engineer with DEQE is "seriously considering" running.

If he does, he would be the third candidate, necessitating a primary runoff. Incumbent Tom Fabrizio is expected to seek re-election and 18-year-old Mike D'Amico made his candidacy official this week.

MILESTONE: City Clerk Joseph Shea turned 48 Sunday. Okay, Joe, a young 48.

NPS Visitors Center Expected To Attract 60,000 Tourists

According to Marianne Peak the addition of the center is the single most important event at the site since the Adams' family donated the site to the National Park Service in 1946.

The Site is made up of the Adams' Birthplaces at 133-141 Franklin St., "The Old House" at 135 Adams St., the Visitor Center and the United First Parish Church, where Presidents John and John Quincy Adams are interred in the family crypt.

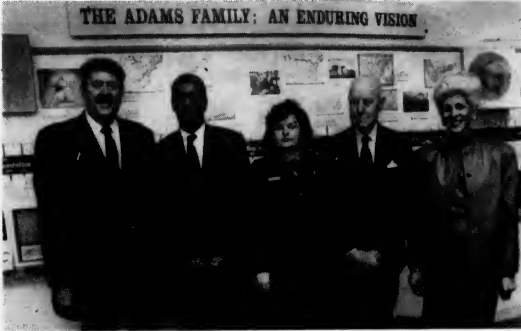

Although the church is legislated within National Park Service boundaries, and will have tours guided by park rangers, it has remained a separate entity and is still an active church.

"Before we had this Visitor Center," said Peak, "we had all these wonderful resources and no easy way to get people from one to another." She said all too often a visitor would come to Quincy, visit one part of the site and, rather than negotiate directions through Quincy, go back home.

"Now we have a central location," she said, "where a visitor can get an orientation of the all that Quincy has to offer, and information about all the sites in Quincy. It makes it all so much more accessible."

Included in the Visitor Center is a book shop, a time line of the Adams Family History, both in domestic and foreign affairs, and a staff of two rangers. One more ranger will be nearby at the United First Parish Church to give tours of the Adams family crypt.

Peak also said that the Visitor Center will provide

NATIONAL PARK SERVICE Visitors Center in Presidents Place officially opened Sunday. The center will provide historical information and brochures on Quincy, maps of historical sites in the city and a trolley service that will provide tours. Dignitaries taking part in the formal opening included, from left, Mayor James Sheets, Herbert Cables, acting director National Park Service; Marianne Peak, superintendent of Adams National Historic Site; Charles Francis Adams, sixth generation descendant of President John Quincy Adams; Marie Rust, regional director of Atlantic region of National Park Service which operates the center. access and information to historical sites not under National Park Management.

Quincy's historical sites will be even easier to visit when an inter-site trolley begins transporting visitors. "We'd like people to be able to just park their cars at Quincy Center," Peak said. "It's been my experience that visitors like to be led, to not have to worry about directions from place to place on unfamiliar streets."

The Old Town Trolley Company was granted a 60 day operating license on April 5, but, according to Peak, there are still some negotiations to be worked out. Trolley service will begin "hopefully May or June."

The ceremonies on Sunday also included a reenactment of Abigail Adams reading a letter delivered on horseback by John Quincy Adams, about

Quincy's Yesterdays

Hedges Hits Poor Primary Voter Turnout

Only 2,795 of Quincy's 41,000 registered voters turned out for the presidential primary election and Rep. Charles W. Hedges called it a "sitdown strike" by voters against the state's primary election system.

The election cost Quincy about $5,400, or $2 for each vote cast.

Hedges and Sen. Mason Sears of Dedham, running as a team for district delegates to the Republican national convention, defeated Charles W. Williams of Brockton and A. Wendell Clark of Quincy.

Despite the low vote, the results were slow coming in, largely due to the fact that three new precincts - 6 and 8 in Ward 6 and 8 in Ward 1 - had just been created to handle voter growth.

In other contests on the primary ballot:

William R. Abbott, representing the young Republicans against the Old Guard, defeated Louis K. Badger for the state committee post in the First Norfolk District.

Arthur L. Morris topped J. Girard White for the job of representing the district on the Democratic State Committee.

The Massachusetts Republican delegation to the convention was planning to cast its 35 votes for Sen. Leverett Saltonstall on the first ballot and switch to Rep. Joseph W. Martin on the second.

Marie's Kitchen

By MARIE J. D'OLIMPIO

Gail's Super Gazpacho

On our recent trip to Florida, we were invited to the lavish home of our friend Gail in Lake Worth for a delightful dinner.

With the exotic table setting by the swimming pool surrounded by fruit trees and with soft breezes blowing, it felt like paradise.

On her menu was the most delicious soup, her own version of gazpacho with a secret ingredient. Instead of using tomato juice, she used a Bloody Mary mix.

It will be a great summertime start for some our cookouts. And one that certainly can be made ahead of time and refrigerated.

Gail's Super Gazpacho

3 fresh tomatoes, diced
1/2 cup diced cucumber
1/2 cup diced celery

1 medium sized diced onion
1/2 diced green pepper
1/2 diced red pepper
a couple of teaspoons of fresh parsley (chopped)
2 stalks of scallion (chopped)
2 cloves of garlic (minced)
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 quart Bloody Mary mix
salt and pepper to taste

Prepare all of the ingredients and mix into a large bowl, add the Bloody Mary mix and refrigerate until ready to serve.

After this, we had a pineapple, banana salad, stuff squash, asparagus with cheese sauce and delicious desserts.

Somehow a tuna sandwich the next day seemed rather bland!

Get Those Cleanups Started

Lawn areas should be thoroughly raked, limed, and fertilized. If crab grass has been a problem, put an application of crab grass pre-emergence control on before the forsythia drops its flowers. Turn over vegetable gardens adding if necessary humus or well rotted manure. Clean out perennial and rose beds removing leaves and other accumulated materials and cut off dead branches. A light fertilizing with a 5-10-5 fertilizer will help get these plants off to a healthy start.

Don't plant any annuals for another 3-4 weeks since frost is still a possibility.

Awards Presented At City Hall

Ceremony Showcases Quincy's CDBG Program

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Plaques, citations and other accolades were awarded at a recent awards ceremony held in conjunction with National Community Development Week.

A number of city departments, neighborhood associations, officials and individuals were honored in recognition of their community development efforts in the City of Quincy.

The ceremony was held in the City Council Chamber at City Hall.

Planning Director Richard Meade told those at the event that the ceremony was "an opportunity to showcase the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) Program," which benefits the needy in Quincy and throughout the country.

"And you're the reason it works," Meade told the audience.

Following Meade's opening comments, four individuals whose organizations are subgrantees of CDBG spoke of the many ways the program helps countless numbers of people and thanked Mayor James Sheets, the City Council and other officials for their part in making CDBG work in the city.

Rosemary Wahlberg, executive director of Quincy Community Action Programs, which works to provide fair housing services for minority families, said "very few people realize the benefits" of the program.

"Fair housing comes from the CDBG block grant," she said.

Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services President Dick Pederson voiced similar sentiments.

"The CDBG funds are instrumental in providing needed services to the residents of the City of Quincy," said Pederson.

Quincy Council on Aging President John Noonan said CDBG has greatly aided all of the "numerous important services" provided by his organization, particularly the "transporting of Quincy seniors for medical appointments and treatments." Noonan said the funds allow the Council on Aging to utilize six vans that offer senior citizens free transportation to local doctors, dentists and hospitals.

Edward Nelson, chairperson of the Quincy Housing Partnership, spoke of how CDBG has aided his organization in providing housing "substantially below market rate" to lower income women.

"I don't think we could maintain our type of organization without the (CDBG) money from the federal government," he said.

One of the highlights of the ceremony, following the subgrantees' speeches, was a performance of music and poetry by first grade students from the Snug Harbor School. The students, Meade said after the ceremony, were there to show their appreciation for CDBG funds that have benefited the Germantown section of the city.

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, who quipped that "I never want to speak after kids again" in reference to the students' crowd-pleasing show, spoke on behalf of the City Council (Council President Charles Phelan was unable to attend).

DeCristofaro called the various city agencies whose works coincide with CDBG "wonderful, important facets" of the program and said the City Council will continue to do the best it can in working with the agencies in the future.

Offering a federal perspective on the CDBG Program was Robert Brown, program manager of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) Boston Regional Office.

Brown said the U.S. Senate is currently reviewing, as part of President Bill Clinton's Economic Stimulus Package, a bill that contains $2.5 billion earmarked for the national implementation of the CDBG Program. The increase would mean an additional $1 million for the City of Quincy, according to Brown.

Brown added that since its inception in 1974, CDBG has never been "a pork barrel program" but something that aids the elderly, battered women, homeless and other needy people and "makes their lives a little bit easier."

During his speech, Brown presented Mayor James Sheets with a copy of the official declaration from HUD National Secretary Henry Cisneros commemorating National Community Development Week (April 5-11).

The presentation of the HUD Community Development Award to Quincy Interfaith Sheltering Coalition Executive Director Joseph Finn followed Brown's speech. The coalition operates Father Bill's Place, a homeless shelter on Broad Street in Quincy.

Finn spoke briefly, thanking Sheets for his help with the CDBG Program and saying the HUD award is actually "in recognition of the community and its great support, without which it (Father Bill's Place) wouldn't be possible."

Rev. Roger Kwam, president of the sheltering coalition and one of its founding members, said that while the coalition's work "was at first a lonely work," the results of that work are today something to be proud of.

"We've developed a program that would stand today with any city, anywhere," said Kwam, pastor of First Presbyterian Church in Quincy. "It continues to help people get a new start and live productive lives."

The ceremony concluded with Sheets' mayoral address and the presentation of plaques and citations.

"One of the questions I always ask myself is 'What is the measure of my life?'" said Sheets. "Part of that basic philosophy is that in public life, I want to leave 'my world,' however that is defined, as a little better place."

"The question we should ask ourselves (today) is, 'What is the difference this program has made?' It has made a difference for hundreds of thousands of people (nationwide) and made their lives better. Since 1974, this program has made a major difference—not because it's a pork barrel program, but because it genuinely makes a difference in people's lives."

The following city departments, agencies and committees received plaques in recognition of

Beware Of Lead Poisoning

(NAPS)—More than 200,000 children a year, as well as many adults, contract lead poisoning. That's why it's so important to know the facts.

According to the U.S. EPA, your home is at high risk of lead contamination if:

- it has lead pipes and/or lead connectors from the water main.
- it has copper pipes with lead solder.

The age of your home may also be a factor. Plumbing installed prior to 1930 most likely includes lead pipes. Plumbing with copper pipes installed before 1988, may contain lead solder.

Preventive Steps

1. Flush your pipes before use. This means running your tap water until it becomes as cold as it will get.

2. Use only cold water for drinking and cooking.

3. Inspect your plumbing system to detect lead. Lead pipes and solder are dull gray, when scratched, they look shiny.

4. Dissolved lead is tasteless and odorless. Test your pipes with a lead detection kit that uses U.S. EPA-recognized laboratories.

Enzone's Water-Alert Lead Test Kit, for example, lets consumers have their water professionally analyzed at EPA guidelines for lead contamination; to as little as one part per billion.

Lead in water and paint is a problem that can be prevented. A free brochure shows how.

House paint is another potential source of lead contamination. Any house painted prior to 1978 is at risk of containing lead-based paint. Before conducting any home renovations, test all painted surfaces. Enzone's Lead-Zone Test Kit utilizes non-toxic paper test strips that, when activated by water, turn bright red if a problem exists. If lead is detected, do not scrape or sand the surface—contact your local health department.

Both of these Enzone products are available in supermarkets, hardware stores, pharmacies and home centers.

Dr. Bruce Indek Addresses Medical Jogger's Symposium

Dr. Bruce Indek, a Quincy chiropractor, recently addressed the American Medical Jogger's Association which consists of medical and related physicians who deal in sports related injuries from running. As an annual event to coordinate with the Boston Marathon, the American Medical Jogger's Association holds this symposium once a year on running related injuries.

The association devoted this year's symposium on alternative health care since, recently, the New England Journal of Medicine had shown that millions of Americans visit alternative health care.

In the past years, the medical community has shunned chiropractic's involvement at the Marathon but, due to Dr. Indek's efforts, there was a separate and distinct chiropractic group treating athletes after they cross the finish line at the YMCA. Dr. Indek viewed his invitation to speak to the Association, along with the acknowledgment of chiropractic's involvement, as the first big step in accepting alternative means of care for injured athletes.

HELP FOR PROBLEM HEMORRHOIDS

You can eat right, get plenty of exercise, and follow healthy toilet procedures - and still come down with a nasty case of inflamed hemorrhoids. The good news is that medical treatment can often be accomplished within minutes on an outpatient basis in a doctor's office or at a surgical center. External hemorrhoids that have formed a blood clot may be surgically removed via local anesthetic and small incision. Internal hemorrhoids can be treated in a variety of ways, including injection therapy, infrared coagulation (using an infrared light to stimulate healing), and banding (placing tight elastic bands around hemorrhoids until it falls off within a few days).

P.S. Healthy hemorrhoids are a natural, useful part of the body's elimination system. Everybody has them!

Although inflamed hemorrhoids can be both painful and embarrassing, they are fortunately very easy to remove in the privacy of your doctor's office. For more information on this topic or on the prevention of heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. We focus on treating the patient, rather than the disease. Office hours are by appointment at 101 Adams St., Suite 24, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

Why? Why, why, WHY did this have to happen to me? When misfortune, disaster or tragedy occurs, the question is difficult to answer. Even if there is a known answer, and most of the time there is none, it is an unacceptable answer.

If one is presumptuous enough to try to answer; if one resorts to the retort of courage being needed, one knows how futile it can be.

Yet, when bewilderment and grief exist, a mortal human being can help. In one instance, there was an unforgettable scene which will always be remembered.

A close friend of a grief stricken family stopped in, unaware that tragedy had struck. Shocked at the bomb shell news, he stumbled around for words. Then impromptu and certainly in unheeded manner, he replied, "I can't tell you. No one can. I'm not an overly religious man as you know, but I think it will do us all good. Let's pray. I believe it would help." It was a beautiful prayer. And it helped. It always can...

Baseball

North Edged By Billerica, 6-5

By TOM SULLIVAN

The North Quincy baseball team had a three-game winning streak snapped Monday when it lost a tough 6-5 decision to Billerica and the Raiders hoped to get back on the winning track Tuesday when they hosted Plymouth in a makeup of the scheduled season's opener that was stormed out.

North (3-2) will play at Weymouth Monday at 3:30 and will host Bridgewater-Raynham next Wednesday at Adams Field at 3:30.

Monday's loss was a hard one for the Raiders, who fell behind, 5-0, in the first inning and battled back to tie the game in the top of the seventh only to have Billerica score the winning run in the bottom of the seventh.

Danny Duncan made his first pitching start for North and went all the way, pitching outstanding ball after the first to blank the winners until the seventh.

"Danny did a fine job after that first inning and he will definitely help us as a third starter," coach

Leo Donovan said. "I was pleased with the way our kids battled back after falling behind, 5-0, right at the start."

Dave Reinhart went 2-for-3 for North and Mark Cahill went 2-for-4. Adam Calvert had an RBI double and Jimmy Sapienza drove in the tying run in the seventh with a single.

Last Friday Mike Patch pitched an outstanding game to record his second win as North topped Taunton, 6-2.

Patch allowed only two hits, struck out 14 and walked only one.

Taunton made things easy for the Raiders, who scored only one earned run. Tiger pitchers walked 11 and their teammates committed five errors.

Earlier North defeated Silver Lake, 6-2, as Sean Donovan went the distance, giving up only one earned run and striking out seven. He evened his record at 1-1.

Adam Calvert was 2-for-4 with two RBI, Duncan was 2-for-4 with two runs scored and Charlie Rozanitis had a two-run single for the Raiders.

NANCY GLENNON of Quincy was a member of the Suffolk University women's Varsity basketball team this year. A freshman majoring in bio-chemistry, she is a graduate of Sacred Heart High School in Weymouth.

Quincy At Taunton Friday

The Quincy baseball team, scheduled to be off this week, will play at Taunton Friday at 10:30 a.m. in the makeup of the scheduled Old Colony League opener postponed by the snow and rain and will try to improve upon its 3-2 record.

The Presidents will host Barnstable Monday at Adams Field at 3:30 and will be at Silver Lake next Wednesday at 3:30.

Quincy had its first poor game of the season last Friday when it lost, 12-3, to Falmouth.

Sean MacDonald made his first pitching start for the Presidents and was hit hard, while the batters were pretty well kept in control by Falmouth pitching.

Duane Holmes, Tom Malvesti and Steve Miller led the offense for Quincy.

The previous day the Presidents rebounded from a tough loss to Plymouth to edge Boston Latin, 4-3, in another makeup game on Malvesti's sacrifice fly in the bottom of the seventh.

Malvesti had three RBI and Robbie Kane, who scored the winning run, went 2-for-4 with two runs scored.

John Russell pitched all the way for the Presidents to gain his second straight victory.

Earlier Quincy dropped a 3-2 squeaker to Plymouth, one of the favorites to win the league title.

Malvesti pitched all the way and, despite his second fine route-going performance, suffered the loss to even his record at 1-1.

Jeff Paluseo drove in the winning run in the top of the sixth inning.

Trailing, 3-1, in the seventh, Quincy scored on singles by Miller and Noel DiBona, but left the tying run on base.

Quincy had previously scored in the fifth when Kane doubled and later scored on Jeff Craig's sacrifice fly.

Quincy Runners In Marathon

A large number of Quincy runners started in the Boston Marathon and several finished despite the heat.

Bob Seamans, veteran marathoner, ran with a friend, Dave Wilson, head chef at Appalachian Mountain Club, Pinkham Notch, N.H. Both finished the race, though Wilson was in tough shape and struggled to finish. They finished hand-in-hand.

"I wanted to stay with him as he was having his troubles," Seamans said.

Former Sen. Paul Harold again ran but had to drop out two miles from the finish due to the heat. "It was just too much for me," he said.

Richard Doubleday of Quincy finished in 3:00:45 and Quincy's John McGee finished in 3:02:52. Mike Linnane of Wollaston finished in 4:10.

A large number of younger runners from Quincy started, including several running the marathon for the first time.

Youth Basketball

Over 75 At City Clinic and Jamboree

The Quincy Recreation Department recently conducted its annual end of season Basketball Clinic and Jamboree for participants in its citywide elementary after school and Saturday recreation programs.

Recreation Director Barry Welch said over 75 boys and girls participated in the activity designed to instruct elementary age participants in the skills of basketball under game conditions. Participation and not competition is emphasized throughout the program.

Before playing a series of round robin mini-games, participants took part in a clinic conducted by Brian Buckley, head basketball coach at Boston College High School and a long time leader in the Quincy Recreation Program. Buckley emphasized drills that each youngster could practice on his or her own, and would be fun as he or she learned new skills.

After a series of 11 round robin mini-games, Snug Harbor captured the Jamboree Cup in a 12-11 thriller over a combined Atlantic-Parker team.

In mini-game action Merrymount started play with a come from behind 11-9 victory over Beechwood. Pat Foley with four points led the Beechwood team followed by Mike Buckley and Kevin Holleran with two each.

Terrance Nolan had one free throw. Matt Graham was the game's leading scorer with seven of Merrymount's 11 points. Mike Keddy had the other four. Kelly Flynn and Steve Kabilian showed good rebounding skills for the Paul Kearns-coached Merrymount team. Brian Desher and Kenny Reichel were cited for their defensive play for the Dan Coughlin-coached Beechwood Knoll team.

A peninsula team of combined players from Atherton Hough and Quantum jumped out to an early lead while defeating Montclair, 10-4.

Billy Wan and Steve Barbuto scored for Dean Zoia-coached Montclair. Ryan Hutchins had six and Ben Powell four for Atherton Hough-Quantum. Coach Michelle Drury praised the playmaking of Chris Salter and Dan Galligan.

Jason Wakelin's championship Snug Harbor team started its run with a 20-8 victory over Atlantic-Parker. Danny Kelly's nine points was tops, followed by Jason Shields' five, Kaleena Chase with four coming off offensive rebounds and Chris Moar two for Snug Harbor. Coach Patricia Welch saw Kelly's Liacciardi, Kieran Ryan two and Dave Buckley two in Atlantic-Parker's first round defeat.

Welch's club bounced back to defeat Montclair, 18-10. Phil McGillicuddy had 10 points, Buckley two and Liacciardi four. Coach Zoia saw Wan score four, Mike Johnson two and Sean Dean chip in two for Montclair. Pat Delaney showed great hustle. Jacquelin Zoia and Darryl Zoia show great ballhandling skill.

Danny and Colleen Kelly were the big guns for Snug Harbor as it eliminated Merrymount, 12-3. Danny had six, followed by Colleen with four, and Moar added the other two points. Coach Wakelin also praised the rebounding of Diane Morgan and the hustle of Ken Naumann and brother John Naumann.

Mike Keddy had all three of Merrymount's points. Coach Kearns pointed to the ballhandling of Paul Donovan and Matt Graham for keeping the cold-shooting Merrymount in the game.

Beechwood Knoll bounced back from a slow start to force Atlantic-Parker to overtime. In overtime a Dave Buckley jumper gave Atlantic an 18-16 victory. Matt O'Malley had nine for Beechwood, while Matt Joyce sparked the offense with some key passes off the Beechwood fast break. Kevin and Dan Holleran demonstrated strong fundamentals while leading the team in rebounds. The Beechwood team was the jamboree's largest squad and showed great teamwork throughout the day.

In its bid to play in the tournament championship game, Atherton-Quantum dropped a 14-12 heartbreaker as Phil McGillicuddy sank two free throws for Atlantic-Parker with no time remaining for a 14-12 win.

Chris Salter led Atherton-Quantum with six, Ryan Hutchins had four, Ben Powell two and Tom Pezzallo two. Dan Long was cited for his outstanding defense.

The championship game was another nip and tuck battle. The one-point victory was sealed with a Danny Kelly field goal late in the game. McGillicuddy, Buckley, and Liacciardi were the scorers for Atlantic-Parker. Kevin Ryan captured some key rebounds. Colleen Kelly had two, Jacob Shield four and the hard-working Kaleena Chase two in the balanced scoring for Snug Harbor.

Permit To Store 40,000 Gallons Of Gasoline

Peter Palmer, of Peters Realty Trust, was granted a license to store 40,000 gallons of gasoline underground at Eric's Auto Body Repair, Inc., at 324 Quincy Ave.

Fire Chief Thomas Gorman said the site passed safety inspection.

Two Pull Man From Burning Vehicle

By BILL DONCASTER
Quincy Police credit two men with pulling James Mulcahy of Quincy from his burning car during a car accident on Burgin Parkway, Saturday.

The accident, which is still under investigation, claimed the life of Michael Perry, 34, of Rockland.

According to Quincy Police Sgt. Hugo Cardarelli, Chris Pepe, 21, of Canton, and Craig Allen, 22, of Boston pulled Mulcahy from the wreck.

"It all happened so fast," Pepe said, "I don't remember too much." He does recall kicking through the windshield, he recalls himself and friend Allen pulling Mulcahy's 200 pound frame from the burning car.

Mulcahy's wife, Dorothy, and two friends, Ann and Wilbur Lewis, had crawled out of the cars window to avoid the flames. James Mulcahy's left side was paralyzed due to a stroke.

According to Pepe, minutes later he saw Don Jensen of Quincy pull up. Jensen pulled his car jack from the back of his station wagon, and threw it through the window of the burning van, in an effort to save Michael Perry.

BRINGING UP THE REAR

In the old days, cars were outfitted with rigid axles and leaf springs for their rear suspensions. This setup was simple, but it linked the rear wheels so that a bump affecting one wheel also affected the other. To solve this problem, car manufacturers developed independent rear suspensions which enabled them to mount rear wheels separately. Consisting of upper and lower control arms and a series of locating rods called links, independent rear suspensions offer better control over bumps and improved fuel economy due to lighter weight. However, multi-link rear suspensions now present a number of elements which must be checked regularly to ensure safety and performance.

These include rear bushings, shock absorbers, struts, springs, links, control arms, and pivot points.

HINT: The condition of the rear tires often gives an indication of the health of the rear suspension.

To Boost Manning Levels City To Hire 10 Firefighters

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The city will hire at least 10 firefighters after the new fiscal year begins July 1 to boost manning levels and to keep all stations open and equipment in service, Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday.

Sheets said the new firefighters will fill vacancies created in the department by retirements over the last 18 months. He emphasized no additional money is required to fund the new firefighters because the revenue had been used for overtime.

Over the last year and a half, salaries from the retired firefighters have been transferred from the salary account to overtime. In turn, the overtime account has been used to keep manning levels up in light of fewer firefighters.

With the anticipated new hiring, Sheets said money from the overtime account will be diverted back into the salary account for FY 94 which begins July 1. The mayor said at least 10 firefighters may be hired because of vacancies, and perhaps several more because some present firefighters are considering joining the police force.

Sheets said the hiring will take place after July 1. The new firefighters may be hired all at once or half may join the department at one time and the other half later in the fiscal year. Sheets said he will discuss the hiring method with Fire Chief Thomas Gorman and Personnel Director Kathleen Yaeger.

The mayor said he did not move to fill the vacancies sooner because he was unsure of the "fiscal future" of the municipal budget, particularly the public safety budgets. He said hiring new firefighters only to lay them off again because of fiscal restraints would have been bad for the department's moral.

As a result, the mayor decided to add to the overtime account.

Sheets said he now believes the city's finances have "bottomed out" and now the process of rebuilding some departments can begin. Earlier this year, the mayor announced plans to hire 17 new police officers to fill vacancies in that department.

"After three years of budget cutting and trimming, we have now bottomed out and we are feeling out way back to determine what we can and cannot do."

"We will be filling positions vacated by retirements because we don't believe, at least over the next two years, we'll be cutting the fire budget any more," the mayor said.

Because of budget cuts brought on by reductions in state aid and soaring fixed costs in recent years, 14 firefighters were laid off several years ago. Sheets said those firefighters would be notified of the impending hiring and offered their jobs back before any new people are offered positions.

"If they (the laid off firefighters) want to come back, they will have an opportunity to come back. My sense is, however, that many have already settled with other departments."

Other preference will be given to the top scorers of a recent Civil Service exam. The mayor said he would like to hire applicants from Quincy but is bound by Civil Service laws.

"You like to hire people who live in your city," he said.

The mayor said his decision to hire additional firefighters was "precipitated" because several firefighters have applied to join the Quincy police force. There is a provision in their contract which allows public safety officials to join a different department provided they meet the requirements.

With the chance that the fire department may lose more men, Sheets

Driver Pleads Innocent In Fatality

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A 21-year-old Quincy man pleaded innocent Tuesday in Quincy District Court on charges in connection with an accident last Saturday morning that claimed the life of a 23-year-old Quincy woman.

David Hutchings of 21 Winslow Rd. was charged with vehicular homicide, drunken driving, speeding and driving to endanger after his car struck and killed Eileen Campbell of 112 Hollis Ave. He was released on $2,000 cash bail and is scheduled to appear at a May 12 pre-trial conference.

Police said Miss Campbell was crossing Quincy Shore Drive Saturday after finishing a walk with friends along Wollaston Beach when she was struck by Hutchings' 1993 Pontiac Grand Am at approximately 1:30 a.m. She died at about 4:15 a.m. at Quincy Hospital.

State Police Trooper Larry Gillis said Hutchings was traveling "well above" the 30 m.p.h. speed limit at the time of the accident. Hutchings was arrested at the scene and later released on bail.

The accident is believed to be only the second pedestrian fatality on Quincy Shore Drive since new traffic lights were installed in 1984, according to another state police source. The other occurred last year.

A lifelong resident of Quincy, Miss Campbell was a 1988 graduate of North Quincy High School and would have graduated from the University of Massachusetts in Boston in June. She was employed as a security technician at State Street Bank and Trust Co. in Quincy.

Hutchings was originally scheduled to be arraigned Monday, according to Dist. Atty. William Delahunt. The arraignment was postponed one day, Delahunt said, because Hutchings is a distant cousin of his and a special prosecutor had to be appointed to avoid any conflict of interest.

Quincy 2000 Agenda Has Plans, Proposals, Programs

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Retail incubation. Facade and signage improvements. Better access to Quincy Center.

Retail marketing analysis. The Hancock Parking Area project. Tourism. Attracting a hotel.

It's all part of the current agenda put forth by Quincy 2000, the public-private development corporation charged with revitalizing the city's retail and commercial districts.

In fact, Quincy 2000 lists more than 20 specific plans of action or proposals which address retail commercial industrial development, tourism and cultural development, transportation infrastructure and financial incentive programs.

Through these proposals, ideas and courses of action, Quincy 2000 hopes to revitalize the Quincy Center, Wollaston and North Quincy business districts while improving the quality of life for Quincy residents, say Quincy 2000 Chairman Thomas Galvin and Executive Director Charles D'Aprix.

To increase retail commercial industrial development, D'Aprix said Quincy 2000 is lending a hand to a number of projects and programs, including the Hancock Parking area project unveiled earlier this year.

"We are currently working with the developer (Dickinson Development Corp) to attract a major retail chain. We'll provide them with information to assess the viability of the project," D'Aprix said.

If the present proposal does not pan out, D'Aprix said Quincy 2000 would assemble data for another development project, including financial incentives, marketing and site information.

While searching for a major retail anchor for the Hancock parking area project, Quincy 2000 will also seek smaller businesses for vacant storefronts using a retail marketing analysis.

"We want to look at what is supportable in Quincy Center, what's the competition, what the retail mix should ultimately have and what gives us a competitive advantage over other retail outlets," D'Aprix said.

The executive director said the corporation is close to hiring a retail marketing analyst, perhaps one from Washington. "It's important to find someone who understands retailing but is objective," he said.

The analyst will examine the situation and formulate a study. The study will also include direct marketing surveys to Quincy homes and businesses.

"Based on that study, we'll do a retail attraction program using direct mail and trade shows to attract smaller retail chains," D'Aprix said.

Information from this retail marketing analysis will be fed into Quincy 2000's "retail incubation program," an innovative approach designed to help people start their own business.

The study will show which businesses have a better chance of success. After the study is complete, which maybe within a month, the corporation will take applications from prospective entrepreneurs.

Applicants, a number of whom have already inquired about the program, will be screened by a group of experts, including local bankers, Quincy College faculty, hired consultants, and local merchants.

The five or six applicants with the most promising ideas will move on to the next step: A six-week training course covering how to write a business plan, control inventory, hire and fire employees, control costs and attract customers.

The budding business people would then receive help with financing, finding the right location and negotiating a lease.

"We would provide limited financing, enough to get things rolling," D'Aprix said.

In some businesses, Quincy 2000 will have a financial stake or "equity position," meaning the corporation will make money if the business succeeds. "Should the firm grow, our equity position increases. It's not a pre-requisite to be in an equity position," D'Aprix added, noting services may also be offered instead of equity.

Another major effort Quincy 2000 will undertake is marketing tourism and cultural development.

To assist the tourism thrust, D'Aprix said Quincy 2000 will establish a "spin-off" corporation which will provide professional tourism development administration with a paid staff. The corporation, which has the support of the National Park Service, the mayor's office and the Quincy 2000 Board of Directors, will work on promotions and coordinate all tourism and visitor activities, D'Aprix said.

Quincy 2000 is also assessing the need for a cultural center, ideally in Quincy Center. D'Aprix said the center could meet the city's community and artist needs, while providing classroom space for Quincy College, an inn for business travelers and convention space for seminars.

"We envision a multi-use project and Quincy 2000 will work to identify sites and federal financial sources," D'Aprix said.

Galvin added, "It satisfies several needs and at the same time, it leverages several assets of the community. It's a very unique opportunity."

There are other aspects to Quincy 2000's present mission, including more parking, better access to retail districts, and improved store facades and signage.

D'Aprix said improved access to Quincy Center is the "lynch pin" for future development. "We need to address quickly, decisively and practically the issue of increased accessibility to Quincy Center looking at the most access with the least disruption," D'Aprix said, adding the corporation hopes to secure state and federal funds for "ready-to-go" infrastructure projects, a priority of President Clinton.

Improved accessibility essentially calls for widening existing roads and putting in a new road, perhaps but not necessarily the cross-town connector.

As part of its financial incentive program, Quincy 2000 is making available a loan pool for facades and a grant/loan program for retail sign upgrades.

The corporation is offering loans at one and a half percent to business owners who want to fix up facades. Besides beautifying storefronts, the new facades will provide jobs for laborers.

"We want to identify areas that need to be improved and approach people that we can be the source (of the loan)," D'Aprix said, noting the corporation has received $300,000 in community development block grant money to assist business owners.

The sign program will begin with grants and later move to low-interest loans.

"The key is we'll work with appropriate city authorities to establish sign guidelines, and have aesthetically pleasing facades and signs," D'Aprix said.

Bellotti Office Hours May 6

the Natural Resources and State Administration committees, will hear constituent concerns and input and answer questions regarding the current legislative session.

For 90-Day Trial Period

Deli Given Two Extra Hours By Board

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Montclair Deli will be open an additional two hours a night for a trial period of 90 days.

The Quincy License Board Tuesday ruled that the deli, located at 218 West Squantum St., will be allowed to open its doors Monday through Saturday from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. The deli's regular hours of operation are Monday through Saturday from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Although the original request had been for hours of Monday through Saturday from 7 to 10 p.m., Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey suggested that the deli close an hour earlier as a compromise with neighbors opposed to the request.

William Oliver, who operates the deli, told the board that Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien recently held a neighborhood meeting on the matter and that the only concern raised by neighbors was "kids hanging around" outside the deli while it is open.

Oliver, who noted that he was requesting the additional hours mainly to sell ice cream, said there would be no such problem if the extension of hours were granted.

"I've been there almost three years, and I haven't had any problems with kids or gangs or anything," he said.

Two residents, however, expressed opposition to the request at the meeting.

Roger Lyons of 211 West Squantum St. said he was against an extension of hours because there is already a parking problem in the neighborhood caused by the presence of the deli. Lyons listed the "late-night illumination" from the deli's lights and problems caused by deliveries at the deli as among the other reasons the board might deny the request.

Mary Wrinn of 238 West Squantum St. also voiced opposition to the request.

"Residential areas should not be subjected to late-night loitering," she said.

City Clerk Joseph Shea, chairman of the board, said he had received two other letters from residents concerned about the extension of hours.

He also read a letter from Chretien, who suggested that the request be granted for a 90-trial period "as a potential compromise."

The board agreed that the compromise was a good solution and told Oliver that he would have appear before the board again at its July 20 meeting. Mulvey then suggested that the extension be lessened by one hour.

A $1,000 CONTRIBUTION is presented to U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum Executive Director Bill MacMullen, right, by Wallace St. John, owner of the Eagle Flag Co. in Weymouth. Those who donate $1,000 to the museum become "plank owners" and special life-time members of the museum which is scheduled to open at the Fore River Shipyard in the fall. Benefactors who contribute less receive other privileges and gifts. To make a contribution, call 479-7900 or visit the museum's office at 1250 Hancock St. (Presidents Place), Quincy Center.

City To Hire 10 Firefighters

decided to move forward with the hiring. Without the additional firefighters, the mayor said he may have been forced to close one of the city's eight fire stations.

"We want to keep all the fire stations open because if you start closing stations, you end up reducing fire coverage in one area of the city."

He also noted that over the last year, manning shortages have put equipment out of service temporarily. "This has occurred quite often. That's something you don't want to happen."

"If you close a station, you can condense operations but then there's an area not as well covered."

The hiring of at least 10 new firefighters will probably save the city money, Sheets said. The new firefighters will assume entry-level, lower-paid positions but replace higher-paid firefighters who have stepped down from the force.

License Granted For Wollaston Restaurant

The Quincy License Board Tuesday granted a request for a new restaurant to open at 895 Quincy Shore Drive, Wollaston.

Applicant Thomas Riley told the board that he planned to sell the same types of foods sold at the Chicago Franks restaurant previously located at the site. The Chicago Franks menu had included foods such as hot dogs, hamburgers and fish.

Riley, who plans to open the restaurant under the name Ashby's, said he had previous restaurant experience in South Carolina and at the Holiday Inn in Randolph where he is currently employed.

City Clerk Joseph Shea, chairman of the board, said that City Council President Charles Phelan had sent a letter to the board in favor of the license.

Former Ward 6 Councillor Joanne Condon-Walsh and John Francis Nettles, manager of the Jack Conway & Co. office in Quincy, also spoke in support of the request, saying that Riley is a "responsible young man" and "dedicated individual" whose business would be a benefit to the area.

The hours of operation at the site will be Monday through Sunday from 10:30 a.m. to midnight with winter hours (Nov. 1 to March 31) of 10:30 a.m. to 10 p.m.

NBC News To Visit QCAP's Head Start

Quincy Community Action Program's Head Start—serving children in Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth and Hull—will be visited by NBC News Wednesday, May 5 for an upcoming report on the Head Start program.

QCAP's Head Start program has been garnering positive media attention for its receipt of a second, perfect 100 percent evaluation by the federal government. While every Head Start in the nation is required to undergo an in-depth evaluation by federal representatives every three years, QCAP's Head Start is the only program in New England to have received two perfect evaluations.

The NBC report will feature QCAP's Head Start as an example of a model Head Start program.

In addition, QCAP's Head Start will be spotlighted during the May 16 Red Sox game as part of WSBK-TV's "Pitching In for Kids" campaign.

The program is also gaining recognition within the national Head Start community. An article on QCAP's Head Start program will be featured in an upcoming edition of the journal of the National Head Start Association.

High Praise For Camp Fire Leaders

Editor, The Quincy Sun:

There is good news for the children of Quincy. The good news is that there are adults in this community that really care about them, who set time aside every week nine months a year to be with them, who guide them through challenging adventures and help them to work together toward positive change in their own lives and in their communities.

These adults are Camp Fire leaders. During National Volunteer Recognition Week our hats go off to:

Paula Gordon, Stacey Verrico, Mary O'Connell, Patricia Fatsae, Faith Raimondo, Nancy Norton, Gianina Routhier, all our Quincy Camp Fire leaders whose commitment to youth is making a difference in their lives and in the health of this community.

Today's newspapers and media are filled with stories of the manifestations of a generation of children in crisis. Whether in cities or suburbs youth are sending tragic messages to us all through acts of violence, vandalism, suicide, drug use and other destructive behaviors. Instead of just feeling alarmed, Camp Fire leaders get involved.

Children need adults in their lives who love and care about them and who are willing to listen to them, give them guidance, challenge them to be their best and trust them with responsibility. Camp Fire leaders do that and more. They deserve our highest praise and deepest respect for caring for our children.

3 Want Council Presidency

The city election is still months away but there's already a behind-the-scenes campaign being waged for next year's City Council presidency.

CHRETIEN

Councillors Tim Cahill, Mike Cheney and Larry Chretien are busy trying to line up colleague support to take over the gavel from Charles Phelan.

Phelan who is in his second year as president cannot succeed himself for another term under City Council rules.

His successor needs five votes when the new council convenes in January. Most of the present councillors are expected to be back, thus the early campaigning.

The council presidency has long been considered the springboard to the mayor's office but it is no sure ticket to get there.

A number of council presidents have gone on to become mayor but not always directly. Some were elected mayor two or more years after serving as council president.

Among those who became mayor in recent years are: James Sheets, Arthur Tobin, James McIntyre, Amelio Della Chiesa, Charles Ross and Thomas Burgin.

Two mayors who were never council presidents are Frank McCauley and Walter Hannon.

Recent council presidents who did not become mayor—and did not run for the office—include John Lydon, Leo Kelly, John Quinn, Vincent Smyth and George Burke. The latter ran for and was elected district attorney instead.

For anyone with mayoral aspirations being council president certainly helps. The presidency is considered the second most powerful city political office—second only to the mayor. The council president gets to name the council committees, run (and control) the council meetings and usually is more often quoted on major issues than any other member of the council.

And, he has the opportunity as head of the City Council, to take issue with the incumbent mayor on matters of major importance.

It's no secret that Cahill and Cheney have their eye on the mayor's office. Both have openly indicated they would like to be mayor of Quincy. That Chretien is also interested might surprise some. But he definitely is interested. He apparently likes to play his political cards closer to the vest than Cahill and Cheney.

The fact that he is seeking the council presidency underscores that interest.

Brad Perry Member Silver Haired Legislature

Frank "Brad" Perry of Crestview Healthcare Center in Quincy was recently elected to the Massachusetts Silver Haired Legislature, a statewide group of volunteers elected to lobby state lawmakers on issues of importance to senior citizens.

The SHL is under the auspices of the Office of Elder Affairs. Although recovering from a stroke, Perry most recently represented the SHL in a speech on April 14 before a gathering of LIFE (Living Is For Elderly) in Lowell.

This grass-roots, non-partisan organization is patterned after the General Court of the Commonwealth, and its membership consists of 40 senators and 160 representatives drawn from the same voter districts as the General Court. The term of office is two years.

PAT TOLAND, who was usually a late arrival at events when she was a city councillor has become an early bird since being named assistant city clerk.

She's been arriving at City Hall at 8 a.m.—a good half hour before it opens to the public. And she's even there after it closes.

TOLAND

REMEMBER THAT 15-foot canoe Charles Sweeney, the West Quincy rose king, gave his wife, Betty, for Christmas?

Well, it's almost ready for its maiden voyage and has been officially named "Betcha". "Bet" as in Betty and "cha" as in Charles.

There's absolutely no truth to the rumor that Charlie suggested it might be named "Chabet".

Smooth paddling, kids.

MILESTONE: Rose (Roz) Rozner, secretary to Building Inspector Matt Mulvey, is retiring tomorrow (Friday) after a 29-year career in the Building Department. She joined the department in 1964 as a clerk typist and worked up through the ranks to secretary in 1979. She's 83 and looks no more than 63.

THE USS LEXINGTON which we lost to Corpus Christi is a "big draw" down there, writes David Leitch, who stopped out there with his wife, June, on a trip. Leitch is former co-owner of Burgin Platter Ins. and former president of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association.

The Lexington is open for tours daily, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Sundays from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Admission is: Adults, $7, children, $3.75, senior citizens and active military, $5.

The Quincy-built carrier, one of the most decorated in the Navy's history, was reported sunk four times during World War II, but always showed up for a fight. This led to Tokyo Rose, the Japanese propagandist, to nickname the ship the "Blue Ghost."

The success of the Lexington as a tourist attraction would seem to be further evidence that Quincy is on the right track in establishing the U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum at the Fore River Shipyard.

Mariano In Praise Of 'Carjacking' Law

State Rep. Ronald Mariano applauded a new state law recently passed by the state legislature to make "carjacking" a serious offense in Massachusetts.

Carjacking has grown to serious proportions in major cities across America and it must be prevented from happening in the Boston area, Mariano said.

The new law provides a state prison sentence of up to 15 years or up to 2 1/2 years in a jail or house of correction and a maximum fine of $15,000 for an individual convicted of attempting or actually stealing a motor vehicle while assaulting, confining, maiming or threatening the owner or operator of that vehicle.

If an individual is armed with a dangerous weapon, he can be sentenced to an additional maximum sentence of 20 years with additional fines.

Mariano has a series of other measures before the House to strengthen the Criminal Code and tighten mandatory sentencing for violent criminals. Information on these measures is available by contacting his office in the State House at 722-2690.

Quincy District Court Law Day Ceremonies May 4

Area police officers, officials and other community leaders will be honored at the Quincy District Court's annual Law Day ceremonies Tuesday, May 4 at 9 a.m.

Five police officers, including two from Quincy, will receive the Robert Dana Award for outstanding police service above and beyond the call of duty. The awards will be presented by Norfolk County District Atty. Bill Delahunt.

Receiving the Dana award will be Quincy Police Officers Richard Praetsch and Scott Smith, Weymouth Police Officers Lori Landrigan and Michael Gillen, and Braintree Police Officer John Belcher.

Last November, Officers Praetsch and Smith apprehended a male suspect after he fired a gun in the vicinity of Arthur Street and Nelson St. The officers first ordered the suspect to drop his weapon while standing in a driveway at 52 Nelson St.

The suspect did not comply and began swearing at the officers and firing at them. The suspect then fled to the rear of 52 Nelson St. with the two officers in pursuit.

In the rear of 52 Nelson St., the suspect face both officers and waved his handgun at them. Officers Praetsch and Smith ordered him to drop the weapon. After a long hesitation, he finally complied and was placed under arrest without injury to himself, the officers, nor to any of the many witnesses.

After the arrest, the suspect was found to have been armed with a Luger with several rounds in the magazine. Police Chief Francis Mullen commended the officers and awarded each with one day off without loss of pay.

The James R. McIntyre Memorial Award for outstanding service in law and government will be presented to Henry Bosworth, publisher of The Quincy Sun. Before founding the newspaper in 1968, Bosworth was a court reporter and police reporter for The Patriot Ledger and the Boston Herald Traveler. He also covered local and state government for the two daily papers in the 1950s and 1960s.

"Their lives paralleled one another. They were contemporaries," District Court Clerk Magistrate Arthur Tobin said regarding the McIntyre-Bosworth association.

The Alfred P. Malaney, given by the Quincy Bar Association's outstanding attorney and man of the year, will be presented to Joseph F. Killion.

The Jason Feldman Award for outstanding citizen award will be presented to two recent court retirees for their long and distinguished service on the bench, Judge Lewis Whitman and Judge Albert Kramer.

The outstanding program award will be presented to Fernando Medeiros and David Douglas of Common Purpose.

Atty. Patricia Hunt, president of the Quincy Bar Association, will bring greetings on behalf of the association and file the Law Day motion.

Mayor James Sheets or a representative will deliver greetings from the city.

Rabbi Jacob Mann of Beth Israel Synagogue will give the invocation.

Rev. Robert Edson, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Hingham, will give the benediction.

Mayor Sets Strict Rules For Workers At City Hall

Mayor Thomas J. McGrath, in office for four months, ruled that it is contrary to Civil Service regulations for clerks at City Hall to work overtime.

He also directed that all city departments be open from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. daily and until 12 noon on Saturday with workers getting an hour off for lunch, arranged so that offices will be staffed all the time.

"Absences from work will be allowed only for sickness or bereavement," he said.

"The rule in business offices is that the people shall be punctual at their work and this rule I propose shall be followed hereafter in City Hall."

McGrath also ruled out the practice of city employees personal visitors while at work.

"Except when the public has business with the department, it has no right to use our time in frivolous visits," he said.

PARKING PROTESTED

Wollaston Realtor W.W. Willson called an ordinance restricting parking on streets leading to Quincy Shore Boulevard "a blot on the name of the city," a special privilege accorded no other residents.

"I don't believe it is right for these streets to be restricted to such a degree that they are private highways for the benefit of people living on them and to the disadvantage of others," he said.

Morrissey Urges MWRA To Relocate Headquarters To Quincy Shipyard

State Senator Michael W. Morrissey is urging the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority to relocate their executive headquarters from the Charlestown Navy Yard to the former General Dynamics Shipyard in Quincy.

In a letter to MWRA Executive Director Douglas MacDonald, Morrissey pointed out that with the sludge plant up and running again, now is the right time for the Authority to demonstrate their faith in the process and develop and improve a resource that they own.

"With the current lease in Charlestown coming up for renewal, and given that the City of Quincy has always cooperated and worked with the Authority, now is the time for them to give something back to the community," Morrissey wrote.

"Quincy has been asked to bear more than its fair share of the burden with the sludge plant and construction staging areas at the shipyard and Marina Bay," the letter continued.

"The relocation of the MWRA headquarters to the shipyard would serve as an economic catalyst to the area and return a benefit to the City of Quincy and the South Shore for the burdens that they are being asked to bear."

Morrissey added "that the relocation of the MWRA to facilities that they already own makes economic and environmental sense."

The buildings at the shipyard would need to be rehabilitated and renovated, but that work would provide work for hundreds of people in the union trades. The rehabilitation would also improve the value of the property and be in the best long-term interest of the area residents and ratepayers, he said.

Quincy VNA To Offer New Program To Transitional Housing Occupants

A new program to aid single parents living in Quincy transitional housing facilities will soon be offered by Quincy Visiting Nurse & Hospice through its Maternal Child Health Program.

Nurses, therapists, and counselors will provide a variety of services, including Health Care Assessment screening, support for family units in crisis, and parental education. Training sessions will cover AIDS awareness, nutrition, First Aid, stress management, parent effectiveness, coping with depression, managing change of life status, and the health and developmental needs of children.

Single mothers with children living in transitional housing for extended periods of time are often at risk of forgetting parenting skills they have already acquired. Areas of concern such as good health practices can seem to become unimportant when compared to the daily task of getting through every 24 hours.

The Quincy Housing Authority's temporary housing facility provides shelter and food for maintenance, the primary requirements for survival for single mothers with children. However, in anticipation of a return to a more "normal" home setting, the new program offers an opportunity to introduce to these families special skills, caring support, and education about good preventative health practices.

Cleanup Planned For Former Defense Site

A cleanup of the former Department of Defense site in Quincy is planned by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Four underground tanks, ranging from 275 to 5,000 gallons, will be removed from the former Nike Battalion Headquarters in Merrymount Park which is now owned by the City of Quincy. Two 1,000 gallon underground fuel storage tanks, three transformers and two capacitors will be removed from the Nike control area in the Squantum section of Quincy off Dorchester St. The Merrymount Park site is now used for Little League baseball and other recreational activities by the Parks, Forestry and Cemetery Department, as well as for city offices, a vehicle repair shop, storage and day care.

The project is part of a program that emphasizes the identification, investigation, and prompt cleanup of hazardous and toxic waste; unexploded ordnance, unsafe buildings, structures and debris.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Chretien, 31, said, "The next couple of years are going to be important for people in Quincy and I want to do whatever I can to make a positive contribution--within the ward and throughout the city."

Specifically, Chretien noted Stop and Shops plans to build a larger store on the site owned by Pneumatic Scale. "I will be heavily involved in determining whether that project is developed and under what conditions. If Stop and Shop does build, I will help Pneumatic Scale to relocate within Quincy. We want to hold onto those manufacturing jobs and that tax revenue."

Chretien said the City Council will become more involved in the area of economic development as soon as the mayor and the Quincy 2000 corporation recommend certain actions. "The decisions we make during the next couple of years will set the tone for the direction of our local economy."

"Currently, I am the chairman of the Council's Ordinance Committee which has jurisdiction on zoning matters and so I'll probably be busy in that capacity."

"As a city councillor, I will continue my role as an advocate for properly financing our public schools. Today, we are investing too little in education. Most cities and towns in Massachusetts spend a much higher percentage on their overall budgets on education.

"This hurts in several ways: our students have a tougher time getting good jobs and accepted by good colleges. Successful businesses are also less likely to locate here and that affects both our job base and our tax base."

"It will be difficult finding enough revenue to pay for all the services we want," the councillor continued. "The Council has to work with the mayor, school committee, and the city auditor to identify as many cost savings as possible."

"I have suggested that we make a number of departmental consolidations. I have also suggested that we take advantage of low interest rates and the city's solid bond rating by borrowing funds to make some repairs to our public facilities, rather than waiting a couple of years when interest rates will likely be higher.

"We shouldn't buy anything we don't need, but I also don't want to pay unnecessarily high interest rates," Chretien added.

As chairman of the city's recycling committee, Chretien said he enjoys working with the committee's volunteers. "We will keep working on ways to promote our existing programs, as well as to hold two household hazardous waste days on May 15 and 22."

"We are discussing the possibility of broadening our efforts to improve Quincy's environment. Next fall, we hope to initiate a volunteer-based tree planting effort."

As a ward councillor, Chretien said his main responsibility is to be accessible. "Once the campaign begins, I hope to meet as many people as possible. In the meantime, residents should feel free to call me at home, 472-1400."

Chretien is currently employed as the director of energy conservation for Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc., a private, non-profit organization. A 1979 graduate of North Quincy High School, he holds a bachelor's degree in resource management from the State University of New York College of Environmental Science and Forestry. He also holds a master's degree in economic policy from Northeastern University."

Collins-Rest-A-While Grand Reopening May 8

The Quincy Park Improvement Committee (QPIC) announces that the grand reopening of the Collins-Rest-A-While playground will be held May 8.

A 10 a.m. ribbon-cutting ceremony will kick off festivities to celebrate the construction of new state-of-the-art play facilities at the children's park, located on Southern Artery across from Veterans Memorial Field in Quincy.

"This is the day we've been waiting for," said QPIC Chairwoman Michelle Lydon. "The grand reopening of Collins-Rest-A-While promises to be a fun-filled day for parents and children alike. We would like to invite all those who have supported our efforts, those who have enjoyed this park for many years, and especially the children of Quincy, who deserve a play area that they can count on to be both fun and safe."

Mayor James Sheets, City Council President Charles Phelan, Assistant City Clerk Patricia Toland, Quincy Parks and Recreation Director Raymond Cattaneo and other city officials will attend the festivities. Highlights of the day will include face painting, clowns and balloons.

"This is a banner day for the children of Quincy," said Phelan, a QPIC member. "QPIC's efforts have really paid dividends in providing a top-notch playground for families to enjoy."

"Our efforts our paying off," said Lydon. "The children of Quincy can enjoy the playground in less than a month."

She also noted that the reconstruction of Collins-Rest-A-While is a result of a community-wide effort.

"The entire community came together to contribute to this effort," said Lydon. "Quincy residents, parents, children, seniors and local businesses all played a vital role in acquiring the necessary funds to do this project. We would be remiss if we did not thank Mayor Sheets and the City Council for their strong support of our efforts."

The City of Quincy appropriated $15,000 toward the restoration of the playground. Lydon also expressed gratitude to P.A. Landers Inc. for donating the sand for the park and the Quincy-South Shore Building Council, who have agreed to install the new equipment May 1.

In December 1992, QPIC signed an agreement with O'Brien & Sons of Medford to purchase $35,000 worth of play equipment. On April 8, the Quincy Park Department removed the 25-year-old equipment from the park as well as graded the surface for new park preparation.

"It seems fitting that we are breaking ground on a new park on Cleaner-Greener Day," said Lydon. "I know our project will be one of many important city-wide cleanup efforts on a day that illustrates this city's true community pride."

Children and residents are requested not to play on the park until the grand reopening May 8, since ground surfacing will not be complete until that time.

QPIC is a community-based organization comprised of dozens of volunteers and countless supporters that has raised over $40,000 through penny-drives, dances, auctions and other fundraising efforts in order to purchase quality play equipment for the children of Quincy. QPIC has worked with parents and children of Quincy as well as the City of Quincy to ensure that the "new" Collins-Rest-A-While becomes the city's favorite family gathering place for years to come.

Actress Performs At Quincy High School

'Louise DuArt Day' Smashing Success

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Like her acting career itself, Louise DuArt was a smashing success upon her first return to Quincy since graduating from Quincy High 25 years ago.

DuArt, a talented impressionist-comedienne who has starred in several cable comedy specials and has appeared on Broadway, brought the house down during a special performance at her alma mater April 15, proclaimed "Louise DuArt Day" by Mayor James Sheets.

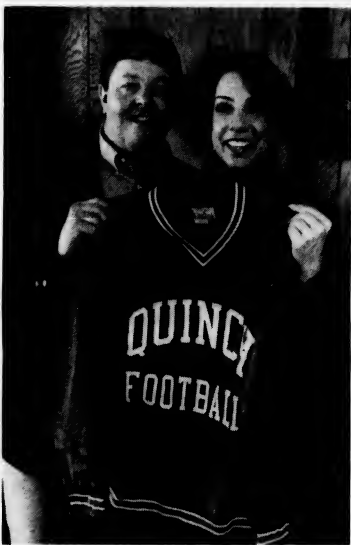

The 1968 QHS graduate entertained more than 200 students, school administrators, city officials and invited guests with her impeccable impressions of celebrities from Barbara Walters and Katherine Hepburn to Archie and Edith Bunker. She also dazzled the crowd with a touching 'telephone conversion' from earth to heaven between George Burns and Gracie Allen, ending with the familiar closer, "Good Night, Gracie," "Good Night, kid."

Burns, incidentally, once commented that in all his years of show business, no one has done a better job impersonating him than DuArt, a Quincy native who was born and educated in the "City of Presidents."

DuArt's "welcome home" performance was also emotional. For the first time in public, she heard her 13-year-old son, Danny, sing for her in a duet with a classmate Andrea Osborne. Danny, who attends Central Middle School, wants to be an actor and has the lead part in the school play, called "Habitat: Visions of a Fragile Planet."

The program was coordinated and emceed by Jack Raymer, another '68 QHS graduate. He was delighted with DuArt's return and performance before the city's young drama students.

"It was really an outstanding day for the kids of the City of Quincy and I think it was emotional for Louise because I was holding her hand quite tightly up there.

"It was a big hit. She is one talented lady. I think Louise really appreciated it. It's something she will remember for a long while," Raymer said.

The program included special presentations to the charming and energetic actress. Principal Lloyd Hill extended warm greetings to DuArt and Supt. Gene Creedon presented the actress with a Quincy public schools community award.

Councillor Ted DeCristofaro presented a special city council commendation to DuArt for being a positive role model and inspiration to the city's youth.

as a student at Quincy High and as an actress today, was presented by Editor Robert Bosworth. DuArt autographed 200 copies of the front page, many to middle school students who are involved in the city's drama and arts programs.

But the biggest presentation was made by Sheets who delivered a verbal commitment to restore QHS's Method Center to an auditorium, as it appeared before the original conversion in 1970.

"Have I got a deal for you," Sheets told DuArt. "We'll convert this (the method center) into an auditorium within the next 18 months if you promise to come back for the dedication."

Thrilled with the announcement, DuArt told a reporter, "It's the best news I could have heard. Wow, that was something. I would love to contribute and I have promised to come back and perform."

DuArt's special day started in grand style as a black limousine brought her to Quincy from the Boston Harbor Hotel at Rowe's Wharf. She had stayed at the hotel while performing in "Catskills on Broadway." (DuArt will return to Boston to appear at Carch a Rising Star May 13-18.)

As the limousine pulled up to Quincy High, R.O.T.C. cadets saluted the star as she ascended the front steps. Raymer, who along with DuArt was voted Class Wits in 1968, presented a bouquet of white and pink roses.

Once inside the school, DuArt greeted old and new acquaintances in the Pride Room. They reminisced and laughed, joked and hugged.

A few moments later, Bernaline Bennett Kelly, DuArt's former English, speech and drama teacher, arrived. While they have stayed in touch since 1968, this was their first face-to-face encounter in 25 years. They embraced and held each other as a few tears shed.

DuArt credits Bennett or "Mrs. B" as her students called her, with instilling in her a confidence that she could do anything with her life, including becoming an actress.

"She always said listen to that small voice that you hear that tells you what to do and what not to do. No matter what anyone else says just listen to that voice because that is the truth," DuArt said.

"Believe me, there were plenty of people who said, 'you want to do what for a living, be an actress,'" she said mimicking a chuckle.

"But Bernice, she always said, 'go for it.' She said I could do anything I wanted to do."

Bennett and some of DuArt's classmates say the reason DuArt has found success is because of her talent, hard work and commitment.

"Louise was very shy (before studying drama) and she has a wonderful sense of humor," Bennett said. "But over and above her artistic talent, she has great talent and is a very gracious human being who cares for her family and her old friends and her new friends and she is a very vital part of me."

Bennett said DuArt's first impression was of her and Tarzan. "These sort of things don't happen to a lot of people and I'm very proud that it happened to me," Bennett added.

Stephen Cantelli, another 1968 QHS graduate who is now a teacher at Lincoln-Hancock Community School, agreed DuArt was destined for stardom.

"Mrs. Bennett said one day that Louise would help put Quincy on the map someday and she has. I'm very happy success has come her way. She brought a lot of joy and laughs to class and we're all very proud."

After her high school graduation, Louise left Quincy and went to Los Angeles where she enrolled at L.A. City College. She shortly landed her first acting job as "Whitchy-Poo" in the children's Saturday morning television series "H.R. Puff-n-Stuff" which aired in the early 1970s.

A few years later, she took some time off to start a family. As a young mother, she entertained her neighbors and friends with impressions. One day, a few friends bet Louise $50 that she didn't have the guts to appear on stage at a local comedy club.

She accepted the challenge one Monday night during an "open mike night" at the Comedy Store on Sunset Boulevard. She did a few impressions, like Cher and Katherine Hepburn, and won the bet.

Unbeknownst to her, a few talent scouts from "Star Search" were in the audience. She soon appeared on that show and later opened for at a Donna Summers concert.

"The rest is history," Louise says.

Besides Broadway, DuArt has done stand-up in Vegas and three Showtime specials. She also had all the female and some male speaking roles in "D.C. Follies," a cable show that poked fun at public figures using puppets.

With all those credits, DuArt said her Quincy performance before family and friends ranks right up at the top.

"This is the biggest thrill of my life. I didn't know it was going to be such a big deal."

Being the opening act at Quincy High School's new auditorium should be a bigger thrill.

QHS-Tech Center To Host Community Service Workshop

Quincy High School/Center for Technical Education is hosting a Community Service Learning Workshop entitled "Creating an Effective Partnership: A New Vision of Community," on Thursday, April 29, 1993, from 8:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Admission is free and lunch is provided.

The workshop is sponsored by the forum, a non-profit educational organization dedicated to strengthening youth voice and commitment in the community by linking classroom learning with real life experiences. The forum is a program of the Lincoln Filene Center, Tufts University, Medford campus.

The one day workshop will take participants through the process of developing, setting up and running an effective Service Learning Program. Issues such as the intergenerational approach, school agency relations, curriculum integration reflection and the positive effects of community service, especially among young people, will be addressed.

One community service learning program at Quincy and North Quincy High Schools involves 10 students who assist both the personnel staff and the nursing staff at Quincy Hospital.

"The students provide many hours of needed services to the hospital," says volunteer coordinator Margaret Crehin. In turn, the students "learn responsibility and gain confidence in their abilities."

High school student Matthew Lee has donated 300 hours in the two years he has assisted in the volunteer office, says Crehin. He is a "jack of all trades," says Crehin, referring to his help in the volunteer office and to the nurses including patient discharge, running errands and delivering flowers to the patients.

Educators, volunteer coordinators, agencies and students who are interested in either setting up a community service program or in volunteering are invited to attend the workshop. Quincy High School, representing the Greater Boston area is one of four regional centers for the forum. The others are Lawrence High School, Taunton High School, and Tantasqua Regional High School.

A special information meeting will be held for parents and community members in the evening from 7 to 8 p.m. Registration for the evening meeting is not necessary.

The workshop is co-sponsored by the Massachusetts Department of Education/Office of Community education, Massachusetts Community Service Commission, and the Executive Office of Education.

To register or for more information about the workshops or forum, call the Tufts University Medford Campus at 627-3858.

A MATTER OF TIMING BELTS

One bit of automobile maintenance that car owners are apt to overlook involves the timing belt that resides within the engine. This belt, driven by the crankshaft, turns the camshaft which, in turn, controls the engine valves. If the timing belts were to break, it would result in some valves coming to a stop in the open position within the combustion chamber. This would leave them vulnerable to damage from pistons that would not immediately come to a halt due to a broken timing belt. This can result in an expensive engine repair. So-called "free-wheeling" engines are provided with recesses in their pistons to accommodate valves stuck in the open position, however, it is still a good idea to consult the owner's manual with regard to replacing timing belts to avert an engine breakdown.

HINT: Some cars use timing chains, which rarely break, instead of belts.

Maintaining your car is important because it will give you better mileage and last longer. At today's prices, it is not wise to do anything else. To help you properly care for your car, come into the service department at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, where you will be offered the best service available by people who truly care about you and your family. ### Health Care Reform: A National Priority (NAPS)—What American health care organization:

- is a leader in geriatric care having pioneered the training of physicians in geriatric care and research?

- conducts biomedical research programs that make significant contributions to medical knowledge?

- is responsible for part of the training of half of our nation's doctors, making it the country's single largest medical manpower producer?

- is responsible for medical contingency back-up in the event of national emergencies—military or civilian?

The answer: the VA. Providing medical care and research that benefits all Americans, the Department of Veterans Affairs (VA) is the largest centrally administered health care system in the country. The VA also provides such incommensurable services for veterans as prosthetics, blind rehabilitation, treatment for spinal cord injury, treatment for post-traumatic war-related stress disorder and long-term psychiatric care.

Despite this, the VA and the millions of veterans it serves have been almost totally ignored in the debate on national health care reform. Many agree that's a mistake. The Millions of veterans and other Americans benefit from the health care services and research of the Department of Veterans Affairs.

Paralyzed Veterans of America (PVA) undertook a two-year study to analyze the potential effects health care reform would have on the VA. Its report, Strategy 2000: The VA Responsibility in Tomorrow's National Health Care System, concluded that, for a host of reasons, the VA must continue to be an essential component of any legislated reordering of the nation's health care system.

Many Americans who agree that the VA is an invaluable national resource that performs functions and special services not comparably available elsewhere in the health care system are letting their legislators in Washington know their views on this issue. You can write to the U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510 and the House of Representatives, Washington, D.C. 20515.

Dealing With Pain

There are millions of people who suffer with chronic pain. They are the veterans injured in wars, cancer patients, paraplegics, neuralgias, amputees, arthritics, patients suffering with migraine, disc diseases, tendonitis, muscle spasm, psychological pain, and others.

Numerous methods are available to deal with pain. They encompass drug therapy, biofeedback, behavioral therapy, neurosurgery, nerve block, and electrical stimulation. All of these play an important role in pain management, but none is a universal remedy.

Evidence reveals that acupuncture relieves chronic pain. Research shows that it has significant therapeutic potential. It is also free of side effects and toxic burdens which accompany the use of many modern drugs.

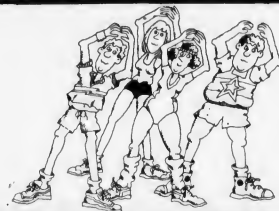

In a long-term study conducted by Prof. G.W. Waylonis at Ohio State University, it was concluded that "acupuncture appears to be of significant value in the symptomatic control of pain. From the standpoint of physical medicine it appears to be a modality with may be more effective than any other single method (i.e., drugs, injections, and physical agents) in the treatment of fibrositis syndrome. It was more successful by a 3:1 ratio than any other method of treatment. The duration of acupuncture's effectiveness was best and exceeded all other methods by a 6:1 ratio."

Another report from the University of Alabama Medical School Pain Clinic concluded that acupuncture worked in more than 55 percent of the 300 patients in the study. The various types of pain problems treated had been present from one to thirty years and the duration of significant pain relief was as long as six months in some 41 percent in those treated.

Acupuncture has been a valuable part of Chinese medicine for 4,000 years. It is taught in the medical faculties of universities, is included in the medical curriculum, and is practiced by one million doctors in China.

WHAT IS A CAT SCAN?

They've become so commonly known and used that they are rarely referred to anymore by their full name: computerized axial tomography. CAT scans may be ordered when a doctor needs to take a look at internal organs and other soft tissues as well as bones. Traditional X-rays show bone well, but not soft tissue. A CAT scanner utilizes a moving X-ray beam to produce multiple images that a computer then sorts out to construct a picture of a cross section of the patient's body. The procedure is painless. CAT scans have become indispensable for diagnosing many diseases of the brain and internal organs, and are becoming more and more useful in the diagnosis of other problems such as back diseases.

P.S. While X-rays were discovered in 1895, the CAT Scan wasn't introduced until the early 1970's.

CAT scans are only one of many imaging techniques available. An even more recently developed technique is the MRI, or magnetic resonance imaging, which uses the radiation to scan soft tissue of the human body. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can modify your lifestyle to help ward off heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment at 101 Adams St., Suite 24, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

Nobody can deny that today's pace of living is very complicated and rapid. The human mind and body is called upon to adjust itself to a faster and faster tempo.

Bewilderment, as problems require a solution; worry and anxiety over success or failure is common. The steady strain of business, in an effort to acquire more and have every available comfort, adds to the nervous strain. High tension is taking a heavy toll of professional men and women.

Probably the best antidote for strain is a relaxed sense of humor. Believe it or not, there are many things in life one can laugh about whether he wins or loses, succeeds or fails. To do so means a longer life and a better chance to reverse one's errors.

Victor Hugo once said, "Laughter is the sun that drives winter from the human face"...We agree...Don't you?

Quincy, North Are Rained Out--Again

By TOM SULLIVAN

The horrible weather continues to haunt the Quincy and North Quincy baseball teams, which are finding it harder and harder to get their scheduled games in.

Last Friday's Quincy-Taunton game, a scheduled makeup of the season's opener, was rained out and both teams were rained out Monday after playing three innings.

North (4-2) and Weymouth were tied, 2-2, and Quincy (3-2) and Barnstable were scoreless when the downpour came.

"This has been a horrible spring and if we don't get some decent weather soon, we'll be playing every day of the week," said Quincy coach Bob Sylvia, whose team has three games to make up.

The Presidents were scheduled to play at Sylvia Lake yesterday (Wednesday) will meet North Quincy Friday at 3:30 at Adams Field, will host Taunton Monday at 3:30 and will be at Weymouth next Wednesday at 3:30.

The Raiders were slated to host Bridgewater-Raynham yesterday, will face Quincy Friday at Adams, will be at Plymouth Monday and will be home to Falmouth next Wednesday at Adams at 3:30.

Leo Donovan's North team got off to a 4-0 start in the first inning against Plymouth last week and held on for an 8-6 victory, its fourth. The game was a makeup of the scheduled season's opener.

Sean Donovan pitched 6 2/3 innings and picked up his second win. When the Blue Eagles threatened in the seventh inning with two outs, Donovan was relieved by Mike Patch, who retired the last batter to preserve the win.

The Raiders added two runs in the fourth inning but Plymouth scored twice in the fifth on a triple, double and single and added two in the sixth on a triple, two singles and an error, to close to 6-4.

In the bottom of the sixth North added two runs to extend its lead to 8-4.

The Blue Eagles scored twice in the seventh and had the tying runs on base when Patch came in to put out the fire.

Malone Looks To Regain Javelin Form At WPI

Worcester Polytechnic Institute student-athlete Brian Malone of Quincy will be seeking a little revenge this spring in track and field.

Malone, a four-year member of coach Merl Norcross' track and field squad, was dethroned as the top Div. III javelin thrower in New England last year after winning the event as a sophomore. He has been preparing all year for the upcoming season.

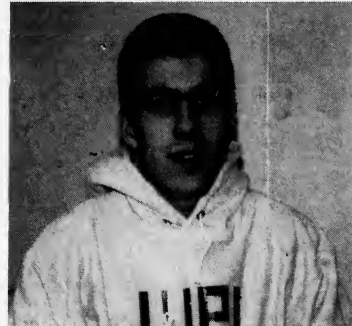

"I've been lifting weights during the off-season and running a little bit, so when the spring comes around I should be ready," said the captain. Malone had also been training indirectly with intramural volleyball, basketball, hockey, and soccer. He said he will be ready not only to recapture the New England title, but also to make a run at the national tournament.

"I hope to make 193 feet to qualify for the nationals. If I could do that, that would be great," he said, adding that his best career throw is 190 feet.

It would also make coach Norcross happy.

"Brian is a dedicated javelin thrower who works out all year in the weight room," said Norcross. "He has some tough competition this year but will train hard for the New England and should do very well."

Regaining the top spot in New England in javelin, however, is not Malone's only goal this year.

BRIAN MALONE

A civil engineering major, he intends to attend graduate school to receive a master's degree structural engineering. A member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and Tau Beta Pi, the engineering honor society, Malone is completing his Major Qualifying Project (MQP), one of three projects undergraduate students undertake as part of WPI's innovative education plan.

With another student, Malone is redesigning the recently constructed Telegram and Gazette building in Millbury. "We are working with a local architect and engineering office and making an alternate, more cost efficient design through an in-depth analysis," said Malone. The MQP started at the beginning of the year and a final report including details, drawings, calculations and conclusions will be submitted as the final project in the beginning of March.

"A lot of the things we are doing in the project aren't covered in class. This is more like the real world where we are finding out what designing a building entails." For his Interactive Qualifying Project (IQP) completed earlier this year, Malone and two fellow students designed an engineering curriculum for students at Bancroft High School using Legos and the computer language Logo.

"Our aim was to stimulate an interest in math and science to a class of about four students. We came up with projects and lesson plans and evaluated their performances."

CHENETTE PLUMBING and Heating recently celebrated the grand opening of its new showroom and office at 204 Washington St., Quincy Point. ## Chenette Plumbing & Heating Moves To New Location

In 1973, Quincy resident Paul D. Chenette started his own plumbing business at the age of 19. Despite a recession and energy crisis, Chenette made the bold move to create Chenette Plumbing and Heating Company.

Today, with 20 years of experience, more than 4,000 satisfied customers to support his business, and a dedicated wife-business partner by his side, Paul made another bold move to a new location.

"This is the best possible time for us to move into our new showroom," says Paul Chenette, who has moved his company from its Houghs Neck location where the company was located since 1978, into a 1,600 square-foot showroom location at 204 Washington St., Quincy.

"Because of the economy, we were able to take advantage of low real estate and construction prices. Our expanded space affords us more flexibility in displaying our products and capabilities, as well as meeting with customers. We are extremely proud of our showroom."

Chenette Plumbing and Heating Co., Inc. sells and services national brand-name plumbing supplies, such as Kohler, Delta and American-Standard, and heating supplies, such as Weil McLain and Burnham. The company services residential, commercial and industrial building and remodeling customers within Eastern Massachusetts, from Cape Cod to the North Shore.

Chenette became interested in owning his own plumbing business when he worked summers as a plumber after graduating from Quincy Vo-Tech. "When I got my masters license in '73, I decided I liked what I was doing, and I could make a living at it, too," he recalls.

"I guess it was quite a responsibility for a 19-year-old, now that I look back on it. It still is."

Chenette said his bright, visible showroom signifies the strength of the company, and the new direction the company is poised to take. "During the early '80s, the company experienced what I refer to as 'uncontrolled growth.'"

"We were too staff-heavy, and expanding too quickly for own good. We became lean, and played it safe."

"In hindsight, we were positioning ourselves for the '90s recession and, as a result, carved a niche for ourselves in the residential and commercial energy conservation area. This has enabled us to survive tough times and position us for expansion today."

Chenette credits much of the business' success with a lot of hard work, and the help of his wife, Diane, who works side-by-side with Paul, putting in 12-hour days as designer and officer manager for the company. "She has a gift for color selection and design, which is useful to our customers," Paul says.

Computerization has also been a key factor in Chenette's expansion. "We have computerized our customer lists, bookkeeping and pricing systems for our 30,000 plumbing items, which has really freed us up for growth," Diane says.

"Our showroom serves as a one-stop shop for anyone looking to build or remodel, because we have carpenters, electricians, interior designers, and an entire team of experts who are available to help pick a fixture, tile a floor, or even match colors with accessories," Diane says. "It is very convenient for busy consumers."

Looking ahead to the future, Paul and Diane are hopeful. They plan to increase their staff training on new technology, and expand their staff, customer base and energy conservation services.

"It looks like the U.S. economy, as well as the Quincy economy, is coming around," Paul notes. "We're glad to be a part of it."

Indek Patient Appreciation Day Collects Food For Pantry

Indek Chiropractic of Quincy recently held its bi-annual Patient Appreciation Day to collect non-perishable food for the Quincy Community Action Food Pantry.

Dr. Bruce Indek began the Patient Appreciation

Day so that his patients can bring in non-perishable food in return for complimentary service at his office.

This year's Patient Appreciation Day netted a total collection of 860 pounds of food which was donated to the Quincy Community Action Food Pantry which services over 500 families in the Quincy, Randolph, Weymouth, Braintree area.

By MICHAEL WHALEN
The Quincy License Board Tuesday again continued a request from Family Play Yard, Inc. for a Non-Alcoholic Family Amusement Center License at 1546 Rear Hancock St.

The matter had been continued from the board's April 13 meeting because of the absence of Police Chief Francis Mullen, who said he wanted to be present when the request came before the board. Previously the board heard the request at its March 30 meeting, when it was determined that similar types of operations should be observed before any action was taken on the license.

Atty. Gerald Kirby has told the board that his clients, Dorothy Kirby and Gloria George, want to open a "juvenile, family-oriented amusement center," the "primary thrust" of which would be birthday parties for youngsters.

The operation would include video games and other "coin-operated mechanical devices" such as ski ball, according to Kirby, and would be similar to that of Chuck E. Cheese in Dedham.

City Clerk Joseph Shea, chairman of the board, said he has received a number of calls from residents noting that there is a city ordinance which states that no more than four video machines may be allowed at any one site in the city.

Although Kirby said most of the games his clients intend to have at the site, including ski ball, would not be classified as video games, Shea said the board would have to consult City Solicitor Stephen McGrath for an opinion on the matter before any action could be taken on the request.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey told

Kirby that Fire Chief Thomas Gorman and Mulvey had visited the site and that even if the license were granted, it would be under the stipulation that the plumbing and insulation at the site were updated.

Mulvey also said the ventilation system currently at the site, formerly the location of Bobbi's Hair Styling Salon, is "not a good system."

In addition to the concerns raised by Shea and Mulvey, the request again received opposition from Dr. Carl Goodman of 31A Revere Rd. Goodman, who told the board March 31 he was opposed to the license, reiterated his position on the matter.

Goodman read a letter from his wife, Arlene, saying the business would be "exploiting teenagers" by "addicting young people to a video screen." He added that he felt the business would have a negative impact on the area and is "opposite to tourism" that the city is trying to promote through the National Park Service Visitors Center that recently opened at Presidents Place.

Ward 2 Councillor Ted Decristofaro also spoke briefly before the board, saying he had received "probably six" calls from residents opposed to the license.

Decristofaro said the residents had called him because the site, which is now located in Ward 3, was in his ward before city redistricting. He suggested that the board implement "sort of probationary period" for the license if it decides to grant the request.

NEFA Establishes Financial Aid Hotline

Rep. Ronald Mariano announces that the Massachusetts Educational Financing Authority (MEFA) has established a Financial Aid Hotline.

The hotline, which is designed to assist students and parents through this critical time in the college selection process, can be reached by calling 1-800-842-1531 Wednesdays and Thursdays from 5:30 to 8 pm.

"As colleges and universities continue the process of notifying applicants on their admission decisions, many families have questions about the various financing options available to them," said Mariano. "The MEFA Hotline can help make the sometimes difficult process easier to understand and maneuver through."

The hotline will be staffed by financial aid experts who will answer general questions about financial aid and financial aid offers. Experts will be available to assist families with specific questions about college financing options.

MEFA is a non-profit, quasi-public authority which was designed to provide middle income families with low interest fixed and variable rate loans through its MASSPLAN. MASSPLAN is available to all students attending the 56 Massachusetts colleges and universities now participating in the program.

'Finances Stable, Costs Under Control' Sheets Submits $128,689,981 City Budget

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Saying city finances have stabilized and several "budget busters" are under control, Mayor James Sheets submitted a FY 94 municipal budget of $128,689,981 to the City Council Monday.

The proposed budget, which would go into effect July 1, is up $3.8 million or 3 percent over FY 93's budget of $124,791,584.

In submitting the budget, Sheets told city councilors "this budget indicates that the city finances have stabilized, that several major 'budget busters' have been brought under control." The mayor said the budget allows the city to hire 18 new police officers and approximately 10 new firefighters, thus filling vacancies created by retirements in recent years "without fear that FY95 will bring layoffs."

However, the mayor added, "we must still use extreme caution as we project the FY'95 budget, but, primarily, it appears that city finances have stabilized."

The budget calls for a

2.5 percent increase in the property tax levy, the most allowed under state law, and a 2 percent pay raise for most of the city's 3,000 employees.

Breaking the budget down, Sheets said $54,644,476 or 42 percent constitutes fixed costs such as pensions, debt service and unemployment compensation. "While, through prudent management, costs in this fixed category can be reduced, generally, they remain firm," he said.

Non-fixed costs, often referred to as discretionary costs, are $74,045,415, or approximately 58 percent of the budget. These costs include all departments, city dues, celebrations, city commissions for women and handicapped, student programs, the

Public Hearing On Budget May 10

By MICHAEL WHALEN

For the first time in the city's history, a public hearing will be held on the budget sent to the City Council by a Quincy mayor.

The hearing will be held Monday, May 10 at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chamber at City Hall.

Councillor Timothy Cahill said at Monday night's council meeting that he wanted to hold this first-ever budget hearing so the council will know firsthand what people think about the $128,689,981 budget for FY94 submitted to the council Monday by Mayor James Sheets.

"We want to hear from people before we deliberate on the budget, not after," said Cahill, who serves as chairman of the council's Finance Committee. He stressed that although budget sessions will be held on subsequent dates, the hearing will be the only time residents will be allowed to voice their opinions on the budget.

Cahill said the dates and breakdown of the sessions are as follows (all will be held at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chamber):

- May 13: minor departments.
- May 25: Department of Public Works.
- June 3: Fire and Police Departments.
- June 9: Education (school budget).
- June 16: Final Action in Special Council Meeting (if not completed June 9).

Cahill said the reason for the breakdown is that it will allow the council to discuss the larger budgets on separate nights.

In addition the budget sessions, Cahill scheduled a Finance Committee meeting for May 17 for non-budget items pending in committee.

Durkin Proposes Parker Addition

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

To relieve overcrowding and provide students and staff with a more "acceptable" facility, School Committeeman Stephen Durkin has proposed the city construct an addition to the Parker Elementary School in North Quincy.

In a letter to Mayor James Sheets and Supt. Eugene Creedon, Durkin cited as reasons for proposing the addition school overcrowding and an inadequate facility. Durkin noted all of the school's available classroom space is currently in use at Parker and enrollment growth is expected to continue.

He pointed out classroom space is inadequate for resource source room instruction in special education, Chapter 1, and English as a Second Language. In addition, he said space utilized for music instruction is "often inappropriate and causes noise disruption in nearby classrooms."

Furthermore, Durkin pointed out the Parker School lacks a gymnasium for physical education; as a result, students must attend physical education classes at another school. He also said the school has "inadequate restroom facilities and poor sanitary facilities associated with the lunchroom."

Durkin recently toured the school with the school's principal and a group of parents.

He explained to Sheets and Creedon that he is proposing that the city explore the possibility of constructing an addition to the Parker School, similar to the early childhood education center and Bernazzani School addition projects which have been bonded. Construction for those two projects is scheduled to begin later this month.

"I am proposing that we explore the possibility of a similar project at Parker School in which the city, through the construction of an addition, would add a gymnasium and classrooms, along with improving other areas of the facility," Durkin said, adding that interest rates on bond issues are "currently very favorable."

Reacting to Durkin's proposal, Sheets said he would support such a project provided the school department budget, and not the municipal budget, funds it.

"If the school committee is willing to put a line item in its budget so that the money to cover the principal and interest payments (for the bond issue) comes from the school budget, then I wouldn't have a problem with that."

"But I cannot take money away from the city side of the budget to do that."

Sheets said there will be major bonding issues next fiscal year, including new roofs for the Atlantic Middle School and Atherton Hough Elementary School.

"If they (the school committee) is willing to put a line item in their budget, then I'll submit it (bond issue) to the council. But there's no way I can put that cost into the municipal budget," the mayor said.

No Alcohol For Convenience Store

By MICHAEL WHALEN

No alcohol will be sold at 7-Eleven, 75 Copeland St.

The Quincy License Board Tuesday denied the request from the establishment to become the first Quincy convenience store to have a Wine and Malt License.

The matter had been continued from the board's April 13 meeting because so that Atty. Fletcher Wiley and his client, Aejin Wong could meet with Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio and area residents to discuss the license. Board members had also wanted to visit a 7-Eleven store in Rockland that has a Wine and Malt License.

Fabrizio said Tuesday his position on the matter had not changed, saying that four package stores in the area should be enough to satisfy the demand for beer and wine. He presented the board with a petition from 140 area residents opposed to the license, listing traffic and parking as among their chief concerns.

Wiley argued that although concerns the neighbors' concerns were understandable, Wong "runs a good operation" at the store and therefore "deserves your (License Board) support." He presented the board with a list of 400 people in favor of the license.

Fabrizio stressed that neighbors he spoke to feel Wong is "a very nice person with a very nice family," and said their opposition was not against her but the license itself.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey, who visited the Rockland store with City Clerk (and Board Chairman) Joseph Shea, said while that establishment seemed to have no problems, a similar setup in Quincy was not necessary.

"I just don't believe there is a public need for the request," said Mulvey.

The vote to deny the request was unanimous.

Sheets Submits $128,689,981 FY94 Budget To Council

Thomas Jefferson Forum, and others.

The mayor said one of the main reasons municipal finances have stabilized is because several fixed cost items or "budget busters" are under control.

For example, the city was able to reduce health insurance by $1,160,000 over the last two years, primarily by switching to a single health insurance carrier. Without the single carrier, Sheets said health insurance would have increased $3 million to $17,585,000. Instead, the health insurance cost for city employees will be $14,580,000 next year.

Another area of significant savings is rubbish collection. By renegotiating the city's contract with BFI, the mayor said the cost of rubbish collection will be $4,074,000, a savings of $769,162 or 15.9 percent over last year.

Since Sheets took office in 1990, the cost of rubbish collection has been reduced $1,789,073.

Of the non-fixed budget, the school department or education budget constitutes 52 percent, or $38,784,074. The police department is 15 percent, or $11,371,154 and the fire department is 13 percent or $9,811,863.

The budget does not call for any layoffs, Sheets said.

The single largest budget and increase is for the school system. The proposed $38,784,074 budget is up $1,977,302. Most of that money will be used to fund pay raises for 700 teachers.

The council can only vote on the school budget's bottom line, not on individual expenses as it can in the municipal budget.

The proposed police department budget represents an increase of $973,144, is up $84,929 or $711,165, of which 8.8 percent, in part $175,000 is being carried over from FY 93. Sheets said the increase will fund two percent salary raises, the special operations unit and an additional $100,000 in overtime.

The mayor's fire budget is up $149,049 over last year. The increase is mainly for an extra $100,000 in overtime. Sheets said the fire department's bottom line will likely rise because the fire contract has not been concluded.

Essentially, most budgets have experienced modest increases or decreases or have stayed the same.

The retirement budget, $11,882,622, is down $97,943 or .9 percent because fewer employees retired last year and fewer are receiving pensions.

Data processing, $973,144, is up $84,929 or 8.8 percent, in part because of an additional computer operator. "Data processing and computerization has expanded dramatically. To keep up, we added one person," Sheets said.

Public works/transportation, $2,330,131, is up $222,590 or 9.6 percent over last year. The increase is needed to fund one percent raises, the mayor said. He noted the budget is actually down seven percent from 1990.

Sheets presented his budget in the context of what has transpired regarding city finances since he took office in January, 1990.

The mayor pointed out that his proposed FY 94 budget is up $10.9 million over FY 91. "It is interesting to note that fixed costs during that same time have actually gone up $13,516,725. As a result, we have actually trimmed $3 million from department budgets over the last four years."

The council has the authority to cut the budget, but not add to it. The council, which has 45 days to review the budget, plans to vote on the mayor's plan next month.

Childhood Center, Bernazzani Addition Groundbreaking Set

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the addition to the Bernazzani School and the construction of the Early Childhood Education Center will take place Tuesday, May 11 and Friday, May 14 respectively.

Both ceremonies will begin at 9:30 a.m. The Early Childhood Education Center will be built on the site of the former Lincoln School, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy. The Bernazzani addition will adjoin the elementary school, located on Furnace Brook Parkway.

Mayor James Sheets will be the featured guest speaker along with members of the School Committee and City Council. Parents and students of both the Bernazzani and Lincoln Hancock Schools will participate along with their principals and Supt. Eugene Creedon.

Participants and spectators are invited back to the respective schools for a brief collation.

A contract for the $2.1 million Early Childhood Center, 100 Brooks Ave., South Quincy, and the $700,000 Bernazzani addition was been awarded to Barbato Construction of Easton who was the lowest bidder among nine bidders.

The high bid was submitted by P & H General Contractors of Everett at $3,050,000.

The public is invited to attend.

Both facilities are expected to be completed for occupancy next fall.

To Join Department In September 18 New Police Recruits Undergoing Training

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

The number of Quincy police officers will increase from 130 to 148 after 18 new recruits complete 18 months of training in September.

The new recruits, which include 17 from Quincy and one from Hanover, were sworn in as police officers by City Clerk Joseph Shea last Friday inside the Council Chamber of City Hall. The ceremony was attended by 125 family members and friends and several city officials, including Mayor James Sheets and Police Chief Francis Mullen who congratulated the recruits and their families.

The new recruits are:

Donald H. Greenwood, 46, of 17 Hodgkinson St., Quincy; Daniel Guarente, 23, of 116 Putnam St., Quincy; John J. Keenan, 40, of 44 Buena Vista Way, Hanover; John E. Bersani, 38, of 76 Shawmut St.; Joseph C. Paccioretti III, 28, of 32 Jenness St.; John P. Kelly III, 26, of 30 Bloomfield St.; Michael J. Sullivan, 29, of 27 Estabrook Rd.; Robert E. Bina, 26, of 58 Springfield St.; and

William E. Plant Jr., 29, of 48 Kent St., all of Quincy. Also, Robert L. O'Donnell, 47, 8 Ditmar St.; Patrick J. Calabro, 26, of 400 Granite St.; Gerald V. Connolly, 27, 16 Gordon St.; Thomas M. Corliss, 28, of 35 Silver St.; Richard M. Gilmore, 28, of 41 Shea St.; Steven L. Kelly, 25, of 1048 Sea St.; Daniel C. McGinn, 24, of 15 Petrel Rd.; John D. Steele, 24, of 237 Southern Artery; and Kevin G. Tobin, 24, of 16 Clifton St., all of Quincy.

The new officers will be trained by state and local police at the State Police Academy in Foxborough for 16 weeks. Mullen said the officers will receive additional instruction and orientation at Quincy police headquarters before going on patrol.

The hiring will cost the city an additional $110,000 this year, according to the mayor. The new officers will allow the police department to begin foot patrols in Quincy Center, Wollaston and North Quincy, he said.

In congratulating the recruits and their families, Sheets said the officers will become a part of the city's "front line." He said police officers perform a vital role in serving and protecting Quincy residents. Their job is made more difficult, the mayor noted, due to Quincy's close proximity to Boston, a major city linked to Quincy by water, rapid transit and the expressway.

"Quincy's crime rate is under control because of men and women in our police force. We are adding 18 men to our ranks who will join that front line," he said.

Sheets said Quincy's police officers are well trained to handle law enforcement situations, some of which require instantaneous decisions which may determine life or death.

"Quincy police officers are exceptionally well-trained to respond to those kinds of situations," the mayor said.

Mullen told the new officers that they are sworn to "perform the duties of great personal risk and sacrifice" and promise to dedicate themselves to law enforcement.

750 Volunteers In Cleaner, Greener Cleanup

By ADAM CENTAMORE

An estimated 750 volunteers turned out Saturday for the city's annual "Cleaner, Greener" cleanup, up 150 people from last year making it the most successful in four years, officials said.

The majority of support came from residents, neighborhood clubs, and religious organizations, said Department of Public Works Project Manager Michael Wheelwright.

The project cleaned one major area in each of the city's six wards: Adams Shore Library in Ward 1; Fore River Clubhouse, Ward 2; Wollaston School, Ward 3; Lincoln-Hancock School, Ward 4; Beechwood Community Life Center, Ward 5; and North Quincy High School, Ward 6.

The MDC, MBTA and MWRA also participated in the cleanup. Wheelwright said there was good inter-agency response to the effort which spruced up city schoolyards, beaches, parks and playgrounds.

After meeting at seven different starting points, volunteers of all ages dispersed into different areas of the city and collected about 4,000 tons of debris from public open spaces, Wheelwright said.

The city provided rakes, shovels, brooms, bags, pick-up and disposal.

The cleanup, coordinated by the DPW, also got a lift from 11 companies which formed its own cleanup crews. They are: Stop & Shop, Arbella Insurance, Quincy Savings Bank, Raytheon Manufacturers, Travelers Insurance, Continental Cablevision, Home Depot, YMCA, Harvard Community Health, Commercial Union Insurance, and Eastern Nazarene College.

MIND OVER CANCER

The theory that patients can influence the course of their cancer through psychotherapy or visioning techniques has been around for decades. Until recently, scientific evidence to support the so-called "wish-away-your-cancer" practices had been inconclusive. However, a group of Stanford University researchers who followed the effects of group therapy on patients with advanced breast cancer found that those without any type of psychological therapy lived an average of just 19 months after joining their study, while those who received group therapy averaged 37 months. The patients in both groups continued to receive standard cancer therapies as well throughout the course of the study. P.S. The researchers who found the link between psychotherapy and cancer survival had actually set out to disprove the connection.

Today there are support groups available for patients suffering from a wide range of serious illnesses. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can help prevent heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. We are dedicated to the compassionate and caring practice of medicine. When treating patients, I always try to consider how I would like myself, my wife and children or my parents to be treated by a doctor. Is fate setting the stage for another McIntyre-LaRaia political battle? Could be.

Charles McIntyre, son of the late Mayor-Senator James McIntyre is thinking of running for the City Council-at-large this fall.

"I'm giving it serious consideration," says the 25 year-old McIntyre faithfuls have hoped one day would pick up the torch long carried by his father, one of Quincy's all-time powerful political figures.

If McIntyre does run, he theoretically would be seeking one of the three council-at-large seats.

But he may be pitted more against his father's old political enemy, Joseph LaRaia.

LARAIA

assistant city clerk.

LaRaia, as the runner-up in the 1991 city election, was the choice of the City Council to fill out Toland's term.

Is the seat actually an open one even though LaRaia is in it? Will he be entitled to the "candidate for re-election" designation?

It would seem that fate, indeed, may be dealing the cards for another McIntyre-LaRaia confrontation.

Both James McIntyre and LaRaia served in the City Council but not together. Both became city council presidents. And then, political rivals—face to face and behind the scenes.

When Amelio Della Chiesa retired from the mayor's office in 1965, McIntyre and LaRaia hooked up in a duel to succeed him. But it wasn't much of a duel.

McIntyre crushed LaRaia, piling up a 14,321 vote victory margin. They never had a rematch but remained adversaries.

When McIntyre left office in 1971 to become counsel to the Massachusetts state senate, he remained a powerful force on the Quincy political scene.

HANNON

McIntyre backed Walter Hannon as his successor in the mayor's office and was there to support him when LaRaia came back to challenge Hannon in 1975.

That was a political brawl with Hannon surviving by just 134 votes on election day. But a recount made LaRaia the winner by 483 votes.

Fate Setting The Stage?

After a turbulent two years in office, LaRaia was challenged by another close McIntyre friend, Arthur Tobin, in 1977. This was another slugfest with Tobin ousting LaRaia from the mayor's office by a 5,050 vote margin.

LaRaia was dead politically, many were saying. But, as it turned out, he was still very much alive.

In 1979, he edged a young Richard Koch, Jr. by 197 votes to return to the City Council. And two years later was the top vote getter.

In 1987 he came within 474 votes of wresting the mayor's office away from Frank McCauley. But two years later, he ran a poor fourth in the preliminary election for mayor.

Then, in 1991 he ran for the City Council once more and finished fourth in the at-large race, some 1,913 votes behind third place Toland.

Again they were saying LaRaia was finished. But fate stepped in and brought him back this year when Toland became assistant city clerk and LaRaia was named to fill her term.

LaRaia's political career has been up and down like an elevator for over three decades. Right now he is up again.

But someone like Charles McIntyre could push the down button on him again.

If McIntyre decides to run it would inject some needed zest into this year's election picture.

Water-Sewer Bill 'Tea Party' May 15

By MICHAEL WHALEN

In an attempt to rally residents against escalating MWRA water and sewer rates, the City Council Monday night agreed to allow Quincy residents to stage a modern-day version of the Boston Tea Party, substituting tea with MWRA bills.

Ward 1 Councillor and "Tea Party" organizer Peter Kolson, who introduced a resolution to hold the event, said the protest will be held Saturday, May 15 at noon at Marina Bay.

By demonstrating against the increasing bills, Kolson said he hopes to increase the state legislature's awareness of the "unfair burden" placed on communities by the MWRA rates.

Last week, Inspector General Robert Cerasoli issued a report projecting water and sewer bills for an average family could climb from $545 today to $1,891 by the year 2003 and $2,010 by the year 2005.

MWRA officials dispute Cerasoli's claim. They say rates will be $1,207 by the year 1999, the last year on their projections.

MWRA rate payers have been funding the majority of the $7 billion cleanup since it began several years ago. The EPA is considering allowing the MWRA to downsize the harbor cleanup by at least $750 million, saving rate payers money.

Locally, officials are frustrated over the soaring rates.

"It's just to advertise that we're up to our 'you know what' in 'you know what,'" said Kolson, who has said for some time he feels the MWRA rates are an injustice not only to Quincy, but also to the 42 other communities under the MWRA's jurisdiction.

Mayor James Sheets and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers are also involved with the protest, he said.

Kolson said residents from all 43 MWRA communities are invited to bring their water and sewer bills to the "Tea Party." He stressed, however, that the bills will not be casually tossed into Boston Harbor but instead will be "ceremoniously" put into bags and floated on the water.

The bills will be removed from the water at the conclusion of the event, he said.

Other councillors voiced enthusiasm over Kolson's resolution.

"I think it's a good idea," said Council President Charles Phelan. "I'll be there."

"They've (MWRA) been picking our pockets every day of the week," said Councillor Joseph LaRaia. "We've got nothing to be ashamed of by barnstorming out there (Marina Bay)."

Councillor Michael Cheney agreed.

"It invites people to express their frustration in a public way," said Cheney, who urged all Quincy residents to participate in the protest.

The Quality Of Education

An open letter to Mayor James Sheets:

Dear Mayor Sheets:

Recently the Quincy Citywide Parents Council learned the amount set aside for the 1993-94 Quincy Public School budget. We do realize that this budget reflects an increase of almost 1.7 million dollars. However, at the same time we feel that the amount allocated is still understated.

Over the past five years, the student population of Quincy has been steadily increasing, and all indications for the forthcoming year show another increase in the student population. Meanwhile, the budget for the schools has not increased accordingly. In fact, for the past five years the amount allocated has basically remained in the $36+ million range.

We also learned at a Citywide Parents' Council meeting that only 39¢ of each dollar goes towards the education of our children. We feel that this amount is inadequate. This may explain why many of the textbooks that are used in our classes today are at least eight years old. How can you justify teaching a course such as history with a book that is 10 years old. How do you explain to a child all that he has missed because the facts aren't up to date? It's like that on television giving a report on Russia and Communism as it was ov two years ago but stating the facts as they were true today.

Education is directly related to the well-being of this city. If the educational standards of Quincy are not high we will not be able to draw in new families. Education is important to the welfare of this city's property values and the quality of life. Today's society is eager to blame the low quality of education for the rise in crime rate and other social problems.

The members of the Quincy Citywide Parents' Council would like to see more money assigned to the school budget. Without it the quality of life in Quincy may be headed downward. Please, Mr. Mayor, review the city's budget and find more funds to direct toward education.

Deegan Orders Rigid Traffic Enforcement

City Manager William J. Deegan Jr. instructed Police Chief Joseph F. Hughes to assign all available men to rigid enforcement of traffic rules following a barrage of criticism from city officials.

Mayor Thomas S. Burgin called attention to speeding around Quincy Square's rotary traffic pattern and yearned for the days when the famed Two Gun Baker rode herd on speeders on his motorcycle.

"I think we are getting a little too loose," said Burgin. "I think it is about time something is done."

City Councillor Alfred G. Helfrich protested speeding on Beale St. in Wollaston and Councillor Edna B. Austin noted that both private cars and buses were ignoring traffic signals in the Square.

ANTI-GAMBLING VOTE

The Quincy Council of Churches passed a series of resolutions sponsored by the Rev. Bedros Baharian, pastor of the Quincy Point Congregational Church, in opposition to gambling.

The few dissenting votes were led by the Rev. Joseph D. Parkman, pastor of the Atlantic Memorial Congregational Church, who protested that the resolutions did not go far enough.

"I feel that we are trying to stamp out only a small section of the gambling evil when what we should be concerned with are the much larger evils of organized gambling," he said.

WORK FORCE DOWN

Henry N. Hazard, general superintendent of the Fore River shipyard, told the Long Service Club that the work force will decline when the Export Liner is completed May 24.

But it should rise from the current 6,500 to 8,000 in January, 1992, he said, after work gets underway on five high speed cargo carriers for which the first keel is to be laid July 1.

JUDGE JOHN FENTON, Jr., Chief Administrative Justice of the Trial Court, was the keynote speaker at the Quincy District Court Law Day ceremonies. He stressed the importance of the rule of law and the struggle for justice.

Awards Presented At Quincy Court Rule Of Law, Struggle For Justice Accented On Law Day

The importance of the rule of law and the struggle around the world for justice were accented by Judge John E. Fenton, Chief Administrative Justice of the Trial Court, during Law Day Ceremonies Tuesday at Quincy District Court.

Recalling last year's Law Day theme, "The Struggle For Justice," and noting this year's theme, "Justice For All--All For Justice," Judge Fenton said:

"These are particularly relevant themes when considered in light of recent world events. Not long ago, even as he professed a commitment to democracy, Peruvian President Alberto Fujimori suspended his country's Constitution and judiciary.

"Using a radical method of 'court reform,' President Fujimori fired over 100 judges and prosecutors. It is when confronted with actions such as President Fujimori's, so contrary to our concepts of democracy and justice, that a true appreciation of the importance of a system of laws and justice is impressed upon us.

"Despite the repression which still exists in nations around the world today, it is heartening to see that other nations, formerly governed by repressive regimes, have made significant strides in the struggle towards establishing democracy and attaining justice."

As examples, Judge Fenton pointed to the fall of the Berlin Wall, the unification of Germany and countries which have emerged from behind the Iron Curtain and are trying to establish democracies.

"...and witness most particularly," he said, "the dissolution of the Soviet Union which has resulted in enabling many of its former citizens to experience individual freedoms for the first time."

Progress has been made, he said, but stressed that these countries "have systems of law and justice which are in their infancy when measured by our concepts of justice in the United States."

But justice in the United States is far from perfect, he said.

"As we approach Law Day, we salute those who continue the struggle for justice against what must seem at times like insurmountable barriers.

"We fervently hope that the progression towards democracy and justice around the world and in the United States continues."

Judge Charles E. Black of Hingham, a former Quincy resident, was officially welcomed by Clerk Magistrate Arthur Tobin as the new presiding justice of Quincy District Court.

Judge Black paid tribute to the Quincy court's outstanding reputation and said he would continue these efforts as presiding justice.

Mayor James Sheets brought the greetings of the city, welcomed Judge Black to Quincy and praised the Quincy court for its programs and achievements.

Special awards were presented during the ceremonies.

RETIRED JUDGE Lewis Whitman receives the Jason Feldman Outstanding Citizen Award from first assistant Clerk Magistrate Robert Bloom. Behind them are Clerk Magistrate Arthur Tobin and Judge Charles Black, presiding justice of Quincy District Court. Retired Judge Albert Kramer was also a recipient but was unable to attend the ceremony.

JUDGE CHARLES E. BLACK, new presiding justice of Quincy District Court, paid tribute to the court's long-time outstanding program. Judge Black, a Hingham resident, formerly lived in Quincy.

ATTY. JOSEPH KILLION was presented the Alfred P. Malaney Award by Patricia Hunt, president of the Quincy Bar Association.

Progress in the Fight Against Cancer

If more doctors suggested it, more patients, particularly more older minority group women, would get the cancer screening tests they need.

Washington, D.C., (NAPS)—Scientists at the National Cancer Institute have come up with a way to save the lives of many older minority women. They say doctors should more readily recommend mammograms. The researchers, Lee S. Caplan, Barbara L. Wells and Suzanne Haynes found the most common reason Black women over 65 years of age don't have mammograms is that their doctors never suggest that they do. The study found a considerable number of physicians don't recommend mammograms because they don't want their patients to have to pay for them. Caplan and his colleagues noted that a large number of Cuban and other Hispanic women also reported their physicians not recommending the procedure.

Physicians have to share the responsibility for minority women not having mammograms and for their lack of knowledge regarding breast cancer, Caplan says. Lack of knowledge among minority women about breast cancer is alarming, says the National Cancer Institute. Many minority women are unaware that the earlier breast cancer is found, the greater the chances for survival.

According to Dr. Caplan, if there is going to be some progress in the fight against cancer, breast cancer screening for minority women is a must. There's no better place to begin, he adds, than in the doctor's office.

DENTISTRY TODAY

by OFELIA V. VILLANUEVA, D.M.D.

North Quincy, Ma. 02171

Dentistry has a new technique for preventing transmission of disease. Cleanliness and proper sterilization are an integral part of dental practice, but because of AIDS, HEPATITIS B and HERPES, the dental profession has made several visible changes in the provision of Dental Services in order to ensure health and safety in the dental office.

The Center for Disease Control and Occupational Safety & Health Administration (OSHA) are two agencies strongly involved in ensuring that all Dental Health Professionals are following the new guidelines.

•HEPATITIS VACCINATION should be available to all dental personnel including post exposure follow-up.

•Dental personnel should receive training in patient and environmental protection procedures.

•Dental instruments should be sterilized after use.

•Proper handling and disposing of medical waste.

•Implementation of UNIVERSAL PRECAUTIONS such as hand washing before and after treatment, decontamination of work surfaces after contact with blood or other potentially infectious material, using personal protection equipment (PPE) of disposable gloves, masks, gowns, lab coats and eye protection.

All of this infection control procedures means high cost to dentists, average cost range from $8.00 to $21.00 per patient visit so then high fees to patients. Regardless of cost, infection control is not optional. The risk of cross contamination has become an integral part of today's practice of Dentistry.

The American Dental Association, Academy of General Dentistry, Massachusetts Dental Association, South Shore Dental Ass. and other associations are helping their dentist members to keep updated in all recommendations and requirements.

Patients are encouraged to ask dentists questions regarding procedures which are performed in their dental office in order to prevent the transmission of disease.

Dealing With Stress

People cannot escape the effects of stress. What is stressful to one person may not be stressful to another, but everyone is affected. The body's organ system is the initial target of stress and subject to damage by stress.

There are many forms of stress, although we think mainly of mental stress. Others are physical stress such as not getting enough sleep, chemical stress of pesticides, medications, etc., and thermal stress of becoming chilled or overheated.

Excessive tension caused by stress will enter the body after superficial buffer sites have been saturated. As each person has his or her predisposition toward disease, not every organ is as strong as another, and one of these organs will be affected first by the outcome of stress.

Some patients will develop asthmas (weak lungs). Others develop migraine headaches or multiple sclerosis, or psychiatric illness (weak neurological system). Still others develop ulcers or colitis (weak intestinal system).

Knowledge that stress can trigger illness such as asthma, peptic ulcer, headaches and hypertension is not new. Looking at stress-induced diseases, we can see that initially they were not part of an irreversible pathological process, but are due to an imbalance of the autonomic nervous system.

In his book, The Stress of Life, Prof. Hans Selye, an authority on stress conditions, states that rheumatic problems are due to "maladaptation of the body against stress."

Acupuncturist case records confirm this, showing that many forms of chronic rheumatism are associated with stress.

Chinese medicine teaches that the musculo-tendon system is the first buffer of the effects of stress. When stress and tension saturate this protective mechanism, internal (genetically determined) symptoms develop in the weaker organ systems. Acupuncture can reverse this process by discharging the stress build-up at trigger points.

Achieving more miles per gallon, a continuing challenge to automotive designers, has affected the cooling system as much as any part of the vehicle. To reach their objective engineers reduce wind resistance and vehicle weight, among other improvements.

This has led to smaller radiators to accommodate the reduced frontal area of the vehicle. And to reduce weight, the old copper and brass radiators with soldered joints were replaced with aluminum and plastic: lighter, less expensive and with excellent life expectancy.

Aluminum, however, is more vulnerable to breakdown of the inhibitors in the antifreeze/coolant. Failure to flush the cooling system and replace antifreeze/coolant can lead to the demise of a fairly new radiator.

To gain maximum life from an aluminum radiator, Car Care Council recommends cooling system service annually, certainly no less often than every other year. If you're a do-it-yourselfer, don't merely change antifreeze, they say. Flush out the system with a quality cooling system cleaner.

And if you've been in the habit of "topping off" the cooling system with pure antifreeze, beware of getting too high a ratio of antifreeze to water. The maximum allowable is 70 percent after which the coolant loses its heat transfer characteristics and the engine overheats.

Maintaining proper coolant level is critical as well. The Council reports that among thousands of vehicles checked during National Car Care Month, 29 percent were low on antifreeze/coolant.

Further, inspectors found 12 percent had rusty or otherwise contaminated antifreeze/coolant, indicating need for flushing of the system.

In addition to flushing and replacing antifreeze, seasonal cooling system service should include inspection of drive belts and hoses. It's also wise to have the system pressure tested for leaks and for condition of the radiator pressure cap.

Finally, reminds the Council, a thermostat that allows the engine to run too cool can damage the engine.

For a free illustrated pamphlet on cooling system care send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Car Care Council, Department D, One Grande Lake Drive, Port Clinton, OH 43452.

Consumer Corner

How Much Car Can You Afford?

(NAPS)—To avoid being taken for a ride, you should have a good idea of how much you can afford to spend for a car before you shop.

It's a matter of determining how much cash you have to apply toward the purchase and how much you can comfortably borrow, according to the Credit Union National Association.

First determine how much savings you can apply to the down payment. Next determine the net value of your current vehicle, if you have one. Add these together as well as any manufacturer's rebate. The sum represents your cash on hand.

Once you know how much you can afford, you're ready to look at cars.

Next determine the size of the monthly payment you would be comfortable with and how long you would be willing to make it. For example, a $200 monthly payment for four years at 8.5 percent interest, would "buy" a loan of about $8,000.

Say you saved $2,500 for a down payment and your present car is worth $4,000 if you sell it yourself. Adding these figures to the $8,000 gives you a total of $14,500 to spend for a new car.

Many credit unions have a special car-buying consumer information program called Car Facts™, aimed at helping their members determine how much they can spend, select a car that meets their needs and negotiate a good deal on car purchases and financing.

For help in finding a credit union to join, call 800-358-5710, or send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Join, CUNA PR, Box 431, Madison, WI 53701.

Did You Know?

Here are some facts about automobile safety that may make you feel more secure.

• One of the most significant technological breakthroughs in safety in the last ten years is anti-lock brakes. The GM anti-lock brake system, ABS VI, received Popular Science Magazine's Grand Award for Technology.

• In the interests of safety, Mercedes crash tests about 100 vehicles a year. GM crash tests five times as many.

NEWS OF SAFETY

New Garage Door Openers: Safer, More Reliable

North American Precip Syndicate

Opening the door to greater safety in America's garages, one leading manufacturer has done two things:

- Produced a safety poster to teach parents and their children about garage door system safety.
- Created a new line of garage door openers built to exceed the new, stricter safety standards in effect as of January 1, 1993.

Designed and engineered to be the best in the industry, these new garage door openers from Stanley Door Systems work smoothly and dependably. The choice of a growing number of families and professionals alike, the new garage door opener safety features include:

• Electronic Instant Reverse via Hall Effect Sensor: This provides greater sensitivity while safely operating a wider range of door types—from lightweight fiberglass models to bulky one-piece doors.

• Safe-T-Monitor™ System: reverses sooner and with less force than other opener systems.

• Safe-T-Close™ Infrared Reversing System: This non-contact safety system causes the door to automatically reverse the closing cycle when the electronic beam across the door threshold is broken.

A special garage door opener safety system reverses the door when it comes in contact with an obstruction.

• Safe-T-Edge™ Reversing System: An option to the Safe-T-Close System, this patented safety feature reverses the door when it comes in contact with an obstruction.

• Constant Contact To Close: In the event that either Safe-T-Close or Safe-T-Edge is not connected to the garage door opener, you may still operate it with constant contact pressure on the wall mounted pushbutton.

• Safe-T-Cycle™: Should the garage door be unable to fully close for any reason within 30 seconds, this safety feature would automatically open the door.

For a free brochure that can tell you about garage door opener safety, as well as a free safety poster that's been distributed to 35,000 pediatricians and 5,000 day care centers nationwide, write: Stanley Safety Program, P.O. Box 1416, Birmingham, MI 48012-1416.

Household Hazardous Waste Collections

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Residents should prepare to clean out their basements, attics and garages in the next couple of weeks.

Two Household Hazardous Waste Collection Days will be held Saturday, May 15 and 22 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Department of Public Works Yard, 55 Sea St.

Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien, chairman of the City Council Disposal and Recycling Committee, is urging all residents to participate in and/or volunteer for the collection.

"We need volunteers to make the collection successful," Chretien said at Monday night's committee meeting. The waste will be collected by employees of the environmental management company Clean Harbors, he said.

Public Works Commissioner David Colton, who noted that the theme of the cleanup is "It's Time To Bring The Skeletons Out Of Your Closet," said a variety of hazardous wastes such as cleaners, disinfectants, paints, pool chemicals, motor oil, car batteries and others will be accepted at the collection.

The city has not had such a collection since 1987, Colton said. He added that the city hopes to make it an annual event.

Colton said the $80,000 price tag for the collection will be divided evenly between FY93 and FY94, which begins July 1. He added that the city will pay for the collection out of the money it saved the through the renegotiation of its rubbish contract with Browning-Ferris Industries.

The collection is open to Quincy residents only, Colton said, and both a driver's license and another form of identification will be required at the DPW yard.

Chretien said volunteers will not be required to handle any hazardous waste at the site but instead will go through "more of an information process." Volunteers will be asked to direct people to the appropriate lines, depending on what type of hazardous the residents have brought, as well as check I.D.s and "maybe get people a cup of coffee."

Volunteer shifts will be divided into three time periods: 7:30 to 10:30 a.m., 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Quincy Recycling Committee volunteer Beth Benjamin said at the meeting that the collection will go smoother if volunteers are on hand before it starts and after its completion.

Wastes being accepted at the cleanup will include:

Bleaches, ammonia and disinfectants; oven, toilet bowl and drain cleaners; cosmetics, nail polishes and removers; poisons and pesticides; herbicides and fertilizers; kerosene and other waste fuels; oil-based paints; paint stripper, turpentine and solvents; swimming pool chemicals; photographic chemicals, and antifreeze.

For more information in volunteering for or participating in the collection, call the Department of Public Works at 376-1901.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

Mother's Day will soon be here...a good time for us to tell our mothers all the good things we didn't tell her during the past year...This day gives us the chance to say, in a very special way, the loving things we should have said by our words and actions all year long. If it is possible, we tell her - through some word, some thought, some act...of our appreciation...of our love...of our thankfulness of having the joy of having each other...

And Mother's Day is a beautiful holiday of memories-whether mother is with us or not. Her guiding hand, love of beauty, devotion and faithfulness deserves prayers of thankfulness that God gave us a mother...

To all mothers and children alike we hope Mother's Day is truly a happy day of memories for all of you...

Up And Down Season For Quincy, North

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Quincy and North baseball teams are having up and down seasons, but North achieved one of its goals last week--to defeat Quincy.

The Raiders topped the Presidents, 5-2, on Dave Reinhardt's base-clearing triple in the seventh inning.

Each team dropped to 5-4 with losses Monday, North being edged by Plymouth, 2-1, and Quincy bowing to Taunton, 4-2.

The Presidents were scheduled to make up a twice-postponed game at Taunton Tuesday, played at Weymouth yesterday (Wednesday), will host Bridgewater-Raynham today (Thursday) at 3:30 at Adams Field and will be at Plymouth next Wednesday.

The Raiders hosted Falmouth yesterday, will be at Barnstable Friday, will host Silver Lake Monday at 3:30 at Adams and will be at Taunton next Thursday.

Reinhardt was a two-way standout in North's win over Quincy, winning the game with his three-run triple and making an outstanding catch in the bottom of the sixth. With runners on second and third and two outs, Quincy's Jeff Craig lined a shot up the middle which looked like a sure hit but Reinhardt charged in and grabbed it off his shoetops.

"Dave's been hitting well all year and he made the big plays when we needed them today," said North coach Leo Donovan.

"In the last inning we just wanted to load them up and get the big guy (Reinhardt) up there. He certainly came through."

Mike Patch (3-0) was the winning pitcher and Quincy's Tom Malvesti was the hard-luck loser.

Patch gave up two runs in the first inning but blanked the Presidents the rest of the way, giving up four hits and striking out six.

Noel DiBona drove in both Quincy runs with a bases-loaded single. After that Patch retired 15 batters in a row.

North catcher Dan Duncan drove in the first two runs with a fourth inning double that just missed clearing the left field fence at Adams Field by a few feet. Mark Cahill had led the inning off with a long triple at right-center.

After Reinhardt's last inning heroics, Patch finished strong by striking out the side in the bottom of the seventh.

"This was a typical Quincy-North game," said Quincy coach Bob Sylvia. "Both pitchers had fine games and Reinhardt came through with the big plays both ways for them."

Monday North wasted another outstanding pitching performance by Sean Donovan, who pitched a three-hitter in the loss at Plymouth. He struck out four and walked only one as he fell to 2-3. In his last two starts he was given just one run.

Charlie Rozanitis had two of North Quincy's six hits. North scored in the first and held the lead until the bottom of the sixth when the Blue Eagles scored both runs, one earned.

"This was one of Sean's better games but we just aren't hitting for him," said Donovan. "In his previous game we were shut out, spoiling another fine effort."

Quincy lost to Taunton despite Steve Miller's second straight strong pitching effort. Miller, whose first pitching assignment resulted in a win over Silver Lake, went six innings. John Russell pitched the seventh.

DiBona, Miller and Duane Holmes led the Quincy attack.

In Quincy's 8-2 win over Silver Lake, Miller made his pitching debut and went five strong innings. Chris Cotter, a transfer from North Attleboro, pitched two strong innings of relief.

Robbie Kane and Cotter had two hits and an RBI each.

Quincy also topped Barnstable, 10-3, with a budding new star, freshman Joe Biagini, following in the footsteps of two brothers who starred at Quincy, going 4-for-4 with three RBIs.

John Russell pitched six-hit ball to improve his record to 3-0.

North Quincy lost to Bridgewater-Raynham, 3-0, despite another fine pitching effort by Donovan. North was held to two hits by Brian Rivers, who struck out 11. Donovan pitched another three-hitter in defeat.

North Quincy Girls Rock Plymouth, 11-5

The North Quincy High School girls softball team rocked Plymouth 11-5 Monday to avenge a 24-8 shelling earlier this season.

Senior left-hander Rebecca Squires scattered eight and went the distance for North Quincy.

Loren Gates had three singles and two runs scored to lead the 10-hit North attack. Eileen McDonough had two hits, two runs batted in and scored twice. Karen Manna also had two hits and two runs scored.

North Quincy wasted little time getting on the scoreboard.

In the first inning, McDonough reached on an error, stole second and third and came across on as Squires grounded out.

Five hits and two Plymouth errors added up to six runs for North Quincy in the second to take a 7-0 lead.

Three more runs came across in the third on wild itches and passed balls by Plymouth pitcher Carol Romero and catcher Staci Glick.

North was up 11-1 after four innings but Plymouth scored one in the fifth, two in the sixth and one in the seventh.

Squires gave up only one walk while scattering eight hits and is now 3-4 for the season.

North Quincy is 3-6 in the Old Colony League and 3-8 overall.

Junior Farm League Season Underway

The Quincy Junior Farm Baseball League is underway with games at Faxon and Pageant Fields.

Clinton Declines Invitation

Over 250 In PAL Road Race

Over 250 runners have already entered the Quincy Police Athletic League annual 3.5 mile road race which will be held Sunday, May 16.

But one hoped-for participant is not among them.

The White House has advised Mayor James Sheets, a PAL board member, that President Bill Clinton will be unable to participate.

Sheets had sent Clinton an invitation to run in the race which raises funds for PAL youth activities.

Marcia L. Hale, Assistant to the President, informed Sheets by letter:

"Thank you for your kind invitation to President Clinton. He does appreciate your offer and is sorry he will be unable to join you.

"Unfortunately, the tremendous demands on the President as he works to move our country forward do not give him the opportunity to accept as many invitations as he would like.

"On behalf of the President, thank you again for your invitation. Your continued interest and support are deeply appreciated."

The race will start at 10 a.m. at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The entry fee was $8 before May 1 and is now $10. T-shirts will be presented to the first 300 entrants. Hamburgers, hot dogs and soft drinks will be provided after the race.

HEATHER RENDLE of North Quincy has accepted a scholarship to Bucknell University. A four-year starter on the volleyball team, she is flanked by Acting Principal Eileen Feeney and her father and coach, Jim Rendle.

Volleyball

Rendle Bound For Bucknell On Scholarship

Heather Rendle, highly-recruited middle blocker for the North Quincy 1991 and 1992 state championship volleyball teams, has accepted a scholarship to Bucknell University.

Heather, the 1992 Boston Globe Player of the Year, will join former North teammate Brenda Hayduck, the 1991 Globe Player of the Year, at Bucknell.

Bucknell coach Cindy Opalski hopes that the Hayduck-Rendle combination will be as successful at Bucknell as it was at North Quincy.

Rendle was a four-year starter at North, her teams having a combined 74-10 record, including four straight tournament appearances. She was a two-time Old Colony League all-star as well as a two-time Boston Globe, Boston Herald and Patriot Ledger all-scholastic.

Heather is also a member of Geoff Hennessy's North track team. She is the two-time league champion in the high jump. Her 5-4 jump, a personal best, was second in the all-state track meet and is equal to the best jump of anyone at Bucknell.

Heather, the daughter of Linda and Jim Rendle (also her coach at North), is a Distinction High Honor Roll student in this year's recipient of the Jewish American War Veterans "Classmates Today-Neighbors Tomorrow" Award.

THE PULSE OF ABS

Increased consumer appreciation for automobile safety has led to the popularity of anti-lock brake systems (ABS) in recent years. As standard equipment by some car manufacturers and as optional equipment by others, ABS eliminates the skid that may otherwise accompany hard braking on slippery roads. It does so by placing sensors on each wheel that detect slippage during braking. When slippage occurs, the brakes are automatically pumped at the affected wheel to prevent the lockup that leads to skids. Although ABS requires no special action on the part of the driver, some may be surprised by the slight pulsation of the brake pedal as ABS activates during braking. Drivers are advised to acclimate themselves to ABS in an empty parking lot prior to need.

HINT: Some insurance companies offer discounts on cars equipped with ABS.

'Bad Girls' Doing Well

The Quincy Bay "Bad Girls" Athletic Club's under 14 soccer team is playing well in its first full outdoor spring season in the New England Classic Soccer League.

In their first game against perennial power South Coast Soccer Club, the Bad Girls applied constant pressure on South Coast's goal keeper but came away empty as South Coast won, 4-0.

Midfielders Sarah Satkovich, Angela Hogrell and Liz Fitzpatrick controlled the middle of the field for Quincy and connected with forwards Kim Barry and Hillary O'Donough often, but just couldn't score. The defense, led by Jill Picardi, Dominique Good and goalie Leela Shankar held tough throughout the game. South Coast scored of its goals in a six-minute span.

The solid play continued with the Bad Girls playing the Kics of Holbrook. The teams battled to a scoreless tie at Bridgewater State College. Quincy's attack was relentless and at most times dominated but couldn't find the finishing touch. Forward Pam Farrell, midfielder Kara McSweeney and defender Kristen Kelley played fine games.

While every time the Bad Girls meet in the NECSL is multi-town all-star team, Quincy is just that, Quincy girls. The team plays five more games in the league before the summer tournament. Tournament play will lead it through Mass., N.H., Ct. and Virginia.

Opposition At Council Hearing Sheets Defends Increased Budget

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Despite opposition to his $128,689,981 FY94 budget from residents at a public hearing Monday night, Mayor James Sheets said Tuesday that Quincy is a "stable community financially" that is "running a tight ship."

Sheets' proposed budget, which would go into effect July 1, is up $3.8 million or 3 percent over FY93's budget of $124,791,584. Sheets, however, said Tuesday that better than 60 percent of city departments have budgets that are less than when he first took office in 1990.

The mayor added that Quincy's largest budgets have only increased slightly since 1990. The school budget is up about 2 percent and the police and fire budgets up about one percent apiece, he said.

When told that residents at Monday night's public hearing said they wanted the budget to be cut, mainly to help decrease the property tax on homeowners and business owners, Sheets expressed confidence that the budget he sent to the to the City Council May 3 is a solid one.

"I think it's a sound budget," said Sheets. "It's a very tight budget. If anyone can show me where we can save money, I'm willing to sit down with them. If ways can be made to save money in the budget, I'm open to that."

The City Council has the authority to cut Sheets' proposed budget, but not add to it. The council has 45 days to review the budget and plans to vote on it sometime in June.

Residents sent a clear message to the council Monday night: Cut the budget.

A group of 24 citizens, less than half of whom spoke, attended the public hearing in the City Council Chamber at City Hall. Most expressed dissatisfaction with the proposed budget because of its impact on property taxes.

Teachers Approve Three-Year Contract

By a vote of 399-96, Quincy teachers approved a three-year contract Monday which is expected to be ratified by the School Committee May 19.

The teachers, members of the Quincy Education Association, had been working without a contract for eight months. The vote concludes a contract dispute which had put teachers on the brink of strike two weeks ago.

Under the new pact, teachers will receive a two percent salary increase retroactive to January, a three percent hike in September, one percent in January, 1994, and two percent in January, 1995.

The contract, which covers public school teachers and Quincy College faculty, expires Aug. 31, 1995.

Quincy teachers' salaries now start at $20,330 and range up to $41,066 for a teacher with 12 years experience, a master's degree, and other advanced college credits.

The retroactive pay hike would increase starting salaries by $200 and experienced teachers with a master's degree and other college credits by $400.

The contract has a stipulation concerning a change in governance at Quincy College. If an independent governing board takes control of the college from the school committee, the independent board would be bound by the contract.

The new board would wait until the contract expires to negotiate a new agreement with college teachers.

NEW PLAYGROUND at Collins Rest-A-While, Hancock St. and Southern Artery, officially opened last Saturday to the delight of many Quincy children, including Andres and Erica Peterson who enjoy one of the new slides. Volunteers from the local Iron Workers and Laborers constructed and assembled the new equipment. The Quincy Park Improvement Committee was instrumental in raising the necessary funds. ## Crane Library Needs Addition, Says Director

By BILL DONCASTER
Quincy's library director, Warren Watson, would like to see a 35,000 square foot addition to the Thomas Crane Library.

It will all rest on getting the money to do it, and the city does not have it.

The addition, says Watson, would house much of the library's present services with an ability to give patrons easier and more comfortable access to what the library has to offer.

According to Watson, an addition to the Thomas Crane Library has been a priority for Quincy's Board of Library Directors for at least 25 years.

The historic building wasn't built for this age, Watson said. A growth in the library's collection, computerization, and changes in library practices, according to Watson, make an addition long overdue.

Estimated at $100 a square foot for the addition, Watson said, the project would cost roughly $4 million.

Mayor James Sheets called the project "highly ambitious." Sheets said that the city would certainly support any effort to raise money for such a project, probably through state grants, but that there is no money in the city budget for such an undertaking.

The Library's first obligation is to clear the building of all architectural boundaries to the handicapped due to state mandate. A recent estimate put that cost at $600,000. According to Watson, a new addition would make some changes to the old building unnecessary.

Presently, the library is utilizing 22,000 square feet. That includes some spaces which Watson says shouldn't be used. According to Watson, the Thomas Crane Library houses one of the best public law libraries in the state, but "it's presently kept on a balcony, you have to be fairly athletic to maneuver it."

Francis Keough of Springfield, an independent consultant, estimated in 1987 that the Thomas Crane Library needed an additional 34,500 square feet in order to serve its patrons properly.

In addition to any added space, the old building needs to be refurbished, according to Sandra McCauley, secretary to the Library Board of Trustees. "I think its one of the most beautiful buildings in Quincy," she

Sheets Defends Increased City Budget

Loren Strout of 112 Robertson St., owner of Presidents City Motel, said that small businesses have been leaving Quincy for some time now because of the unfair tax burden imposed on them by the city government.

"We are happy to hear the mayor say he is searching for financial stability, but it was done on the backs of all of us," said Strout, who said he was speaking on behalf of the Quincy Business Voice Association. "Small business is the backbone of the local economy, and Quincy in recent years has lost at least 236 small businesses. Large corporations like Home Depot will not replace them."

Eugene McCarthy of 108 Butler Rd. agreed, saying both business owners and homeowners have been hit hard by property taxes.

"The budget is being increased tremendously for taxpayers," said McCarthy. "You know the plight of the taxpayers. It's about time you think about the taxpayers."

Cliff Pamplin of 11 Riverside Ave. expressed similar sentiments.

"I agree with wholeheartedly those two gentlemen (Strout and McCarthy)," said Pamplin. "The mayor is giving away the store. Businesses are going to die because taxpayers can't afford their goods."

City Auditor Robert Foy said Tuesday that 57 percent of the city's budget is derived from property taxes, with 22% coming from state aid and 21% from local revenues. The tax classification rates set in December by the City Council were $13.46 for homeowners and $28.79 for businesses, compared to figures of $12.19 and $26.12 the previous year.

Sheets' FY94 budget calls for a 2.5 percent increase in the tax levy, the maximum allowed under state law. Residents and businesses will not be affected, however, until the council sets the tax rates in the fall.

Foy said Monday night that in order for there to be no property tax increases for businesses or homeowners, $3 million would have to be shaved from the FY94 budget.

Several residents also expressed dissatisfaction with raises given to most of the city's workers, particularly the police and fire departments. The highest increase in the mayor's budget, $2 million in school spending, will mainly go towards a 4 percent pay raise for Quincy school teachers recently negotiated between the School Committee and teachers' union.

The teachers' union ratified the agreement Monday night.

Sheets said Tuesday, however, that funding for the raises was obtained through money saved by the city's recently switching from six health insurance carriers to one.

"Twenty-four unions had to agree to that," said Sheets, who added that literally millions of dollars were saved through the switch.

McCarthy also questioned a $2 million budget expenditure earmarked for Quincy Hospital. The mayor explained that during the McCauley administration, the city agreed to pay the pension costs of Quincy Hospital employees in exchange for $60 million in federal insurance money which would pay for an addition to the hospital.

"It's part of a covenant made in 1988," said Sheets. "I can't break that."

Leo Fitzpatrick of 5 Brody Ave. asked Monday night about several budget items, including $90,000 for Presidents Golf Course, $60,000 for playground supervisors and $40,000 for weights and measures.

Councillor Michael Cheney explained that Quincy is currently halfway through a 50-year agreement to pay the real estate taxes for the golf course. Cheney said the city made the agreement because the state could have subdivided the land if Quincy did not agree to pay for the real estate.

"We want to use it for open purposes," said Cheney.

Cheney, in response to Fitzpatrick's comment that he and his grandchildren never see supervisors at any of the city's playgrounds, said that supervisors are necessary because they serve in a number of capacities, such as helping out with basketball programs, taking children on field trips, and other duties.

Weights and measures is an important expenditure, Cheney said, because gas stations and other businesses are constantly changing their prices. The businesses would be able to give consumers less for their money if not for the employment of weights and measures, he said.

When Fitzpatrick also asked about the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority assessment, Cheney said that while nobody is happy with MWRA rates, "we're making some headway." Cheney said a number of protests, including a Tea Party organized by Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson and scheduled for this Saturday at noon at Marina Bay, have helped bring attention to the plight of MWRA ratepayers.

Cheney noted that all residents are invited to bring copies of their water and sewer bills to Saturday's Tea Party.

Sheets has asked for $13,443,602 for the FY94 MWRA assessment, which is up $1,182,385 or 8.8 percent from the FY93 figure of $12,261,217. The FY94 figure breaks down to $10,574,000 for the sewer assessment and $2,869,602 for the water assessment.

Ruth Teresa Ray of 31 Lyons St. wondered Monday night why only two dozen people attended the public hearing.

"If this is such an important meeting, why aren't there more people here?" said Ray, who speculated that enough people don't care about the city budget and its impact on residents.

Councillor Timothy Cahill, chairman of the City Council Finance Committee, said that might indeed be the case.

"Unfortunately, I think a lot of people don't care until the tax rate is set," said Cahill.

Pamplin, speaking before the council a second time, disagreed.

"People have lost faith in this city government," he said. "That's why not many people are here. We ask for help, we ask for better city government and we ask for relief and what do we get? An increase. It's not fair. The City Council has got to work harder."

Michael C. Morad of Rawson Rd., however, said he thought residents are simply apathetic about what happens in the city.

"Nobody gets involved, nobody wants to get involved, and if nobody cares, then people have no right to moan and groan and complain," he said.

Cahill said that despite the low attendance at the hearing, the comments made by the residents will not be taken lightly.

"We have been listening, and that's what this hearing is about," said Cahill. "We're going to try our best to cut where we can without affecting services."

Councillor Joseph LaRaia agreed.

"The numbers appearing here do not diminish the importance of what you're saying," said LaRaia, who added that other residents might be watching the hearing at home on cable television.

Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien said that despite the fact that Monday's public hearing would be the only such hearing on the budget, citizens are welcome to contact any of the councillors by telephone before the council votes on the budget.

"I hope tonight is the kickoff of gathering public input," said Chretien. "We're not going to vote on the budget until about June 16. The City Council encourages people to talk to us over the next 45 days."

Cahill said at the council's May 3 meeting that Monday's public hearing was the first ever public hearing to be held regarding a proposed city budget. The hearing was suggested by Chretien at the May 3 meeting, who made a motion that it be held.

The council plans to hold at least four budget sessions with department heads before it votes on the budget. Cahill has also said that a fifth session will be scheduled if the budget review is not completed by the end of the fourth session.

Warren Watson Retiring July 2 Ann McLaughlin Named Crane Library Director

By ROBERT BOSWORTH
Ann E. McLaughlin, a Quincy public library employee for 22 years, has been appointed director of the Thomas Crane Public Library effective July 5 by Mayor James Sheets.

McLaughlin, who has been the library's assistant director since 1983, will succeed Warren Watson after he retires July 2. Watson, named director in March, 1968, said the time is right for him to step down.

"After 25 years on the job, it's time," said Watson, who turned 68 years old in April. "I've been in library administration since 1962 and I just think it was time."

Regarding McLaughlin as a successor, Watson said the library is very capable hands.

"I'm very pleased with Ann's appointment. I know she'll do a good job. She has established a record all her own."

He noted McLaughlin established the Library's Literacy Volunteers affiliate in 1986. Seven years later, the program has served more than 750 students and is considered a model library program in the state.

Watson also pointed out McLaughlin has obtained nearly all of the funding for the literacy volunteer program by securing federal and state grants. "She has a good track record. I predict good things for the library under Ann's direction."

McLaughlin, 44, will earn $48,920 as library director. She has been employed with the Crane library in numerous capacities and positions since 1971. She began her career as a senior assistant, and has worked her way up serving as a reference librarian, branch librarian and adult services supervisor.

In 1983, she was named assistant director of libraries and has been involved in all aspects of staff management and library services, including budget preparation, long-range planning, staff development, collective

ANN McLAUGHLIN bargaining and library programming.

McLaughlin said her experience in different library positions will be an asset as director. "I've worked my way around the system and I think that's a real advantage."

A Quincy native, she has passed up opportunities with other public libraries because she feels a "real, strong commitment to the community."

"I feel like this is my hometown and I think that's wonderful."

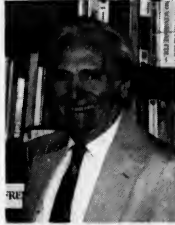

Born in Quincy, McLaughlin attended the Gridley Bryant School until moving to Milton after completing the sixth grade. She moved to Falmouth a few years ago.

McLaughlin received her bachelor of arts and masters in library services from Simmons College. She is a member of the American Library Association and the Massachusetts Library Association.

McLaughlin has been active in community affairs, serving on a number of local committees and commissions, including the Quincy Arts Lottery Commission, Mayors Commission on the Status of Women, Quincy Human Relations Committee and the Quincy Early Childhood Community Council Conference Committee.

McLaughlin and her husband, Gerald Aronson, have two boys, David, 14, and Nathaniel, 12.

Sheets appointed McLaughlin after receiving a recommendation from the Crane Library Board of Trustees. "She's done an outstanding job. She's WARREN WATSON been very effective and has been a good spokesperson which the library needs.

"She'll do an outstanding job because she's been there and she knows the process."

The Board of Trustees interviewed McLaughlin in March. They then sent a recommendation to Sheets who could have accepted or rejected it.

"The mayor makes an appointment from the recommendation of the Board of Trustees; he can reject it but he does not have the authority to choose anyone else than

Ayers Forms Neighborhood Crime-Watch Task Force

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers has formed a neighborhood crime-watch task force as a result of a number of recently reported break-ins in Squantum and areas of North Quincy.

The task force is comprised of representatives from each street who will carefully watch for any suspicious activity in their neighborhoods.

Ayers, who is working with Mayor James Sheets and Police Chief Mullen, said this problem is a priority. He is sending a strong message that he and his constituents will not tolerate crime in Ward 6.

Ayers has worked with the police department to increase unmarked patrol cars in the area in addition to detectives specifically dealing with juveniles in the area.

Ayers praised the cooperation he has received from the Quincy Police Department and urges residents to cooperative by reporting any unusual person or activity immediately to the police department or to him.

"I've been in touch with Norfolk County District Attorney Bill Delahunt to assure that perpetrators will be dealt with to the fullest extent of the law. No stone will be left unturned to make our neighborhoods safe," the councillor added.

To join the task force, call Ayers at 472-9877.

Fabrizio Wants Ambulance Station In Southwest Quincy

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio has asked Quincy Hospital Director Ellen Zane and Mayor James Sheets to require the ambulance company who has the city's contract awarded to them to station an ambulance in Southwest Quincy.

"It is my understanding that the Quincy contract is highly coveted in the private ambulance industry. Therefore, we should make every effort to insure the best service for the community," Fabrizio said.

The councillor noted that due to the isolated nature of many streets on the western side of the Southeast Expressway, the response time from the Field Street ambulance station is a major concern to residents in the area.

Fabrizio also pointed out there is an increased demand in the area due to access to and from the expressway from nearby feeder routes. "With a number of firms competing for this city contract, we have the leverage to restore some peace of mind to the people of these neighborhoods who might at some point, rely on emergency services."

Fabrizio suggested in his correspondence that the contract include three rather than the present two ambulances, without any additional cost to the taxpayers.

LONELY ROAD TO HEART ATTACK

There is apparently another reason to not live alone. A study of 1,200 heart attack survivors found that those who lived by themselves had nearly twice as many subsequent attacks as those with companions in the home. It wasn't determined exactly what it is about living with someone that seems to protect against heart attacks. Perhaps human contact has some type of soothing effect on heart function, or maybe it's just that having someone in the home improves a person's chances of getting prompt medical attention in an emergency. Whatever the underlying reason, it is a powerful one. No other factors, not age, socioeconomic status, or severity of heart damage, accounted for the ill health of the loners.

P.S. Being married isn't necessary to improve chances of avoiding heart attacks. The key is simply to share living quarters.

In fact, a house mate need not even be human to have beneficial effects on your health. Researchers have found that pet owners tend to stay healthier than single people living without animal companions. If you would like to learn what you can do to stay healthy and ward off the dangers of heart attacks, feel free to call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE AT 472-2550. If necessary, we will refer you to another medical professional. Office hours are by appointment at 101 Adams St., Suite 24, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

No. 32 And 6 Scholarships

It was a sad night for No. 32 — both of them.

Kevin McHale was a picture of dejection as he slowly walked off the floor at Charlotte Coliseum in North Carolina after the Charlotte Hornets eliminated the Celtics in their NBA playoffs series.

The Celtics, showing the stuff they were once made of, almost pulled it out in a dramatic fourth period rally. But it was just not to be.

McHale, who almost got it pulled out, had hoped to finish his brilliant 13-year pro-career on the Boston Garden parquet.

But it was just not to be.

Back home, watching McHale walking off into retirement as the TV camera focused on his No. 32 was Burke.

The former Quincy city councillor and Norfolk County district attorney—wore No. 32 as a Celtic long before McHale did.

That was back in 1957 when Burke, a high scoring sharp-shooter out of U-Mass in Amherst joined the Celtics as a rookie. But while later he decided his future was really to be at a different court—a court of law. He left the Celtics to go to law school.

No. 32 became McHale's in 1980 and he and Burke have built a friendship on it.

McHale refers to Burke as "the original No. 32." Burke, who has been one of McHale's biggest fans, kids, "Someday my No. 32 will hang from the rafters at the Garden." Sure that McHale is going to get it there.

It was really sad that Kevin had to leave like that," said Burke. "I wish his last game could have been at the Garden. He deserved to finish his career before the hometown fans.

"I think he is the greatest inside player that ever played the game. There has never been another one like him."

Burke had shared No. 32 with another famed basketball game.

That was also his number at U-Mass where he was known as "Trigger" Burke as he set scoring and assist records.

Some years later another U-Mass star got to wear No. 32 and went on to break the Burke records. His name: Julius Erving.

There are only three players in the U-Mass Hall of Fame: Burke, Erving and Al Skinner, now coach at the University of Rhode Island.

Burke and Erving have also built a friendship on No. 32.

Burke is now looking forward to the night they raise No. 32 at the Garden.

INCIDENTALLY, Burke is donating six $1,000 scholarships to six men who have influenced his life and the youth of the city.

Three will go to Quincy High School graduates and three to North Quincy graduates who plan to go to U-Mass.

Burke will present the scholarships to the School Committee and let school officials decide on the recipients.

cipients.

The six scholarships will honor:

Gerry Coletta, a long-time friend who is retiring June 1 after serving 31 years on the Quincy Park and Recreation Board.

Marty Finnegan, retired Quincy Schools athletics director, who served on Burke's drugs education staff when Burke was district attorney.

The late Richard Koch, Sr., founder of the Koch Club and long-time executive director of the Quincy Park Department. Burke played basketball for the Koch Club and against such teams as the South Boston Boys Club. Star on that team was a fellow by the name of Ray Flynn who also scored in politics.

The late Munroe MacLean, Burke's basketball coach at Quincy High School in the early 1950's.

Ken Rickson, North Quincy High School basketball coach who served 36 years in the Quincy public schools system.

Guido (Budsie) Pettinelli, former Quincy Police safety officer and a pretty good basketball player himself in the 1940's who is one of the spearheads behind the Quincy Basketball Hall of Fame.

"These are six outstanding men who have done so much for the youth of the city," said Burke.

He hopes to make the scholarships an annual event.

RON MARIANO is somewhat of a hero around the State House.

Mariano and seven other state representatives were on the their way down from the third floor in an elevator which instead of stopping at the first floor continued on down toward the basement and got stuck between the floors.

They couldn't get out and no one could get them out for over 40 minutes.

Mariano to the rescue. He got the inner door of the elevator open and started climbing up between the outer door and the shaft.

An elevator serviceman who had been called arrived on the scene in time to coach Mariano to pull the safety door release at the top of the door. It worked.

As the trapped representatives piled out of the elevator, TV reporter Shelby Scott was there with a cameraman to record it for posterity.

The seven reps. trapped with Mariano gave him a citation which read in part: To the representative you would want to be trapped in an elevator with."

Now, if you happen to see Mariano using the stairs instead of an elevator you'll know why.

OBSERVATION: Isn't that headline "Hillary The First 100 Days" on the cover of last week's issue of People magazine overdoing it a little?

As McCauley Sees It

Quincy Has Benefited From Progressive Political Leadership Over The Years

By FRANCIS X. McCAULEY

During recent months, I have read with great interest and some amusement columns by Patriot Ledger correspondent Ian Menzies about the great progress being made in Quincy by the administration of Mayor James A. Sheets.

If one were not attuned to and familiar with Quincy history, one might draw the conclusion on reading these columns that Quincy languished in the dark ages and that Quincy's renaissance began when Jim Sheets took office Jan. 2, 1990.

I am pleased to report that Quincy has been a great and viable city for many years. The city has had strong neighborhoods and neighborhood associations as well as active veterans, fraternal, civic, service and religious organizations which have contributed to the public good.

Quincy has also benefited from progressive political leadership. In January 1958, Quincy abandoned the often controversial Plan E form of government (1950-57) of an appointed city manager and returned to the Plan A form of a popularly elected "strong" mayor. The legislative branches of city government including a nine-member City Council and six School Committee members. In the intervening 36 years, seven individuals have served as Quincy's chief executive.

Amelio A. Della Chiesa (1958-65), who served as the ceremonial Plan E mayor for four years, served eight years as Quincy's Plan A mayor. A self-made man who also served on the City Council and as state representative, he was a conservative, pro-business mayor.

Della Chiesa's controversial decision in the late 1950s to reduce the assessment of the Fore River Shipyard was a key factor in the shipyard's survival into the 1980s. A pioneer in the privatizing of municipal services (long before the term was coined), Della Chiesa put the collection of rubbish and garbage out on contract in 1959. This procedure continues to work well today.

Mayor Della Chiesa's successor, James R. McIntyre (1966-71) used his dual role as mayor and state senator to bring the MBTA Red Line to Quincy on very favorable financial terms to the city. Mayor McIntyre's insistence that the MBTA locate a station in North Quincy led to the development in Montclair that is now known as the State Street South Complex.

Mayor Walter J. Hannon (1972-75), working with officials of the State Street Bank and other developers, was instrumental in getting the development of this area off the ground. Today, the State Street South Complex employs several thousands of dollars in tax revenues to the city.

During the term of Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia (1976-77), the city received an "Anti-Recession" grant of several million dollars from the federal government. Resisting pressures to divide this grant up among elected officials for small neighborhood projects, Mayor LaRaia committed these funds toward the construction of a new City Hall, a proposal that had been in the discussion stage since the 1920s.

It fell on Mayor Arthur H. Tobin (1978-81) to actually construct the new City Hall. This facility was opened in September 1979.

During Mayor Tobin's administration, the planning and construction of Quincy Center Plaza was completed. One of the largest commercial downtown developments in the city's history, this project brought 1,000 people to work in and patronize downtown Quincy's stores, banks and restaurants.

The early 1980s brought Proposition 2 1/2 and Reaganomics to Quincy. Nineteen eighty-two and 1983 was a period of recession for Quincy and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. In Mr. Menzies' most recent column, Mayor Sheets is quoted as saying that Mayor Frank McCauley (1982-89) received $22 million in local aid. Mayor Sheets failed to point out that the City of Quincy was one of 12 communities hardest hit by Proposition 2 1/2. In fiscal years 1982 through 1984, the city was required to reduce its tax levy by more than $20,700,000—or 31 percent of the 1981 tax levy. Moreover, upon taking office, I found that the city's reserve fund (the free cash account) was not only empty but in the red by almost $11 million.

In addition, in 1982 the City of Quincy was owed over $5.5 million in delinquent property taxes. In fiscal year 1982, the year I took office, the city was literally running on borrowed money. A total of $45 million in short-term revenue anticipation notes were issued at a cost of $1,587,000 in interest charges.

During the McCauley Administration, the free cash deficit of $10,968,000 was turned into a surplus of $10 million in just five years (1987). By the end of my term in 1989, short-term borrowing had been entirely eliminated and delinquent property taxes had been reduced from $5.5 million to $1.85 million, a reduction of $3,650,000, or 66 percent.

Downtown Quincy has been analyzed, discussed and studied to death since World War II ended nearly 50 years ago. Many older residents wistfully remember the "Shopperstown" of the late 1940s and the 1950s. Let me tell you: Shopperstown is gone, and it is not likely to return in our lifetime.

However, downtown Quincy is an important part of the Quincy community and deserves city government's help and attention. In the 1980s, the McCauley administration—through the department of Planning and Economic Development—worked closely with downtown business people as well as developers interested in downtown Quincy. A number of progressive actions were taken to upgrade the area.

Among them:

- Private management of the city offstreet parking areas and the establishment of a validated parking system, May 1984.

- Burgin Parkway Extension completed, November 1985.

- City approval of Industrial Revenue Bonds to assist in the upgrading of existing buildings and the purchase of new equipment as well as the construction of new office buildings in downtown Quincy. Total approvals: $12,450,000—six projects, July 1982 through August 1985.

- Obtained a $1,040,000 state grant to build a 124-space addition to the Ross Parking Garage, August 1985.

- Commercial Loan Program with Bank of Boston aided area business owners to refurbish and/or relocate. Total commitment: $299,150—seven projects, March 1987 through April 1989.

- $780,000 State grant (C.D.A.G.) to provide infrastructure improvements for the President Place project, September 1987.

- Established a Traffic and Parking Department in December 1987 and appointed David Kinnecom Traffic Engineer, August 1987, to direct this department.

- Joint venture with Presidents Place developers, the Norfolk County Commissioners and the City of Quincy, resulted in the construction of a new Quincy College building, 1988.

- $193,755 in state and federal grants to upgrade the Thomas Crane Public Library, March 1988.

- Refurbishment and beautification of the McIntyre Mall, April 1988. Cost: $25,000.

- $1,136,000 in state and federal grants to improve traffic flows and signalization in the downtown area.

One thing the McCauley Administration failed to do: It was the only administration out of the four most recent administrations not to unveil a grand plan for the development of the Hancock parking area. Instead, the parking meters were removed from that lot as well as the Ross parking area and the validated parking system was installed. The Hancock parking area, which was in deplorable condition, was resurfaced and the parking spaces realigned.

Altogether, more than $15,900,000 was expended in downtown Quincy through state and federal grants, as well as low-interest loans and Industrial Revenue Bonds.

Despite all the time and attention the McCauley Administration spent on downtown Quincy, it still had time to construct a $60 million modern addition to Quincy Hospital, a $9,245,000 addition and renovation of the police station, and the construction of a modern animal shelter at a cost of $250,000.

So, Mr. Menzies, take note: Other city administrations are due some credit for progress in Quincy over the years.

[Francis X. McCauley, a former bank executive, City Councillor and School Committee member, served as Mayor of Quincy from 1982-1989.]

Quincy's Yesterdays

Trans-Atlantic Flyers Land At Squantum

Famed aviator Dick Merrill and his companion, Jack Lambie, landed at Squantum Naval Air Station for gas and oil check on the last leg of their trans-Atlantic flight from New York to London and return.

The flyers were delivering films of the dirigible Hindenberg disaster at Lakehurst, N. J., to London and films of the coronation of King George VI of England to New York.

Lt. S. Robert Shultz, the doctor who examined Merrill and Lambie during the 20 minute stop at Squantum, said that both of them were in excellent physical condition.

"They both had headaches and were naturally fatigued but not terribly fatigued," said Lt. Shultz. "They were plenty able to go a long ways yet."

He gave them some aspirin.

Merrill and Lambie were greeted at the airfield by Lt. John J. Shea, commandant of the base, and Lt. Warren Sweetser, who was in charge of the Marine detachment.

Sweetser said Merrill told him that they had not seen land from the time they left England until they came down through the fog and found themselves over Squantum.

Merrill said they intended to land at Dennison Airport in Atlantic but there was a tractor on the runway so they went to the adjacent Squantum field instead.

$2,500 Grant Aids Plan

Parents, Teenagers Working Together To Open Youth Center

By MICHAEL WHALEN

A committee of parents and teenagers hoping to establish a youth center for Quincy teens recently achieved a milestone of sorts when it was awarded its first financial grant.

Committee to Establish Youth Centers Executive Director JoAnn Bragg said the $2,500 grant, which was donated by Impact Quincy, will help to finance a new business letterhead for the group and also to promote the May 22 Walk-A-Thon that will help raise money for the center.

"The bulk of it will go into advertising," she said.

The committee, which is comprised of more than 20 parents and teenagers, has been working since last June in a "joint venture" with the Police Athletic League (PAL) to gain support for the youth center, according to Bragg.

The establishment of the center, she added, is intended to "get the kids off the streets" and give them "something productive" to do. Although the committee intends to have sports equipment, pinball machines, stereos, VCRs and other recreational devices at the center, Bragg noted it will also have a Teen Hotline for young people in trouble and a Good Neighbor Program through which teens will rake leaves, shovel snow, mow lawns and do other chores for area residents.

A site for the center has not yet been chosen, according to Bragg. She said the committee is "open to locating to any place in the city" and has been "working closely" with the mayor's office, City Council and Planning Department to "get a location that is city-owned" since that would be the least expensive avenue to pursue.

Bragg said the committee is also concentrating on soliciting additional funding for the center. She noted that the group has applied for grants from 12 South Shore business organizations and foundations, adding that the funds should be easier to attain now that the committee was recently granted status as a tax-exempt charitable organization by the Internal Revenue Service.

"Most groups won't even talk to you until you get the tax-exempt status," she said.

A contest to choose a name for the center recently received 1,200 entries from students in Grades 6-12 at both private and public schools throughout the city, Bragg said. The winning entry was submitted by Central Middle School sixth grader Vinny Chiu, who suggested that the center be christened "The Teen Getaway."

Runners-up were North Quincy High school freshman Christine Aiello, who suggested "The Commissary," and sophomore John Doyle, who recommended "The Teen Alliance Center." For their efforts, Chiu received a $50 cash prize and Aiello and Doyle $25 apiece from Quincy Youth Soccer League.

Bragg said teenagers who join the center will be asked to sign a prerequisite agreement saying they will abstain from drugs, alcohol and violent activities. In exchange, they will receive I.D. cards identifying them as members of the center.

Those breaking the agreement will lose their memberships.

The committee hopes to persuade pizza shops, movie theaters and other businesses frequented by teenagers to give $1 discounts to teens that present the I.D. cards when making a purchase, according to Bragg. That way, she said, both the teens and the businesses would benefit.

"It's a win-win situation," she said.

Bragg added that the committee hopes to open the center by summertime.

"We've been hearing so much lately about violence in the world, especially in connection with young people," she said. "We've got to give them an alternative to that (violence), and show them the importance of commitment to community service."

Bragg said the six-mile Walk-A-Thon will be held Saturday, May 22 beginning at 9:30 a.m. at Pageant Field. Five checkpoints with water and oranges will be stationed along the route. The Walk-A-Thon will end back at the field where refreshments will be available and, it is hoped, teen entertainment will be provided.

Those interested in participating in the Walk-A-Thon can obtain registration forms and sponsor sheets by calling Bragg at 471-3822 or Jean Shea at 472-4086, or at a committee meeting Wednesday, May 12 in the second floor Conference Room at City Hall, 1305 Hancock St.

Bragg said the establishment of the center will be the first step in the committee's goal to "have one (center) in at least every ward of the city."

"(But) we know we have to start with (just) one," she said.

The concert will be highlighted with performances by soprano Brenda Kelly, tenor Edward Whalen, alto Karen Scarno and bass Micheal Drumheller.

Kelly is a founding member of the Quincy Choral Society and well-known in New England for her concert work. Recently, she appeared in an all-Mozart concert with the President's String Quartet. Her oratorio appearances as soloist include Beethoven's Mass in C with the Fine Arts Chorale, Brahms' Requiem, Lord Nelson's Mass with the Masterworks Chorale and Copeland's in the Beginning with the Quincy Choral Society.

While performing with Opera at Longy, she appeared with the New Bedford Symphony singing Mercedes and in a Kurt Weill program for the opening of the Busch Reisinger wing at the Fogg Museum in Boston. Kelly is the soprano soloist at Bethany Congregational Church in Quincy.

Whalen, a versatile performer in the fields of opera, oratorio and recital, has received acclaim from both critics and audiences. In 1992, he made his Boston Symphony Hall debut singing the role of El Dancaïro in the opera "Carmen." He has also performed and recorded the role of Thomson in Virgil Thomson's opera "Lord Byron" for Koch International.

Bell has recently appeared as Cherubino in Longwood Opera's production of the "Marriage of Figaro" as well as Tessa in "The Gondoliers" with the Ocean State Light Opera. Her impressive resonance and sharp phrasing have delighted audiences across New England in principal roles in "The Magic Flute," "Romeo and Juliet," "Dido and Aeneas," "Hansel and Gretel," and "Don Giovanni." Bell has been a member of Boston Baroque (formerly Banchetto Musicale) since 1990.

Drumbeller began his singing career after earning his BS and MS degrees in engineering from M.I.T. He completed his education with a masters in voice degree from Boston University. He has performed with the Cleveland Orchestra, Pittsburgh Symphony, Festival Lario Musica in Italy, the Tanglewood Music Center and the Opera Laboratory Theatre Company. He also performed last season with the Quincy Choral Society in Mozart's Requiem and most recently sang the bass solos in the Brahms Requiem with the Wakefield Choral Society.

After the Beethoven Society, the Quincy Choral Society will sing at Milton's East Congregational Church Strawberry Festival June 5. The festival will take place on the grounds of the church located at 610 Adams St. between noon and 4 p.m.

How To Help Low Back Pain

Within the past few years there has been an increasing awareness of the usefulness of acupuncture in the treatment of many medical conditions.

Next to headaches, backache is the most common complaint today. Of the many causes of back pain, the most frequent is rheumatism-in the form of fibrositis, lumbago, and "slipped disc."

It has been found that these disorders can often be traced to so-called trigger spots remote from the site of the pain. The problem can frequently be corrected by treating these offending trigger points with acupuncture. The muscles along the meridian where these areas are discovered are in a state of tension.

Acupuncture treatment of disc pathology is similar to that for arthritis causing analog symptoms. Before subjecting a patient to the hazards of laminectomy or even a myelogram for disc pathology, acupuncture should be tried. It can relieve muscle spasms which are worsening the condition. Acupuncture is safer than many diagnostic procedures, including myelograms. It is also safer than traction and bed rest since such inactivity may result in thrombosis of leg veins.

Millions of people with crippling illnesses are suffering at this moment, having resigned themselves to a life with pain-not realizing that acupuncture could be of help. However, the effectiveness of acupuncture has been proven beyond doubt, with many satisfied patients attesting to its benefits.

Those who have personal experiences with acupuncture would say without hesitation that the fit of acupuncture to the world by the Chinese people should rank as one of the greatest gifts to mankind.

For more information about acupuncture, contact Acupuncture Associates of the South Shore, 12 Dimmock St., Quincy, 471-5577.

Liquor License Suspended Two Days For Drinking After Hours

By BILL DONCASTER

The Quincy License Board issued a two day liquor license suspension to Manet Lunch, in Houghs Neck, for serving alcohol after 1 a.m.

On April 10, at approximately 3 a.m., Patrolman John Dougan said he observed a number of cars parked at Manet Lunch, 1099-1101 Sea St. After entering the establishment, he found six to eight people inside, open beer bottles on the tables, and music playing, according to the police report.

According to Police Sgt. Richard Laracy, Manet Lunch's manager, Bernard Van Tassel, Jr., had been warned five times about violating closing procedures. Van Tassel had been warned most recently by Laracy who told him the next instance would bring him before the license board.

According to the police report he was on the premises on April 10 and asked Dougan for "a break" because he had lost track of the time.

Van Tassel was not charged with selling alcohol after hours, but according to Laracy appeared to be allowing friends and regulars to drink on the premises after closing in violation of closing procedures.

Atty. Dennis Harrington, speaking on behalf of Van Tassel, said that his client "used poor judgement both in violating closing procedures and in ignoring police warnings." He asked that the board act on the charges with a written warning.

Police Chief Francis Mullen recommended a two day suspension of the liquor license, adding that "Police will usually speak before they write something down. If it's gotten to five warnings coming to my attention, there's a problem."

Board member Matthias Mulvey said, "If a policeman tells you once that should be enough, not five times."

Manet Lunch is owned by Bernard Van Tassel, Sr., Van Tassel's father. Bernard Van Tassel, Jr., has been manager at the establishment for five years, since his father retired to Florida.

The closing procedures violated included: service of alcohol after 1 a.m., glasses and bottles on tables after 1:15 a.m., customers on premises after 1:30 a.m., and an employee on premises after 2 a.m.

Atty. Harrington said that since this was the first instance of Manet Lunch being before the board in 10 years of ownership, a written warning would be effective. "The police acted properly," Harrington said, "management did not. Clearly there is a lesson to be learned here, and a warning will serve everyone's needs."

The board voted for the two day suspension, one to be served this Monday, May 17, and recommended Van Hassell and his three bartenders attend an ID education program with Quincy Police. The other day was suspended for the year, with the stipulation that it will be served immediately if there are any other violations plus any other actions the board might take. They also recommended that all staff take advantage of ID and TIPS alcohol service education programs offered by Quincy Police.

"I hope you understand the severity of this," Mulvey told Van Tassel, "This board has no problem with shutting you down. We don't want this kind of thing in the city, and if you can't comply you're out of business."

Crane Library Needs Addition, Says Director

said, "it would be a shame to see it fall into disrepair." She said that the maintenance staff does the best to stay on top of things, "but it is an old building, and there isn't always the money to do what we'd like."

"There are water leaks underground, recently causing electrical circuits to go out," Watson said, "there are leaks in sidewalls of both buildings. The old slate and copper roof needs repairs every two years to stop leaks, and we all know what all that water will do to plaster walls."

High on Watson's list of priorities are to maintain the integrity of building's appearance, yet he doubts an addition could be built to match the outer facade of the Thomas Crane Library. "When they put the last addition on in 1940, they had to reopen a quarry that had been closed for fifty years to match the granite."

According to Watson there are state agencies, including the State Board of Library Commissioners, that have some money for such projects and that Quincy is as high as the top three on their priority lists.

Watson would like to see the addition completed within the next few years. Although he is retiring from on July second, he plans to stay involved with this effort.

the Board recommends," Sheets explained.

Board members are Arthur Ciampa, Thomas Hurlebaus, John Luongo, Phil Curtis and Sandra

As for the assistant director's position, McLaughlin has selected Jane Granstrom, the current coordinator of children services at the Granstrom's appointment is effective July 5.

MWRA 'Tea Party' Saturday

Residents are invited to participate in a modern-day version of The Boston Tea Party Saturday at noon at Marina Bay.

The event was organized by Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson as a protest of MWRA sewer and water rates.

Those who plan on attending are asked to bring copies of their sewer and water bills to the protest. The bills will be put in sacks and floated on the water at Marina Bay.

Kolson has stressed, however, that the bills will not be casually tossed into Boston Harbor but instead will be "ceremoniously placed on the water. They will be removed from the harbor at the conclusion of the event, he said.

By demonstrating against the increasing bills, Kolson said he hopes to increase the legislature's awareness of the "unfair burden" on communities he MWRA rates.

Manet Health Center Opens North Quincy Office

Manet Community Health Center, Inc. will hold an open house and ribbon cutting ceremony Sunday, May 16 from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. at its new North Quincy office, 110 West Squantum St.

Tours will be available. The new office will offer a new range of family practice physician services for all ages. It will be open days Monday through Friday and Tuesday evenings.

Executive Director Ellen Hafer said the center initially identified a need for additional primary care physicians in the North Quincy and Wollaston area in a needs assessment study first completed in 1988. The need has continued to increase, she said, with a growth in HMO's.

Manet has worked closely with Quincy Hospital and the City of Quincy to develop the expanded office, according to Hafer, and the Harold Brooks Foundation and Rockland Trust Company have also provided support for the project.

Dr. Jonathan Han, family practice physician, has joined the staff of the health center to provide services at North Quincy. He will be joined by Dr. Vibha Bhatnager. The physicians at the new site will be a part of a network of service locations managed by Manet Community Health Center, Inc., including two other sites in Quincy and a site in Hull. Dr. Frederick Dolgin is medical director of the group.

Manet physicians admit to Quincy Hospital. They participate in most commercial health insurances, medicare, Medicaid, and a number of HMO's including Pilgrim Health, Bay State, U.S. Healthcare, Neighborhood Health Plan, and Medicaid's Primary Care Clinician Program.

Manet Community Health Center, Inc. was started in Houghs Neck in 1979 by residents who identified a shortage of physicians in their neighborhood. An additional site was opened in Germantown in 1984. In 1989 Manet began to manage the Hull Medical Center, which now offers family practice medical services. Manet has grown from providing 4,000 visits in 1980 to providing over 35,000 visits in 1992. They anticipate providing 5,000 visits in North Quincy the first year and growing to 10,000 visits the second.

Manet is governed by a community-based Board of Directors and is a non-profit organization. Gertrude Peter is president; Margaret Skinner, vice president; Arthur Wahlberg, secretary and Lawrence Butler, treasurer.

For more information, call Hafer at 376-3030.

Car Care Corner

Ah Spring! The birds are singing, the trees are budding. But your car doesn't look too thrilled. It's been a long, dirty winter, although nothing a good spring cleaning can't fix. The question is: where to begin and with what. Car Care Council warns that the wrong cleaners can do more harm than good.

Let's begin with the exterior. For years the cleaner of choice by many of us has been dishwashing liquid or other household detergent, which is handy and relatively inexpensive. The experts tell us, however, that these products often are far too concentrated. On newer cars, they emphasize, the clear-coat finish can be dulled with improper washing.

Most manufacturers of car cleaning products now offer special products for washing, cleaning and protecting the vehicle exterior with the new type finishes. The wrong cleaner or wax can dull the clear-coat finish.

Along with winter muck, tires and wheels also get covered with brake dust. This black dust, prevalent with the new non-asbestos disc brake pads, can be difficult to wash away, according to the Council. New products made specifically for wheel and tire cleaning, speed the clean-up process without damaging the bright finish on wheels.

If it seems there's a specific cleaner for every inch of your car, you are correct. Even the vinyl top is at risk if you apply the wrong product. Many owners make the mistake of using interior cleaners on the vinyl top. Although this mistake is not irrevocable, applying the right product the first time will save elbow grease, money and possibly, your top.

Like the outside of your car, there are certain materials that are specifically recommended for the interior. For example, you want a vinyl upholstery cleaner that not only cleans but also protects the material from cracking. And you may need fabric and carpet cleaners designed to attack the specific stains in your car. There are two basic types of stains: protein and oil/grease. Protein stains demand an enzyme pretreatment, while the oil/grease type can be removed with a heavy-duty shampoo containing degreasing agents. Be sure to give these chemicals time to work and remember always to work a stain from the outside in. Floor mats can be cleaned in the same way, finishing with a good shampoo.

Windows are pretty much dessert when it comes to spring cleaning your car. Still, the Council does offer a couple of hints. First, use your favorite commercial glass cleaner. If smudges and road film persist, try rubbing alcohol to cut through to the shine, don't get any on the paint. And remember to clean all glass on the inside as well as outside.

For a free pamphlet entitled, "How to Keep Your Car Looking Young," send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Car Care Council, Dept. N., One Grande Lake Drive, Port Clinton, OH 43452.

Distractions Can Be Dangerous

(NAPS)—Behind-the-wheel distractions which steal a driver's concentration—even if only for a second—can be quite dangerous.

Here's advice from Shell Motorist Club (SMC) on avoiding typical distractions:

- If you must trim a few whiskers, freshen make-up or comb your hair while traveling, pull off the road while you do so.

- Checking a report before a meeting or jotting down a quick note shouldn't be done behind the wheel. If you must read and write, pull well off the roadway.

- Most cellular telephone manufacturers recommend dialing at the side of the road, not while driving. These companies also recommend a speaker phone adapter so you can talk while keeping both hands on the wheel.

- Adjusting the rear view mirror and passenger seat, searching for a cassette tape or cleaning trash out of the car are activities which should be accomplished before beginning a trip.

For information about automobile clubs, write: SMC, P.O. Box 60199, Chicago, IL 60660; or call: 1-800-852-0555.

Protecting Your Auto Investment

It makes good financial sense to protect your automotive investment through regular maintenance.

But unless you are a skilled do-it-yourselfer, you'll need to find good auto repair. Here are hints on how from the experts at the non-profit National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE):

Get involved. Read the owner's manual—even if you do not intend to do the repairs yourself. Have your vehicle serviced according to the recommended intervals found in the manual.

Don't go it alone. Ask your friends, relatives, and business associates for the names of shops they recommend.

Use local consumer groups. The Better Business Bureau can tell you if the shop in question has many complaints lodged against it.

Look for signs of professionalism. ASE offers the only national, industry-wide credential available to working technicians. Shops which employ ASE technicians often display the blue and white ASE outdoor sign, while the certified technicians wear matching shoulder insignia.

Look for organization

We employ technicians certified by the National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence
Let us show you our credentials

This sign at an auto repair facility indicates the presence of one or more nationally certified auto repair technicians.

and shop policies. Does the shop appear to be orderly, relatively clean, and free of clutter and old parts? Are the policies concerning labor rates, guarantees, and estimates clearly posted in the customer service area? Is the staff helpful?

Remember, timely maintenance will save you money in the long run and give you peace of mind as you drive.

For a free brochure, How to Communicate for Better Automotive Service, send a self-addressed, stamped long envelope to: ASE, Dept. D, P.O. Box 347, Herndon, VA 22070.

American Cancer Society's 'Jail And Bail' May 25-27

The American Cancer Society's Jail and Bail fundraiser will be held Tuesday, May 25 through Thursday, May 27 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at 35 Brintree Hill Office Park, Brintree.

The Jail and Bail is a unique way to raise money for the ACS's programs of research, education and service.

The event involves two types of "arrests": surprise arrests and prearranged arrests.

For prearranged arrests, participants agree to be picked up or turn themselves in to the mock jail site. While behind "bars" they call friends and co-workers to raise their bail for the fight against cancer. Participants are in "jail" no longer than an hour.

For surprise arrests, a request may be made for the arrest of a particular person. A "Keystone Kop" visits the arrestee serves a warrant and takes the arrestee off to "jail." Bail is set and the arrestee calls friends and co-workers to raise the bail. After approximately an hour, the arrestee is returned to home/business.

Martin Paul is the chairman of the ACS South Shore Unit. Co-chairmen are Bruce Ayers, Hank Bradley, Eileen Cooney and Mark Kowalski.

For more information, contact the American Cancer Society, 294 Pleasant St., Stoughton, MA 02072, 341-4210.

Michael D'Amico Candidate For Ward 4 Councillor

Michael J. D'Amico, 602 Willard St., West Quincy, announces he is a candidate for Ward 4 councillor.

"I'm running because I believe the hard working people of Ward 4 need someone on their side to represent their better interests," D'Amico said in announcing his candidacy outside City Hall.

D'Amico, 18, is a lifelong resident of West Quincy. A graduate of St. Mary's School in West Quincy and Xavierian Brothers High School, he has enrolled at Stonehill College.

If elected, D'Amico said he would establish a neighborhood advisory committee to facilitate communication between himself and Ward 4 residents. He also said he would spend at least two hours daily at City Hall and publish a monthly newsletter outlining the motions he has voted on and the agenda forth coming.

"Through this all important publication you will always be informed on what's new or what has been done in your vicinity," he said.

As Ward 4 councillor, D'Amico said he wants to put a cap on traffic, unfair tax burdens, land developers and crime. He also wants to promote local business and preserve local history.

"We need a new perspective on the issues and we can be a united front in providing that crisp outlook, any way you look at it I'm someone on your side for a change."

D'Amico, who recently

MICHAEL D'AMICO registered to vote, has been active in local and state government affairs over the past several years.

He is the founder and executive director of Quincy City Youth Council program which gives city youth an active voice and role in government.

"By working with the youth in Quincy I have learned the importance of communication between City Hall and the younger people," he said, noting the youth council has sponsored environmental education in the schools and has taught teens the importance of city government and how it will work for them.

"The youth council has taught me that the hard work and determination of a few can benefit an entire community," he said.

D'Amico has also been involved in state government. He has served three terms on the state's Juvenile Justice Advisory Committee. The committee delegates $1.5 million on national funds to youth programs statewide.

By working with the governor, police departments and correctional facilities,

D'Amico said this knowledge of the criminal justice system will allow him to be "tough on crime and prevention in our neighborhoods."

"My three years have truly been a learning experience and have also helped me become ready for this (council) seat," he said.

As Ward 4 councillor, D'Amico said he would focus on improved communication between him and his constituents. "It's time we elect a city councillor who will look to the interests of our neighborhood."

D'Amico said an example of a lack of communication is the 700-foot tower in West Quincy. Residents in Quincy and Milton near the tower have mounted a drive to topple the tower, claiming it is a blight on their neighborhood.

D'Amico agrees. "It's time we work together and stand up for each other and say enough is enough. I know that we need better communication between the Ward 4 residents and the city councillor, that's why I feel so adamant about my entrance in the race."

"I want to give back to the community what it has been deprived of."

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Armed Forces Day is set aside each year to honor those who served their country in the armed services. We honor them all; those who wore a uniform in days past and those who wear it today. We honor them with recognition of a debt that can never be repaid. It is beyond price.

On this Armed Forces Day let us pause and remember that for more than two centuries, the men and women of our armed services have fought in wars all over the world to preserve our American Way of life. And in the intervening periods when America was not at war, our military men and women stood ready (and still do) to defend Democracy and oppose totalitarian rule.

Whether they fought in the front lines or served their country in peacetime, all veterans have contributed to a strong and well-prepared America. Their sacrifices must not be forgotten.

North Edges Lakers In 10 Innings

By TOM SULLIVAN

The North Quincy baseball team, which snapped a three-game losing streak last Saturday against Billerica, went 10 innings Monday to edge Silver Lake, 4-3, to improve its record to 7-6 (6-5 in the Old Colony League).

The Raiders play at Taunton today (Thursday), will host Weymouth Monday at 3:30 at Adams Field, will be at Bridgewater-Raynham next Wednesday and will meet Quincy next Thursday at 3:30 at Adams.

Mike Patch improved his record to 4-1 Monday, giving up three runs to Billerica in the fourth inning and pitching shutout ball all the rest of the way.

North scored a run in the sixth when Danny Duncan singled home Dave Reinhart.

In the seventh George Wirtz and Pat Shea doubled for a run, Shea went to third on an infield out and scored the tying run on Reinhart's sacrifice fly.

In the 10th Jim Sapienza walked, stole second, went to third on an error and scored the winning run on Brian Anderson's single.

Last Saturday, in a makeup of a snowed-out game, Shea's two-out double in the ninth inning scored Anderson with the winning run as the Raiders edged Billerica, 4-3, avenging an earlier 6-5 loss.

Sean Donovan continued his fine pitching, going all the way, striking out eight and walking only one.

Last Friday North lost at Barnstable, 6-1, getting only three hits, singles by Wirtz, Shea and Anderson.

Tim Byrne made his first pitching start and pitched well, but his mates couldn't help him at the plate.

Earlier in the week the Raiders lost to Falmouth, 3-1, despite another fine pitching effort by Patch, who suffered his only loss of the season. He allowed only five hits and struck out 11.

Wirtz went 2-for-3 and scored the only run.

Lost Week For Quincy

Last week was a lost week for the Quincy baseball team, which lost all four games, extending its losing streak to five games and dropping its record to 5-7.

The Presidents hoped to end its losing streak yesterday (Wednesday) at Plymouth, will host Brookline in the makeup of a snow-out game today (Thursday) at 3:30 at Adams Field, will be home to Falmouth Friday at 3:30, will be at Barnstable next Monday, will host Silver Lake Wednesday at 3:30 and will face North Quincy next Thursday at 3:30.

Last Thursday Quincy dropped a 6-5 decision to Bridgewater-Raynham when the Trojans scored twice in the seventh inning to pull out the win.

Tom Malvesti was Quincy's starting pitcher and gave up three runs in the first inning. He encountered arm trouble in the third and gave way to Sean MacDonald. The Presidents twice came from behind and took a 5-4 lead into the seventh and final inning.

"Tommy's status is currently up in the air and if he can't pitch, we'll be in deep trouble," said coach Bob Sylvia. "He is one of the mainstays of our staff and has pitched well. We just don't have the pitching depth to play four games in a week."

The highlight of the week came the day before at Weymouth when Quincy staged the comeback of the year. Trailing, 8-0, the Presidents came back to tie the game only to lose, 9-8, in the final inning on a squeeze bunt.

Quincy began its comeback in the fifth when a two-run triple by Noel DiBona highlighted a three-run inning. The Presidents then exploded for five runs in the top of the seventh to tied the score.

Quincy collected five straight hits, including an RBI double by Duane Holmes, RBI singles by DiBona and Jeff Craig and a two-RBI double by Steve Provost.

Malvesti, who relieved starter John Russell, pitched the seventh and took the loss.

"The boys showed a lot of character in that game and I was proud of the way they came back," said Sylvia. "We hung tough. It was possible to make a positive out of a negative by coming back."

In its previous game Quincy lost for the second day in a row to Taunton, 15-8, in a game that was all over after the Tigers exploded for nine runs.

Holmes led the attack for the Presidents, going 2-for-3 and scored three runs.

"We just haven't put everything together," said Sylvia. "When we are hitting, the pitching has failed and when the pitching has been strong we haven't hit. The defense overall has been good, but errors in clutch situations have been costly."

A bright spot for the Presidents has been the hitting of Holmes. Going into yesterday's game at Plymouth he was leading the Old Colony League with a .487 average (20-for-41), had three home runs and 17 runs batted in.

THE UNVARNISHED TRUTH

One of the functions of an automobile's engine oil is to keep the inside of the engine clean. This task is the job of a group of additives known as detergents and dispersants. They rid the engine's inner works of carbon, sludge, and varnish. These unwanted elements usually form as a result of water vapor, nitrogen compounds, gum-forming compounds, and carbon making their way past the rings. Because these contaminants are likely to resist capture by the oil filter, the engine's well-being relies on detergents and dispersants to keep them in suspension until the next oil change. Once these additives wear out or are taxed beyond their capacity, sludge and varnish begin to form within the engine. This is one of many good reasons to change engine oil routinely. HINT: Anticorrosion additives in engine oil fight acid corrosion, while antiwear additives and friction modifiers combat wear.

Young North Girls Team In Slow Start

By TOM SULLIVAN

Although the North Quincy girls' track team is off to its slowest start since entering the Old Colony League, coach Geoff Hennessy is not discouraged by its performance.

"We're very young, I'm talking about our best athlete in five events being a freshman, so we have been taking our lumps, but they are constantly improving," said Hennessy.

"Our other key people like Sue Lewis, Heather Rendle, Meghan Barry, Erin Duggan, Laura Blaikie, Katy Deady, Sue Hamilton, Mel Gaziano and Katie McNamara are doing the job. The hurdles have been a problem with the graduation of all-everything Tricia Hughes, but junior Chrissy Herman has come to the rescue and is showing the way for several good-looking freshman like Sue Ting Ng, Lynne Garland and Leah Campanale. Campanale qualified for the state championships in the 300 hurdles in only her second ever race.

"Back in 1983 when I first started coaching we were 2-5 in the old Suburban League but we still won the Class A state title, so anything can happen in this sport."

North has won only one of its first four dual meets, defeating Taunton, 80-41.

"TEA PARTY" was held at Marina Bay Saturday as a demonstration against high MWRA water and sewer rates. Leading a rally of "No more!" are, from left, Mayor James Sheets, Ward 1 City Councillor Peter Kolson (who organized the event), State Rep. Ronald Mariano, City Council President Charles Phelan, WRKO radio's Jerry Williams, Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, and Weymouth Selectmen Chairman Peg Goudy.

Kolson Vows:

'Tea Party' First Shot In Water 'Rate Revolution'

The water-sewer bill "Tea Party" held last Saturday at Marina Bay in protest of Massachusetts Water Resource Authority water and sewer rates is only the beginning of the "rate revolution," according to Ward 1 City Councillor Peter Kolson.

Other protests, including one at the State House later this month and another at Boston Common in the fall, are among plans that will be discussed in two weeks at a meeting of Operation STOP (Stop This Outrageous Project), Kolson said.

"The rate revolution has begun," said Kolson, who organized the Marina Bay "Tea Party." "We're earnest in our desire to see some turnaround in this thing (MWRA rates)."

Approximately 600 people attended the "Tea Party," according to Kolson. He said he spoke to officials and residents from Quincy, Braintree, Weymouth, Milton, Randolph, Arlington, Everett, Boston, Charlestown, Chelsea, Revere, Medford, Malden, Walpole and "five or six other places" at the event. Kolson had invited all 43 communities in the MWRA district to the event.

Local officials at the protest included Mayor James Sheets, City Council President Charles Phelan, Ward 6 Councillor

Bruce Ayers, and State Rep. Ronald Mariano. U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds was unable to attend because of a prior commitment but sent a representative.

At the protest, water and sewer bills were placed in sacks and floated on Boston Harbor. Crates, similar to those used in the Boston Tea Party, were also tossed into the water. All was removed from the harbor at the end of the protest.

"I was very pleased with the turnout," said Kolson. "And the important thing is, we gained national exposure." He added that the protest was covered by CNN and will appear in an upcoming issue of Newsweek magazine.

Sheets was out of town Tuesday but said through Executive Secretary Thomas Koch that the city has already cut the original 18.9 percent increase in the MWRA's water and sewer assessment for FY94 by $750,000 or 7 to 8 percent.

"We're still working to bring the projection down," said Koch. "We're trying to send a message to the MWRA that we're sharpening our pencils and cutting it down." He added that more state and federal assistance is also needed to help with the rates.

Studds, who has voiced opposition to the MWRA rates in the past, said in a prepared statement that he plans next week to file

The Polluter Pays Clean Water Funding Act, "major legislation aimed at overhauling the way this nation funds clean water programs." Studds said the premise of the legislation is simple: those who pollute the most, such as heavy industry and dischargers of toxics, should pay the most.

MWRA rate payers have been funding the majority of the $7 billion Boston Harbor cleanup since it began several years ago. The Environmental Protection Agency is considering allowing the MWRA to downsize the harbor cleanup by at least $750 million, saving rate payers money.

Cahill: 'We're Going To Shoot For It'

$500,000 Budget Cut Possibility

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The city's proposed $128,689,981 FY94 budget sent to the City Council earlier this month by Mayor James Sheets can possibly be cut by $500,000 or more, according to the chairman of the council's Finance Committee.

Councillor Timothy Cahill stressed Tuesday that while the possibility is "just my opinion as chairman," there is a strong possibility that the $500,000 figure is one that can be reached.

"It's reasonable, and it's something we're going to shoot for," said Cahill. "Using that ($500,000) as a base figure, I think we can reach it, (and) maybe more."

The council cut $130,000 during its first budget session May 6, according to Cahill. He said $100,000 was cut from the unemployment section of the law department budget and $30,000 that was to be used to deal with abatements from the assessors department. In addition, $45,000 that the assessors department wanted to use for property revaluation was put on hold, Cahill said.

Moratorium On New Liquor Licenses Illegal

An attempt to place a two-year moratorium on new liquor licenses in the city has failed because such an act would be illegal, according to the chairman of the Quincy License Board.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said at Tuesday's board meeting that the moratorium, which was proposed at Monday night's City Council meeting by Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, cannot be imposed because the city is below its legal limit of 141 allowed liquor licenses.

The limit for a community is set by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC) and based on population, according to Shea. He added that he had not been sure about the legality of such a moratorium at Monday night's council meeting and double-checked Tuesday with the ABCC.

"The law states that if any fit person wishes to request a license (and licenses are available), we have to hear that request," Shea told the License Board.

Taking into consideration all sales of alcohol in the city, Shea said that Quincy is allowed total of 141 liquor licenses. He added that while the city has reached the limit of 19 on the total number of package stores allowed, only 118 liquor

Robert Cerasoli projected that water and sewer bills for an average family could climb from $545 today to $1,891 by the year 2003 and $2,010 by the year 2005.

MWRA officials have disputed Cerasoli's claim, saying rates will be $1,207 by the year 1999, the last year on their projections. Locally, officials from several MWRA communities have shown frustration over the soaring rates. In addition to the "Tea Party," a bill-burning ceremony was recently held in Chelsea. Weymouth and Chelsea have also refused to pay their MWRA assessments for the fiscal year ending June 30.

$500,000 Budget Cut Seen Possible

sincere effort look closely at the budget and make cuts wherever possible.

"The public hearing set the mood," he said.

City Auditor Robert Foy said during the public hearing that $3 million would have to be cut from the FY94 city budget in order for there to be no property tax increases for Quincy homeowners and businesses. Cahill told residents at the hearing that while cutting that much from the proposed budget would be impossible since approximately $54,644,476 or 42 percent of the budget is composed of fixed costs such as pensions, debt service, and unemployment and health insurance compensation, the council would do everything in its power to make cuts in the budget.

Non-fixed costs make up $74,045,415 or approximately 58 percent of the budget. Such costs include all city departments, city dues, celebrations, Commission on the Status of Women, Commission on the Handicapped, student programs, and others.

Foy said 57 percent of the city's budget is derived from property taxes, with 22 percent coming from state and 21 percent from local revenues. The tax classification rates set last December by the City Council were $13.46 for homeowners and $228.79 for businesses, compared to figures of $12.19 and $26.12 the previous year.

Sheets' FY94 budget calls for a 2.5 increase in the tax levy, the maximum allowed under state law. Residents and businesses will not be affected, however, until the council sets the tax rates in the fall.

Sheets' budget, which would go into effect July 1, is up $3.8 million or 3 percent over FY93's budget of $124,791,584. Sheets, however, said last week that better than 60 percent of city departments have budgets that are less than when he first took office in 1990.

The mayor has also said that the city's largest budgets have only increased slightly since 1990. The school budget is up about two percent and the police and fire budgets up about one percent apiece, he said.

Sheets, who is out of town this week, said last week he would welcome any cuts that could be made in the budget.

"I think it's a sound budget," said Sheets. "It's a very tight budget. If anyone can show me where we can save money, I'm willing to sit down and talk with them. If ways can be made to save money in the budget, I'm open to that."

Cahill said Tuesday that while the Finance Committee plans to proceed with caution, it hopes to do just that.

"Some of the budgets we've looked at, there were very little places to cut," said Cahill. "I think we can do better, but we don't want to come up with a false budget. In general, we want to have a true budget that reflects exactly what we're going to spend this year."

Sheets' original proposal for the FY93 budget was $124,878,100. The Finance Committee was able to cut $86,516 from that figure, bringing it down to $124,791,584.

Hearing Continued On Permit To Sell Ammo

By BILL DONCASTER

Paul Miller's request for a permit to sell ammunition was continued until June 1 by the Quincy Board of License Commissioners Tuesday.

Miller's company, Norfolk Firearms, operates from 265A Whitwell St. in Quincy Center.

During the meeting, a letter was read from Councillor Lawrence Cretian saying that neighbors in the area are opposed to Miller's company, Norfolk Firearms, gaining such a permit. Cretian's letter noted children in area and lack of security.

Miller says he will not be selling retail nor storing guns or ammunition on the premises. He says both guns and ammo will be housed in Bridgewater in the vault of another dealer.

License Commissioner Matthias Mulvey said that he'd have less of a problem with the request if Miller were selling guns and ammunition in an accessible area, like Coleman's or other sporting goods stores.

"The days of operating a business like this in a cellar or attic are gone," Mulvey said.

Miller said he has been studying gun smiting three years. He plans to sell firearms and ammunition at gun shows, like flea markets, to collectors as a way of paying for that education.

He's seeking the permit in Quincy because he eventually would like to operate a store in the city, and is anxious to establish himself here. Also he could sell under someone else's license, but then much of the profits would go to the license holder.

He didn't seem surprised at the opposition of his neighbors. "You say the word gun and people automatically get on the defensive," he said.

The hearing will continue on June 1.

Moratorium On New Liquor Licenses Illegal

licenses are currently being used in the city. Several Common Victualer/All-Alcoholic, Beer and Wine and other licenses are available, he added.

Speaking for Mayor James Sheets, Executive Secretary Thomas Koch said Tuesday that while the mayor intends to work with the License Board to address DeCristofaro's concerns, Sheets feels that such a moratorium could discourage new business from coming to the city.

License Board members said Tuesday that looking at the licenses on a case-by-case basis is best for all parties.

"The best we can do is look at them individually, look at each one's merit," said Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey. He said he also felt a moratorium might keep restaurants and hotels away from Quincy.

Police Chief Francis Mullen agreed, saying additional concerns are parking, community need for liquor licenses, and the character of the applicant.

DeCristofaro told both the License Board and the City Council that the city already has enough businesses that serve or sell alcohol.

He also said he did not believe the city would be discouraging new businesses from coming to the city by proposing a moratorium.

"I don't think we going to lose a darn thing,"

DeCristofaro said Monday night. "I don't think we'll lose one restaurant," he added that he only wanted the moratorium to affect requests for new licenses, not existing ones.

Several city councillors, however, also shared Sheets' reservations about placing a moratorium on the licenses.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers said some businesses depend on liquor licenses to remain competitive.

"I think we're sending a wrong message to certain businesses," said Ayers. "They need a liquor license to survive."

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio agreed.

"We're making a suggestion to the business community that new establishments can't open (with a liquor license)," said Fabrizio, who added he supported the "spirit" of the resolution but could not support the moratorium itself unless amendments were added.

Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Cretian said while he also agreed with the principle of the resolution, certain businesses such as Legal Seafood have proven that they can be "fine establishments" while serving liquor.

"What we want to say," said Cretian, "is that if you're out of line, you're not welcome in Quincy, but if you're not (out of line), maybe you can get it (liquor license)."

Councillor Michael Cheney said he could not support the moratorium and would leave the matter in the judgement of the License Board.

"I'm going to rely very heavily on the License Board," said Cheney. "I will not be voting in favor."

Council President Charles Phelan said he disagreed with the moratorium, noting that the License Board never grants licenses that have strong opposition from a ward councillor and/or neighborhood residents. Phelan added he would abstain from any vote taken on the issue.

Councillor Timothy Cahill, however, suggested that the moratorium might be a good idea.

"It's kind of scary at this point," said Cahill. "It seems like every convenience store in the city wants one (liquor license). I don't usually support moratoriums, but with liquor, you have to draw the line somewhere."

Cahill added he has no problem with a business being transferred a license that already exists, only the granting of new licenses.

DeCristofaro suggested that instead of voting on the resolution Monday night, the council should "pass it on to the License Board (for its opinion)."

The council agreed and the matter was referred to the Public Safety Committee.

By BILL DONCASTER

Councillor Ted DeCristofaro would like to see West Coast Video, at 85 Quincy Ave., close an hour earlier and put on a police detail due to traffic and parking surrounding the store.

"I'm glad to see business doing well," said DeCristofaro, "but on weekends it's just getting out of hand."

John Fato, the store's manager, appeared at Quincy's license board meeting Tuesday to respond to complaints about traffic surrounding his store during peak hours on weekends.

Police Chief Francis Mullen suggested a detail during busy hours, if the problem wasn't reduced by simply notifying customers about parking.

Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey told Fato that the zoning mandates that all parking for the store must be on site, and failure to comply with that could ultimately mandate a suspension of their license to operate.

Fato said he would first try in-store signs, letting his customers know about traffic and parking restrictions.

DeCristofaro, who missed the hearing, said

First So Successful: Second Hazardous Waste Collection To Cost Extra $40,000

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The second of two Household Hazardous Waste Collection Days in Quincy, scheduled for this Saturday, will cost the city $40,000 to $50,000 more than originally anticipated.

Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton told the City Council Monday night that last Saturday's collection at the Department of Public Works Yard, 55 Sea St., was so successful that the $80,000 the city planned to use for the two collections is almost gone.

Asked by Councillor Joseph LaRaia why such an increase in funding was necessary, Colton said the collection, transportation, packaging and storage of hazardous waste is "very expensive" and the amount of waste collected Saturday makes the increase inevitable.

"The collection was very, very successful," said Colton. "It was very well-organized, very well-run and we had great volunteers. There was a tremendous need for this kind of project."

Colton told the council at its May 3 meeting that Quincy's last such collection was in 1987 and that the city hopes to make it an annual event. He also said that night that the $80,000 price tag would be divided evenly between FY93 and FY94 and that the city would pay for the collection from money it saved through the renegotiation of its rubbish contract with Browning-Ferris Industries.

Colton said Tuesday the additional money would come from the same source.

Last Saturday's collection, which was scheduled to be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., had to be closed two hours early because of the amount of waste collected, Colton said. He added that in four hours, the cleanup, which was conducted by the environmental management company Clean Harbors, collected 150 barrels of waste from 625 cars. That averages out to 2.6 cars per minute, he said.

Colton emphasized that this Saturday, the collection will be held for the entire six hours.

Volunteers are still needed for the second collection. Volunteer shifts are from 7:30 to 10:30 a.m., 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m., and 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. (the collection requires some volunteers to be present before it starts and others after its completion).

A complete list of wastes being accepted, as well as those that cannot be accepted, appears on the back page of this week's edition of The Quincy Sun. For more information about volunteering for or participating in the collection, call the DPW at 376-1901.

Causeway Project To Resume

The Squantum Causeway project will resume mid-summer based on the engineer's recommendation that the final stage begin after the road has sufficiently settled, announces Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers.

Because of the inconvenience to Squantum residents, Ayers said he wanted the task to be completed as soon as possible, but engineers insist that to prevent further disruption, a short delay is necessary to allow the road to finish settling.

Ayers assured residents that as soon as construction can start, it will.

"Squantum residents can rest assured that the causeway project will be completed under the time constraints the engineers dictate to assure no further inconvenience. The neighborhood has been very patient, and when the project is finally completed, it will be a very worthwhile enhancement to the entrance to the Squantum community," Ayers said.

Residents with questions about the project should contact the Public Works Department at 376-1957 or Ayers 472-9877.

STROKE: A KEY ROLE IN DEMENTIA

For years, Alzheimer's disease has been considered the leading cause of dementia among the elderly. Now researchers are reporting that strokes may be the culprit about as often as Alzheimer's in producing dementia, that condition marked by disorientation and reduced mental capacity. These findings bring with them some good news: Dementia may be preventable in many cases. Alzheimer's remains an elusive disease with no means of prevention or cure. Strokes, however, can be prevented and controlled to a certain extent. Among the risk factors for strokes are high blood pressure, a high fat diet, stress, inactivity, smoking, obesity, and the use of oral contraceptives in some women.

P.S. Stokes and Alzheimer's disease probably account for all but about ten percent of dementia cases.

You can significantly reduce your risk of stroke by switching to a diet low in saturated fats and rich in leafy green vegetables, and by quitting smoking today. For more information on this topic or on the prevention and treatment of heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. We focus on treating the patient, rather than the disease. ## A Quincy Political 'First'

This may not be an earth-shaking election year but it may be remembered as "a first" in Quincy political history.

Mayor James Sheets, it appears will have a challenger after all which in itself isn't historic.

But the challenger is. He's Martin M. Ervin, 23, a political newcomer and the first black ever to run for mayor in Quincy.

In fact, he may also be the first black ever to run for political office in Quincy.

Ervin, who lives at 126 Main St., Quincy Point and formerly lived on Copeland St. in West Quincy was the surprise of the day when nomination papers became available at City Hall Monday.

He was one of the first to pick them up. Ervin is a registered Democrat and lists his occupation as "outpatient registration."

Little else is known about him at this time, but his candidacy should spark some interest in this year's not-so-exciting election.

Until he appeared at City Hall Monday it looked like Sheets might not have an opponent in his bid for a third term. He was unopposed two years ago for a second term.

Ervin, of course, has to file those nomination papers before he becomes an official candidate. He has until July 27 to do that.

The question is how serious is he considering Sheets' popularity?

Only he can answer that during the campaign.

THERE COULD BE two School Committee open seats this year.

Frank Santoro has indicated he will not seek reelection. And Margaret (Peggy) King now isn't sure she will run.

King was named to fill out the term of Mary Collins in April, 1992 after the latter resigned for health reasons. She was the runner-up in the previous election.

"I'm going to take nomination papers," she says. "But right now I am not sure I will file them. I'm going to think about it."

Legislators Outraged Over Sewer Esitmates

Responding to a recent report by the Inspector General indicating sewer rates for MWRA communities could triple over the next decade, Rep. Ron Mariano said he is "outraged" that such a possibility could occur. Concerned that local residents and businesses are already paying the highest water bills in the country, Mariano said, "The collective response of elected and appointed officials must be to stop the flood before we are all drowned."

Rep. Michael Bellotti said, "The courts need to step in and rethink the mandate they have issued to the MWRA to clean Boston Harbor. While harbor cleanliness needs to be addressed, it will do none of us any good if the cost of it is such that it consumes our standard of living."

In terms of possible State and Federal monies to provide rate relief for the 2.5 million ratepayers in the MWRA district Mariano said, "This is a federally mandated project mandated by the Federal Clean Water Act. Congress has been the primary funding mechanism for these projects nationwide. We must demand federal financial assistance now."

"Since elected I have been filing rate relief legislation, at the state level, unfortunately the majority of legislators are outside of the MWRA district. They are unwilling to assist in financing our federal mandate, the end result is that I am precluded from getting a rate prefill bill out of Committee.

City-Wide Leaf Recycling Set For May 24-July 10

Quincy is gearing up for its fourth city-wide leaf-clippings and small brush collection program from Monday, May 24 to Thursday, July 10.

Leaves will be picked up at curbside for six weeks and brought to the Department of Public Works yard where they will be composted on two and a half acres. With some watering and proper amount of heat and stirring, the leaves should turn into a rich loam that will be available next spring for the highways, parks, forestry departments and residents. DPW Commissioner David Colton said.

City Councillor Lawrence Chretien, chairman of the Recycling Committee, said that by composting the leaves rather than sending them to a landfill, the City can save $250,000 in trash hauling costs this year.

The leaf collection and grass clippings will be made by BFI. Pickups will be at the same time the company picks up trash and recyclables in city neighborhoods each week. Once the leaves have been dumped at the DPW yard, they are arranged in long, high rows 20 feet apart from each other. DPW personnel then will water the leaves, pack them down and turn them when the temperature of the leaves has stayed high enough and long enough for them to biodegrade.

Colton said that DPW is asking residents to put their leaves in barrels so that the leaves can be dumped into the BFI trucks and hauled to the DPW yard. The second preference is that residents buy special paper leaf bags at the supermarkets in your area. The bags are taller than trash bags, can fit more leaves, have flat bottoms so that they are easy to fill and are fully recyclable. They can be dumped right in with the leaves and will biodegrade along with them. The third, but least favored method, is bagging in plastic trash bags that must be shredded and removed from the leaf pile to composting.

The DPW operation will receive brush clippings of limited size—diameter of a pencil-- and in limited amounts due to different rates of decomposition of brush being problematic in the composting process.

Judge Dumps Incinerator Plan For Quincy

Superior Court Judge Edward O. Gourdin upheld a petition by 80 Quincy residents that would, in effect, prevent the city from constructing an incinerator in the Hardwick Quarry area.

Judge Gourdin ruled invalid in action by the City Council to change the zoning of the land from Residence B to a category known as "city property." The judge said there is no such category.

The residents had brought the suit after the city announced plans to build an incinerator on the quarry site, a plan that was endorsed by voters by a big margin at the last election.

Dell's Premium Pasta

While we were staying at our friend Dell's place in West Palm Beach, Florida, she was telling us about this great pasta recipe she had tried that included sun-dried tomatoes. They are not the easiest thing to find, so when we arrived back home she found them and invited us over to share this delicious dish.

Most specialty stores carry the sun-dried tomatoes and some supermarkets as well.

Dell's Quick And Easy Pasta

1/4 cup olive oil
2 garlic cloves (minced) about 3/4 to a pound of chicken boneless breasts (cut in strips)

2 cups broccoli florets about a cup of the oil packed sun-dried tomatoes, drained and sliced thin. (If you buy the ones without olive oil, marinate them in the oil before using.)

1 teaspoon basil
salt and pepper to taste
1/4 cup of white cooking wine about a cup of chicken broth
1 to 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/2 pound of bows (pasta) grated Parmesan or Romano cheese

In a frying pan, saute the garlic in oil. Add the strips of chicken and saute until cooked. Add the broccoli florets until they are tender, but not well done. Add the sun dried tomatoes, the seasonings, the wine and the chicken broth. Add the margarine and then simmer the sauce for about 5 minutes. Remove from heat and add the cooked pasta and toss. Serve with grated cheese. I used the bow pasta because they look and taste so good with this sauce, but another type of pasta such as rotini (springs) go well also.

DOVE Celebrates 15th Anniversary

DOVE, the traditional symbol of peace and the acronym for Domestic Violence Ended, recently celebrated its 15th anniversary at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

Since its inception in 1978, DOVE has been helping battered women and children. Over the past 15 years, it has grown into a multi-service shelter dedicated to serving the victims of domestic abuse.

At its anniversary celebration, DOVE recognized the many individuals who have helped DOVE grow from a single hotline for battered women, to a multi-faceted shelter which provides respite for more than 400 women and children annually and to date has housed over 6,500 victims of domestic violence.

Special guest speaker for the event was Liz Walker, co-anchor of WBZ-TV's Eyewitness News. Besides being an Emmy-winning journalist, Walker has host and co-produced several documentaries for WBZ-TV 4 and is actively involved in many community projects.

Walker holds special interest in the victims and survivors of domestic violence and serves along with former state representative Marjorie Claprod as co-chair of the Jane Doe Safety Fund, a $3 million project to support domestic abuse shelters and safe houses around the state.

Marilyn Terry, executive director of DOVE, presented an award to Walker for all her work with the problem of domestic violence.

DOVE received congratulatory greetings from Gov. William F. Weld, Lt. Gov. A. Paul Cellucci, and Congressman Gerry E. Studds. Cellucci represented the state at the event and saluted DOVE's outstanding service to battered women and children.

Other public officials attending the event were Mayor James Sheets, City Council President Charles Phelan, Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Stephen Tobin and Rep. Michael Bellotti and Norfolk County District Atty. William Delahunt.

In recognition of its 15th anniversary, Sheets proclaimed May 2-9 DOVE Week in Quincy. In the proclamation, the mayor noted DOVE currently services thousands of battered women and children through the DOVE shelter and the many programs DOVE provides, giving them the assistance they need to regain control of their lives.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Food Market Granted Beer-Wine License

By BILL DONCASTER

The Franklin Street Gourmet Food Market, 105-107 Franklin St., was granted a beer and wine license Tuesday.

The request for the license had been continued since March, and John Ruggiano said he was anxious to start up.

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio originally opposed the license in light of Councillor Ted DeCristofaro's request for a two year moratorium on new liquor licenses the previous evening, and also because he had opposed a similar request from the Copeland St. 7-Eleven, also in Ward 4.

"My concern is that I'm going to have that come back at me," Fabrizio said.

License Commissioner Matthias Mulvey said that since the board reviews all liquor licenses on a case by case basis, it shouldn't.

"The only way they'd have a legitimate complaint," Mulvey said, "is if we granted a license to a business operating in the same building or right next door."

Ruggiano, who also operates a hair and tanning salon across the street from what will be the Gourmet Food Market, said several times that his goal is not to turn the site into a package store. He intends to have about 250 out of 1000 square feet devoted to beer and wine sales, while offering a selection of gourmet and imported foods.

He also said that he complied with and exceeded the guidelines for renovations on historical buildings. The location is in close proximity to the Adams National Historic Site.

"They said I could vinyl side the building," Ruggiano said. "I don't know why you would want to vinyl side a building like that. I spent more money than I had to, any improvements on that building were done by me."

License Commissioner Thomas Gorman, who lives close to the site, said Ruggiano had done an excellent job with the building.

License Commissioner Francis Mullen noted the differences between the Franklin St. Gourmet Food Market and the 7-Eleven. He said increased traffic, proximity of other liquor stores, hours of operation and it being more residential prevented the license at 7-Eleven.

A ranger from the National Park Service, who operate the nearby Adams Historical Site, expressed concern over parking and traffic in the area.

Ruggiano said that he already operates a business on the area and hasn't caused a problem yet. Fabrizio also noted that its primarily a business district anyway.

The license was granted 4-1, with a closing restriction at 9 p.m. Chairman of the Board of License Commissioners, Joe Shea, opposed it.

"I wish him luck," Shea said, but said that in light of Councillor Ted DeCristofaro's requesting a moratorium on new liquor licenses, "I just wanted to give the City Council a little more time."

Shea said that with the economy the way it is many businesses will be looking for beer and wine licenses. "I think they want every tool available to make their business work," Shea said.

Warm Weather Workout Tips

(NAPS)—Here come cool ideas for warm weather workouts:

• Even though the weather's warm, don't neglect your warm up. Muscles still need to stretch before they're subjected to strenuous exercise.

• If the temperature really starts to soar, you might want to forego a grueling jog in favor of an invigorating swim. If you do run, aerobize, play tennis or engage in some other sport that really works up a sweat, don't forget to take regular breaks and drink plenty of fluids.

• Look for comfortable workout gear that can help you get in shape. Happily, local stores have a fine selection of tops, shorts, leotards and socks that make working out a pleasure.

The best have one thing in common—they're acrylics or acrylic-blends. They offer warmth without weight, keeping muscles warm without weighing you down in bulky workout gear. Other high performance features include wickability, which draws moisture away from the skin and keeps you feeling dry, shape retention, built-in elasticity, as well as easy care and comfort. These features make the garments a pleasure to wear when you're resting up as well as working out.

Acrylic-blend workout wear is known for its superior shape and color retention, wash after wash.

For instance, acrylic socks retain their shape, won't bunch around the ankles and keep feet dry and comfortable.

• After your workout, always cool down with stretches and deep breathing exercises. You may want to take a sauna or a steam if you're at the gym. It's also a good idea to replenish body fluids with water or fruit juices, not sugary soft drinks.

Women: Have Your Blood Pressure Checked!

(NAPS)—Everyone has blood pressure. Blood pressure is the force of blood as it flows through the circulatory system. High blood pressure or hypertension occurs when the heart has to pump harder than it should to get blood to all parts of your body. While high blood pressure often has no symptoms, it can significantly increase the risk of stroke, heart attack and kidney disease.

Unfortunately, many women believe that high blood pressure is primarily a problem for men. In fact, 27 percent of women aged 18-74 have high blood pressure and more than half of all women over 55 suffer from the condition. Post-menopausal women are even more likely to develop high blood pressure than men.

The good news is that there are a number of ways to reduce your chances of getting high blood pressure:

- Keep your weight in a healthy range.
- Exercise regularly.
- Avoid excess sodium and limit your alcohol intake.

- Have your blood pressure checked by a doctor or qualified health professional at least once every two years.

If you already have high blood pressure, remember the condition can be controlled.

• Follow your doctor's advice about diet and exercise.

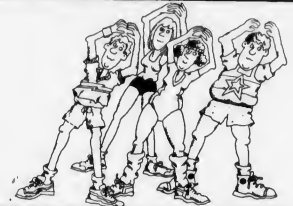

• Take your medication as directed.

• Have your blood pressure checked at least once per year.

You can learn more about managing high blood pressure and preventing other cardiovascular diseases from a new booklet called The Healthy Heart Handbook for Women by the National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute.

To order, send a check for $4.75 per copy to: New Orders, Superintendent of Documents, P.O. Box 371954, Pittsburgh, PA 15250-7954. Be sure to indicate the number of copies you need as well as the stock number: 017-043-00122-2.

Spotlight On HEALTH AND FITNESS

Want To Eat Healthier? Look To The New Food Label

(NAPS)—Read any good labels lately? You should. Food product labels are becoming a lot more interesting than you may know.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration and the U.S. Department of Agriculture have done a major revamping job of the food label lately. The result is a label that's up-to-date with today's health concerns; a label consumers can understand and count on for help in planning healthy meals.

Nutrition information will soon be required on almost all packaged foods. This information will be easier to use. Among the changes:

• "Nutrition Facts" on the top of the nutrition panel.

• A new list of nutrients, selected because of their importance in today's public health problems.

The additions are saturated fat, cholesterol, dietary fiber and sugars. Most other components of the old label, such as calories, sodium and iron, are still required but the vitamins thiamin, riboflavin and

Car Care Corner

When it comes to car care, fair weather seems to lull some motorists into a false sense of security.

Many vacationers traveling by car or light truck this summer will learn too late that hot weather makes its own special demands.

The National Institute for Automotive Service Excellence (ASE), a non-profit organization which administers national certification tests to auto, truck and collision repair technicians, offers the following tips to help you get ready for summer driving. Some are easy to do; others will require the skilled hands of a professional auto technician.

Getting Started

Whether or not you are a do-it-yourselfer, get involved in the car care process. Read your owners manual. It contains a wealth of information about your vehicle and its components. The manufacturer's recommended service schedule are listed and should be followed.

General Cleaning

A dirty, streaked windshield causes eye strain and can be unsafe. Replace worn blades—and make certain you have plenty of washer fluid to fight the dust and insects of summer. Clean the inside of the windshield, too.

Keep the exterior in top shape by using gentle detergent formulated for washing vehicles and a good grade of polish or wax. To prevent scratching, never clean today's highlights and tail lights with dry rags.

Cooling System

The number one cause of summer breakdowns is overheating. The cooling system should be flushed and refilled about every 24 months. The level, condition and concentration of the coolant should be checked periodically.

Never remove the radiator cap until the engine has cooled down, a 50-50 mix of antifreeze and water is usually recommended. The tightness and condition of drive belts, clamps and hoses should be checked by a pro.

Air Conditioning

A marginally operating air conditioning systems likely to fail in hot weather. Have your system examined at a good repair shop.

Engine Performance

Engine drivability problems such as rough idling, hard starts, stalling and diminished power should be corrected. The air, fuel and PCV filters should be replaced according to the manufacturers' recommendations, more frequently in dusty conditions.

Engine Oil

The oil and filter should be changed every 3,000 miles. More often, if you plan long driving with luggage or a trailer in tow, or if you make many short, stop and go trips.

Tires

Tires should be rotated about every 5,000 miles, the air pressure checked once a month. Let the tires "cool down" first. Check the sidewalls for nicks and cuts. Examine tires for tread life, uneven wear and cupping.

If your vehicle "pulls" while driving on a straight road or if there's uneven tread wear, an alignment is warranted. Cupping (treads look like they've been cupped out of the tire) indicates a balance problem. Check the spare tire and make certain the jack works.

Brakes

Regular maintenance will extend the life of the brakes and prevent more costly repairs due to neglect. Brakes should be inspected as recommended by the manual, or sooner if you notice pulsations, grabbing, noises or longer stopping distances.

Battery

The only accurate way to detect a weak battery is with professional equipment at a good repair thought and concentration.

I will be agreeable, I will look my best, speak in a well modulated voice, be courteous and considerate. I will not find fault with my friend, relative or colleague. I will not try to change anyone but myself.

I will have a program. I might not follow it exactly, but I will save myself from two enemies - Hurry and Indecision.

I will exercise my character in three ways. I will do a good turn and keep it a secret. If anyone finds out it won't count. I will do two things I don't want to do just for the exercise. I will be unafraid to enjoy especially what is beautiful and believe that as I give to the world the world will give to me.

Quincy Takes Barnstable

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Quincy baseball team traveled to Barnstable Monday and defeated the Red Raiders, 9-6, to improve its record to 7-9.

The Presidents faced Silver Lake yesterday (Wednesday) are scheduled to finish the season today (Thursday) at 3:30 against North Quincy at Adams Field. However, it was undecided at press time if they would make up a snowed-out game against Boston Latin.

The game means nothing to Quincy, but Latin, headed for the Eastern Mass. Tournament, may have to play the game.

John Russell pitched all the way for Quincy Monday and turned in a fine performance, giving up five unearned runs.

Quincy jumped off to a 5-0 lead after two innings and never trailed. The Presidents made several errors late in the game, allowing the Cape team to close the gap.

Duane Holmes continued his torrid hitting and drove in four runs, Noel DiBona drove in two, Robbie Kane had two hits and played strong defense at second base and Mike Caporale also hit well.

After snapping a six-game losing streak, Quincy lost to Falmouth, 8-3, last Friday.

Trailing, 3-0, after an inning, Quincy tied it at 3-3 but that was its last gasp as Falmouth went on to win going away.

Junior Caporale had a two-run single for the Presidents' only offensive thrust.

In its previous game

Quincy made up a snowed-out game with Brookline and had a field day, rolling to an 18-2 victory.

Junior Tom Malvesti and senior Robbie Kane each had three hits as all the players hit well.

Steve Miller pitched four strong innings and Chris Cotter and Sean MacDonald mopped up with three scoreless innings.

Quincy dropped an 11-7 decision to Plymouth with Malvesti and Kane again leading the attack as Malvesti had three hits and Kane had two.

North Falls To Weymouth

The North Quincy baseball team's bats remained silent Monday as the Raiders lost, 5-1, to Weymouth, dropping their record to 7-8.

North played at Bridgewater-Raynham yesterday (Wednesday) and will wind up the season today (Thursday) at 3:30 at Adams Field against Quincy.

The Raiders were held to four hits Monday as Mike Patch, the losing pitcher (4-2), gave up 11 hits.

Patch has pitched well all season and has an impressive 2.02 ERA.

Jim Sapienza had a double and Danny Duncan, Charlie Rozanitis and Patch a single each for the only hits.

In its previous game North dropped a 2-1 squeaker to Taunton as Sean Donovan again received no hitting support. He gave up only four hits as his record dropped to 3-4.

Despite his record, Donovan has a fine 2.00 ERA. He has lost two three-hitters, a four-hitter and lost his opening game when Falmouth scored two unearned runs in the last inning.

"Sean and Mike have just been outstanding, just as they were last year, but we just can't hit for them," said coach Leo Donovan. "Our bats have been flat most of the season."

Mike Ainsley and Todd Filicicchia had two RBI each and Joe Prendiville, John DeCarli, John McManus, Brian Salley and Larry McGue also contributed to the win.

The Massasoit College baseball team last weekend won the NJCAA Region 21 double elimination tournament with three straight wins and will compete in the National Junior College World Series May 22-28 in Millington, Tenn. It will be the Warrior's first appearance in the nationals.

TEND TO AIR-CONDITIONING REPAIRS NOW

It is not at all uncommon for the seal around the shaft of auto air-conditioning systems to fail every few years, due to wear and tear and temperature extremes. In the days before concern about the earth's ozone layer, it was not a big concern to replace the seal and recharge the system with inexpensive refrigerant. Now that this refrigerant (R-12) has been linked to deteriorating ozone layer, the government has reduced its availability (to trained technicians with expensive recycling equipment), increased its cost, and decided to phase it out altogether by 1996. As a result, recharging an existing R-12 air-conditioning system is likely to become an increasingly costly proposition. In coming years, there will be no R-12 available at any price.

HINT: Newer, non-CFC air-conditioning systems are now available on some new cars, and will be increasingly available until a switchover is made to the new R-13 1/2 refrigerant.

If you have questions about your car's air-conditioning system, don't hesitate to ask when you come into LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. For all your car's repairs, we have modern test equipment, the right parts, and the best service technicians available in the area. We know how important your car is to you and that it represents a sizable investment. Let's get acquainted at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550). "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." 'WALK OF NAMES' project planned for the entrance to City Hall annex is moving forward with more than 60 percent of the bricks sold. The project entails creating a new brick plaza with walkways as well as some upgrading of plantings in the area of City Hall (James R. McIntyre Center). To order a brick, call 376-3676.

Over 60% Of Bricks Sold For City Hall 'Walk Of Names'

Quincy's "Walk of Names" project is well underway, with more than 60 percent of the bricks sold, announces Mayor James Sheets.

Plans for the downtown improvement project include creating a new brick plaza with walkways at the entrance to the City Hall annex, and some upgrading of plantings in the immediate vicinity.

The design allows for 2,500 of the bricks to be engraved with the names of people from the past, present and future to form a "Walk of Names." For each $50 donation to the project, a brick will be personalized with up to two lines of 15 characters each.

The engraved brick pavers will form an octagonal pattern at the center of the design and a rectangle immediately in front of the annex entrance. Double rows of engraved pavers will frame the herringbone pattern of lighter colored bricks throughout the plaza.

The pavement will be accented with 16-inch by 16-inch squares of Quincy granite. In addition, the plaza will feature park benches, flag poles and a number of historic street lamps, which will also be dedicated in honor of a particular group, company or individual for a donation.

Construction is scheduled to begin in the early fall.

Orders for personalized bricks may be placed by calling 376-3676. Order forms are available at various retail stores throughout the city and at City Hall.

For information about donating flagpoles, park benches or lamp posts, call 376-1990.

Or Risk Accreditation Quincy College Governance Must Change

By BILL DONCASTER

Quincy College must have its own board of trustees and cut ties with the Quincy School Committee or risk losing accreditation, the New England Association of Schools and Colleges has ruled.

In a letter to Quincy College President Clayton Johnson from NEASC's Commission on Institutions of Higher Education, the accrediting body, Quincy College must have a new governing structure "authorized, implemented and ...functioning in keeping with our standard," by February of 1994 or they will put the school's accreditation on suspension.

Quincy College currently falls under the jurisdiction of the Quincy School system, college officials say it is probably one of the last city colleges governed this way.

Right now the college president answers directly to the school superintendent; NEASC wants him to answer to a board of trustees.

College President Clayton Johnson, Mayor James Sheets, Dean of Academic Affairs Robert Downey and Dean of Health and Life Sciences Patricia Ryan appeared before the commission regarding its accreditation status on April 22. Besides deferring their recommendation that Quincy College be placed on probation, the commission requested reports in June, September and November to monitor ongoing progress.

"The college has simply outgrown the Quincy school system," said College Dean Richard Pessin. According to Pessin, Quincy College now has 6000 students to the rest of the school systems 8000. It has a second campus in Plymouth, satellite schools in Boston, Chicopee, South Weymouth Air Force Base, Hanover and Wareham. Over 70 percent of Quincy College's student body are not from Quincy.

According to Quincy College officials, NEASC believes that the college needs its own governing body. The president of the college can't report to the superintendent of schools. The school must set up its own independent board of trustees.

Sheets To Send $7 M Bond Issue

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

A $7 million bond issue for school additions and repairs, flood-control projects and department equipment will be sent to the City Council June 7 by Mayor James Sheets.

The bond package will include:

- $2.5 million for a new sea wall and pipeline in Squantum and for a new drainage system in Montclair to control flooding in those areas.

- $1 million for various school improvements and maintenance projects. "Some need new roofs, some need new windows, some need new flooring and plaster ceilings. Some have electrical and heating problems that need to be corrected.

"We're trying to fair out the most critical needs and work on those," Sheets said. "We want to get that shot in the arm to get our schools up to a level where they can be maintained properly."

The council has already approved two items that will be part of the bond package:

- $2.7 million for the construction of a new early childhood education center on Brooks Ave. in South Quincy, and an addition to the Bernazzani

Elementary School on Furnace Brook Parkway. Ground was recently broken for both projects and the new center and addition should be ready for occupancy in the fall.

"$125,000 for a new front-end loading truck for the Quincy Department of Public Works.

The mayor said the bond package will also include equipment for other departments, including Park, Forestry and Cemetery.

Sheets said the city can afford to borrow more money for the projects because it has significantly reduced its debt for older projects.

The bond would enable the city to finance the cost of the projects over several years.

According to Auditor Robert Foy, the city is presently rated A by two Wall Street credit rating agencies, Standard and Poors and Moody's Investor Service.

"It's a good bond rating, especially for a city. Most cities are rated A or below," Foy said.

The city may be rerated next month after the city's sells some bonds, Foy said. The auditor said the city's rating may remain the same.

No 'Booze Luge' Here

The "Booze Luge" is getting quite popular among the college crowd, but it won't happen in Quincy. A Booze Luge is basically just a three foot block of ice, with groves cut into it. You pour liquor in one end, watch it wind through the miniature luge track and into someone's mouth at the other end.

But according to a letter from Quincy Police Sgt. Richard Laracy to the License Board Tuesday, "Any game that promotes the drinking of more alcohol is illegal in my opinion, and in past decisions by the State Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission."

According to Laracy, (Cont'd on Page 20)

Martin Ervin Announces Candidacy For Mayor

yet, you don't have a voice in how it's being spent.

"It's like my saying, 'Give me your paycheck and I'll spend it for you.' This is what happens to your tax dollars when you are not actively involved in the important voting process."

Ervin said wants "everyday people" to be fairly represented. "Quincy is progressing cosmetically, but more importantly than that, let's give our teachers a pay raise; let's make our streets safer for everyone to walk wherever they wish to go without worry; let's get transportation back for our elderly; let's create and initiate summer youth programs and centers for our kids; let's get a larger police force that will realistically represent all segments of our city to patrol our streets; let's get Quincy Center up and running again by investing in larger major stores.

"What we don't need is 10 hair salons in a three block radius; what we do need is for you to get out, voice your opinions, vote, be heard."

Ervin urges residents to tell him their comments, suggestions, concerns and complaints by calling 474-4595. "I want to represent you as mayor and make Quincy an even better place to live."

Ervin and his wife, Kerri, have a two-year-old daughter, Aisha Maria.

Born in Boston, he lived in Virginia until he was 12 and then attended Hull High School before moving with his family to Quincy in 1987. He earned a general equivalency diploma, but did not attend college.

He works at New England Medical Center in Boston in outpatient registration.

Used Car Sales License Granted

By BILL DONCASTER

Copeland Auto Sales received a Motor 2 (used car sales) license Tuesday at the meeting of the Quincy Board of License Commissioners.

A letter from John Gilton, Quincy's traffic engineer, said the area is zoned for such uses as a drive-up bank, convenient food store or pizza parlor, "a low traffic generator such as the one proposed would present less of an impact than one of the alternative uses."

He did add that auto transport trucks to the site could not be acceptable. Since they plan to maintain an inventory of 14 cars, owners Stephen Hynes and Michael Saruda say they plan to drive in any cars and have no need for auto transport trucks.

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio disapproved of the license because he doubted they could maneuver cars around the lot without parking on the street. He also said the lot is "in an area that's a gateway to the city, we have to be sensitive to the esthetic appearance of the area."

Fabrizio also requested that their sign not say "used cars," write prices on car windows or pennants or flags on the site.

The sign, Hynes said, will be a wooden carved sign saying "Copeland Auto Sales."

Hearing Continued On Marina Bay Liquor License

By BILL DONCASTER
The Quincy Board of License Commissioners Tuesday continued a request from Siro's at Marina Bay for a common victualer-all alcohol license until next week.

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers said that he held a community meeting Monday night and said residents in the area felt "this restaurant would be a plus to Marina Bay and a nice addition to the Boardwalk."

One resident in attendance voiced opposition saying that Marina Bay "doesn't need any more bars." He complained about drunk drivers going past his house returning from the area.

However, two other area residents voiced approval over the restaurant opening up.

License commissioner Jane Gallahue expressed concern over the size of the bar. It seats 12, but said more can stand around and it could end up with a barroom atmosphere quickly.

Kristie Henriksen, Siro's

owner, said the bar is so big to accommodate storage and refrigeration equipment. "We want a bar for customers to be able to have a cocktail while waiting for a table, or an after dinner drink, we're looking for a fine dining clientele."

Ayers suggested the possibility of adding a restriction to the license providing that the bar close when the kitchen does.

The matter should be on the agenda for next Tuesday.

Museum Plank Owner

RICHARD P. GARVEY, left, president of the Hurley Insurance Agency, 1245 Hancock St., Quincy, presents a $1,000 donation to Bill MacMullen, executive director of the U.S. Naval Shipbuilding Museum. Garvey and a host of other local business people and private citizens have contributed $1,000, becoming "plank owners" and special life-time members of the museum which is scheduled to open in the fall at the Fore River Shipyard, Quincy Point. For more information about the museum or to make a donation, call 479-7900 or visit the museum office at 1250 Hancock St. (Presidents Place), Quincy Center.

Permit Granted For Festival

Fiesta Shows got their permit to run the fourth annual Quincy City Festival, June 8-13, but not before an objection from the president of the Quincy Animal League.

John McDuff, Quincy Animal League president, wanted to voice his opinion about the use of animals in Fiesta Shows attractions.

McDuff said he had no objections to Fiesta Shows in any other aspect, but the Quincy Animal League must oppose any exploitation of animals, particularly for performing animals. He seemed to have the largest problem with the "elephant rides" Fiesta has offered in years past, and the way such circus animals are transported.

According to Eugene Dean, of Fiesta Shows, there will be no elephant this year. The animal portion of the fair will be an "Old MacDonald's Farm" theme, with barnyard animals, all brought in from farms in the area on well ventilated trucks.

Vice chairman of the license board Matthias Mulvey said he thought such an exhibit "seems like a nice way for city kids to get a chance to see animals they don't get to see everyday."

Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers supported granting the permit to Fiesta Shows provided they have the same conditions on parking and clean-up they did last year.

Mulvey commended Fiesta Shows on compliance with safety issues on the rides, saying that it is an area of concern across the country and Fiesta has always kept their rides in good operating condition.

Veterans Flags Sought For Parade

The Quincy Partnership, Inc., is asking families of deceased veterans to loan their Veterans Memorial Flags to the Partnership, to line this year's annual Quincy Flag Day Parade route, Monday, June 14.

Those families and individuals wishing to loan their flag or flags for display may deliver them to the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Wollaston, or call 773-3551. Each flag will have a banner attached bearing the name of the veteran. Also, each flag will be returned to the donor after the parade.

A Memorial Flag is given to the family of a veteran by the Veterans Administration to be displayed on the casket during the funeral. These are the requested flags for prominent display along the parade route.

"We feel this is a special way to honor our flag as well as the veteran who fought to protect it," said Edward Keohane, president of the Quincy Partnership. "We want Quincy to lead the way in showing how much we precipitate the courage and sacrifices which have been made by all of our veterans through the years."

The Flag Day Parade will start at 7 p.m. at Washington and Coddington Sts. and proceed to Hancock St. The parade route passes Veterans Memorial Stadium and ends at Adams Field, at Hancock St. and Southern Artery.

The World War II Victory Flag, which measures 45 feet by 90 feet, will be raised at Adams Field after the parade. There will be a band concert.

Ken Coleman, former Voice of the Boston Red Sox and the parade grand marshal will speak briefly. At dark, there will be a fireworks display.

This year's parade will be larger than last year and it is expected that the Veterans Memorial Flags will be flown the entire length of the parade route.

The annual Quincy Flag Day parade is sponsored by the Quincy Partnership, Inc. and the City of Quincy.

HYPERTENSION: THE MYSTERY VILLAIN

It is the silent stalker with the long name that lots of people don't really quite understand. Simply put, hypertension is high blood pressure. It can creep up on you without warning, putting you at greater risk of such potential killers as cardiovascular disease, heart failure, atherosclerosis, kidney failure and stroke. While the cause of the majority of hypertension cases are unknown, there are a number of identified risk factors: gender (before the age of 55, men are more susceptible), obesity, no siblings ("only children" tend to have hard-driving personalities which may be linked to the condition), heredity, diabetes, kidney disease, thyroid disease, smoking, heavy drinking, and a sedentary lifestyle. P.S. While hypertension may offer few warning symptoms, it can be easily diagnosed by a doctor and sensibly controlled.

By exercising aerobically for just twenty minutes, three times a week, you can help reduce your risk of hypertension. Vigorous walking, gardening and even house cleaning can all qualify as aerobic exercise—it's easier than you think to work this into your routine. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can modify your lifestyle to help ward off heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment at 101 Adams St., Suite 24, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

McIntyre: A Personal Look

A second book on the late Mayor-Senator James McIntyre—this one focusing on the lighter side of his life—is coming off the press.

"A Twinkle In His Eye," the book is a collection of humorous anecdotes, reflections and recollections by family, friends and associates mainly during his career as city councillor, mayor and state senator spanning the 1950's to the early 1970's. There are also a number of photographs.

MCINTYRE

The book will make its debut Saturday, June 5 at a 3 to 5 p.m. reception at the historic Adams Mansion on Adams St.

Speaker will be Lt. General Bernard Trainor, USMC (Ret.), who was a classmate of McIntyre's at Holy Cross and a long-time friend.

You'll remember Trainor as the military analyst with Peter Jennings on ABC during the Persian Gulf War.

The first book on McIntyre, "Semper Fidelis: The Life Of James R. McIntyre" appeared last year. Written by Dr. James Cameron, head of the history department and chairman of the Division of Social Science at Eastern Nazarene College in Wollaston, it was based largely on McIntyre's personal papers, and newspaper and eyewitness accounts of his political career. It is more a political history book.

The new book is a sort of behind-the-scenes private look at one of Quincy's most powerful political figures who never seemed to lose his sense of humor in any situation.

The anecdotes and recollections by over 40 persons—including family members, friends, political figures and others—were compiled by former School Supt. Lawrence Creedon who interviewed them.

A sample random anecdote is about the time Lady Bird Johnson came to Quincy in June, 1967 with Secretary of the Interior Stewart Udall to visit the Adams Mansion.

The recollection is by Jack Schmock, an early McIntyre supporter who served as Civil Defense Director and head of the Quincy Fire Department Signal Division.

The First Lady was to land at the South Weymouth Naval Air Station and motorcade to Quincy.

As Schmock recalls, the route to the Mansion was the Southeast Expressway to Furnace Brook Parkway to Adams St.

An hour before she was due to arrive, McIntyre asked Schmock to help him check the route.

Lady Bird, at that time, was campaigning to "Keep America Beautiful" and McIntyre said: "I want to make sure everything looks nice."

They found residents standing along Furnace Brook Parkway waiting to see Lady Bird.

And, lining the street in front of the homes were—egad!—trash bags and barrels. It was trash pick-up day in that area.

"The high level planning from the nation's capital to Quincy had overlooked this weekly event," recalls Schmock.

McIntyre gasped but quickly radioed Public Works Commr. Jack Browne who diverted rubbish trucks from their normal routes to move in and pick up the rubbish on Furnace Brook Parkway.

McIntyre, Schmock and this time with James (Pete) Ricciuti, the mayor's executive secretary, returned to make a second inspection of the route.

The trash was gone but the empty trash barrels were scattered about the fronts of homes. McIntyre gasped again and put in another radio call to Browne to send help.

And then there was the sight of the mayor of Quincy on one side of the street and his executive secretary on the other "hiding rubbish barrels behind homes, shrubs and automobiles and any place a hiding spot could be found."

Some of the residents realized what was happening and got their own rubbish containers out of sight.

The First Lady was due shortly but McIntyre took the time to stop and thank the residents for their help.

McIntyre managed to get to the South Weymouth Naval Air station with his wife, Sheila and daughter, Elizabeth, in time to meet the First Lady's plane.

She loved the beautiful flowers at the Adams Mansion. The word trash was never mentioned.

Among the books recollections are those by:

Taylor Ahern, Edward Barry, Henry Bertolon, Louise Brabazon, Jack Browne, William Bulger, Lawrence Creedon, Rita Daniels, William Delahunt, Christopher Eeley, Peter Eeley, Betty and Joseph Fidler, Jr., Gerald Gherardi, John Gillis, Walter Hannan, Barbara McIntyre Hunt, Patricia Hunt, Paul Hunt, Carl Johnson, Rabbi Jacob Mann, Patricia "Tippy" Marella, Fr. William McCarthy, Wendy Browne Moody, Peter O'Connell, Pete Ricciuti, George Riley, George Smith, Arthur Tobin, Florence and William Blake, Robert Bowes, Thomas Burgin, Vincent Cristiani, Frank Finn, Edward King, George Keneally, Neil Lynch, A.J. Pacella, John Parker, General Trainor—and this writer.

"How pleased Jim would be with this book of remembrances so lovingly offered by many of his close friends and associates," his wife, Sheila, writes in the preface.

Proceeds from the book will go to the James R. McIntyre Scholarship Fund.

Burgin Pledges House Cleaning When Mayor

Former City Councillor Thomas S. Burgin, a candidate for mayor in the special June 11 election, said that if he is elected he will remove every major department not protected by tenure.

"I make no ifs, ands or buts about this issue," he said. "Their removal from city management will give the city back to the people and taxpayers."

His opponent, acting Mayor Leo E. Mullin, saw the issues differently.

"Is Quincy to be run by the Quincy Savings Bank or the small homeowner? That is the real issue of the campaign," he said, noting that Burgin's father, Clarence E., is president of the bank.

Meanwhile, City Councillor William M. Edmonston and County Commissioner Russell T. Bates, who were defeated in the preliminary election for mayor, both endorsed Burgin.

A third beaten candidate, former Mayor Thomas J. McGrath, hinted that he might put together a last minute sticker campaign.

"I am not interested at present in a sticker candidate for mayor," he said.

"If, however, the thousands who are dissatisfied with the results of the recent primary believe that a sticker candidate is advisable I will give all the assistance I can to make such a candidate successful."

QRTA Scholarship Fund Recognized By School Committee

The Quincy Retired Teachers Association Scholarship Fund, on the occasion of its nomination for the President's Volunteer Action Award, was recently recognized by the Quincy School Committee.

The nomination was suggested by Dr. Carol Lee Griffin, assistant superintendent for pupil personnel, and supported by Supt. Eugene Creedon. The QRTA fund, however, was not one of the final 20 groups from throughout the country to receive the award.

Alice Guilmartin, co-chairperson of the QRTA fund, shared a history of its 15 year growth. Citations from the School Committee and Mayor James Sheets were presented and a message of thanks and commendation from President Bill Clinton was read.

The fund began in 1978 when then-QRTA Treasurer Martin Casey received a $1,000 check from the estate of Warren Findlay, a former Quincy High School mathematics teacher. The bequest was earmarked "for the scholarship fund," and although the QRTA had no scholarship fund, Casey decided to start one with the $1,000 donation.

Mable Pratt, retired from North Quincy High School, was the fund's first volunteer. She served as chairperson of the QRTA Scholarship Committee until she resigned for health reasons in 1990. Under Pratt's leadership, the fund was incorporated as a tax-exempt entity and the policy of investing all monies received in insured bank accounts with only interest used for scholarships was established.

The Scholarship Committee, established at this time, is responsible for the management of the funds and the distribution of scholarships.

Casey has served as treasurer of the Scholarship Committee since it began. Under his money management skills, the work of other committee members, and the guidance of bank representatives, the fund has grown rapidly.

Since 1985, scholarships of $500 have been given at all Quincy high schools. Since 1990, a special scholarship of $1,000 a year for four years, alternating between North Quincy High School and Quincy High School, has been awarded. This scholarship comes from a bequest of the estate of Ruth Meisner, a former NQHS language teacher.

In 1989, the fund celebrated its 10th anniversary and announced that its invested capital had reached $110,000. The invested capital now totals $250,000.

This year, one out of every 22 high school seniors in Quincy received a QRTA scholarship. The interest from the endowment allowed the Scholarship Committee to award 24 scholarships totalling $15,500 citywide at recent awards ceremonies.

Emblem Club Meeting June 8

Quincy Emblem Club will meet Tuesday, June 8 at 7:30 p.m. at the Quincy Elks Home, East

CAN CHIROPRACTIC CARE HELP ARTHRITIS?

In order to answer this very common asked question it is important to understand that arthritis is a disease or condition that actually means an inflammation or irritation of a joint. There are several different types of arthritis such as Gouty Arthritis, which typically affects the big toe, and Rheumatoid Arthritis, in which one usually suffers swelling of numerous joints and deformed hands and/or feet. The most common type, however, is called Degenerative or Osteoarthritis, in which the "wear and tear" on a joint causes increasing pain and stiffness. It is important to note that this "wear and tear arthritis" will often occur faster in a joint after it has been injured, such as with a football player who has hurt his knee or a person who has suffered a whiplash injury to his or her neck.

While there is no absolute cure for arthritis, chiropractic care has proven to be helpful in overcoming the pain and crippling effects of this disabling disease. The Doctor of Chiropractic uses a number of techniques which can provide significant relief such as manipulation, ultrasound, heat and ice therapy, and carefully programmed mild exercise. Arthritis patients should consider chiropractic as a drug free alternative to easing their joint pain and stiffness.

If you have any questions or would like to make an appointment please call Dr. Mark C. Jaehnnig, a lifelong Quincy resident, at Quincy Chiropractic Office, 110 Billings Rd., North Quincy, MA 02255-4400.

College Governance Must Change Or Risk Accreditation

The college and the rest of the school system, college officials said, need to have their own separate administrators. The college is too large and diverse for the superintendent of schools to run both, they say.

Mayor James Sheets said probation could lead to non-accreditation, and damage to the school's reputation.

"It would unquestionably affect enrollment. Students wouldn't want to graduate from an institution that is on academic probation," said Sheets.

"It is possible it could affect student funds. Certain types of student aid might not be available to institutions which are not accredited," Sheets said.

Sheets said he will make his recommendation regarding the future governance of Quincy College at the school committee meeting on June 2. As chairman of the school committee, he will also present a copy of the home rule petition for the governance change and a copy of a report filed by a task force which has been studying the college governance issue.

The city council will receive the mayor's recommendation, home rule petition and report June 7. Before becoming law, the governance change would have to clear several hurdles, including approval by state and city officials.

Technically, Sheets said a home rule petition seeking to change the governance at Quincy College needs the approval of the city council, mayor and the state legislature. Practically, however, the mayor said the petition would also need the blessing of the school committee.

"It would be very difficult to pass it (the petition) on Beacon Hill without school committee support," Sheets said.

Barbara Bittingham, chair of the accrediting body, said, "We commend the institution's leadership as well as the Mayor of Quincy and the Quincy Superintendent of Schools for their fresh and visible recognition of the need to address the long standing and vexations governance problems of Quincy College."

According to Pessin, aside from the governance issue, Quincy College received very favorable ratings from NEASC.

QUINCY REPUBLICAN CITY Committee recently honored members for their years of service to the committee. Chairman Susan Gallagher, second from right, John McDuff, vice chairman and Ward 2 chairman; Ann Serafinelli, Ward 4 chairman who has served more than 25 years; and former Mayor Francis McCauley.

Auto Collision Concerns

Automobile collision repairs are usually inconvenient to vehicle owners. Drivers can lessen the inconvenience and also the stress involved with a collision by knowing what to look for in an auto body business. When damage to a vehicle must be repaired, there are three concerns: high quality work, lowest price available, and customer service. All three should be considered when you are selecting an auto body business.

Quality repair work must be the paramount concern. Select an auto body business that will give that little extra at no cost. Automobiles are an asset that should be maintained. Choosing the right auto body business will guarantee your investment. The cost of repairing modern automobiles are rising. Currently, auto manufacturers are designing autos with module parts. Although these modules decrease manufacturing costs, they can greatly increase the cost of repairing damaged autos.

Replacing a headlight assembly for example, in a modern auto might cost as much as $200 in parts alone. Older automobiles had the flexibility of replacing on the damaged subassembly, where part costs might be only $50.

Selecting an auto body business that you can trust to have your best interest in mind, has become increasingly more important in controlling your total costs.

Look for a local business with many years of experience, which might offer free pickup and delivery, auto rentals, and quick delivery. There are customer services provided by the better auto body businesses.

At Ayers Collision Center, Inc. all these concerns are standard business practice. With over 14 years experience in the auto collision business, Ayers collision goes that "extra mile" in keeping all it's customers very satisfied. The centers large modern facility can meet all auto collision needs.

For more information, contact Chuck Ayers at 440B East Squantum St., North Quincy, MA 02171 or call 328-0056.

Have Brakes Checked

The cost of crashes is staggering, according to figures from National Highway Traffic Safety Administration. In 1990 the figure was $137.5 billion. Deleting the third attributed to "driving under the influence," there's still a $91.5 billion tab against the sober driver.

An estimated five percent of these accidents are attributed to poor condition of the vehicle: loose steering, a bald tire, bad brakes or other discrepancy. If, through proper preventive maintenance, we could avert just 10 percent of these accidents, says the Car Care Council, savings to society could be as much as $475.5 million.

Even with impressive advancements in vehicle safety design, brake-related accidents cause millions of dollars of damage and affect thousands of lives each year. These sophisticated system, with as many as 160 parts, demand periodic inspection and maintenance. And when service is needed, anything less than quality workmanship may compromise the safety of the driver, his/her passengers and others on the road.

When having brakes inspected, which should be

He taught at Quincy High School for a time before entering the U.S. Army in February, 1942 shortly after the attack on Pearl Harbor. He received his basic training at Camp Crofts, S.C. and was assigned to Officers Candidate School at Fort Benning, Ga. to become a commissioned officer.

His active duty consisted of the initial invasions of the islands in the Pacific, Enewetok and Kwajalein. Later because of his command of the Italian language he was assigned as the officer in charge of an Italian Prisoner of War camp in Hawaii. Most of the prisoners were captured in the North African campaign. While assigned there he was surprised with a five day visit from his younger brother Sgt. Leo Papile who was on his way to Japan with the U.S. Marine Corps and whom he hadn't seen for over two years. A favorite topic of conversation at family gatherings for many years to follow was the five days the two shared in Hawaii.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Following World War I, each of the Allied Powers - United States, Belgium, France, Great Britain, Italy and Portugal - buried one of its unknown dead in the tomb, or near it, and made the tomb a shrine in memory of all soldiers killed in the war.

In Westminster Abbey above the body of this unknown man, the lettering inlaid in brass says simply: "Beneath this stone rests the body of a British Warrior unknown by name or rank, brought from France to lie among the most illustrious of the Land." In America in the National Cemetery at Arlington rests the Unknown Soldier of the United States. Under the Arc de Triomphe in Paris rests the Unknown Soldier of France. In the Church of Santa Maria degli Angeli in Rome is the tomb of Italy's Unknown Soldier...

We do not know whether the one buried at Arlington was tall or short, fair or dark, a country boy or a city boy. All that we do know is that in the best way we know, he gave all that he had for his country... How indebted we are!

North Edges Quincy For City Crown

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Quincy and North Quincy baseball teams wind up so-so seasons this week with North claiming the city championship following a 2-1 win over Quincy last week, its second victory over the Presidents.

North (8-9) was scheduled to complete its season yesterday (Wednesday) at Bridgewater-Raynham.

Quincy played at Billerica Tuesday and finishes up today (Thursday) against Silver Lake at 3:30 at Adams Field.

North Quincy's Tim Byrne, making only his second pitching start, pitched a one-hitter in the Raider's win over Quincy. A fourth-inning single by Tom Malvesti was Quincy's lone hit. Byrne struck out eight.

"It was only his second start and he did a really nice job," said North coach Leo Donovan. "When we needed the strikeouts, he got them. He was really in control."

John Russell relieved surprise freshman starter Sean Kivinin in the opening inning for Quincy and shut down the Raiders after they scored both runs in the first.

"John did another masterful job and I honestly thought we could overcome a two-run lead," said Quincy coach Bob Sylvia. "But Byrne was outstanding and we could do nothing about him."

George Wirtz started North on its way with a single and Pat Shea also singled. Wirtz scored on Brian Anderson's sacrifice and Dave Reinhart blasted a triple for the winning run.

Jim Sapienza had the only other North Quincy hit. He also made a fine diving catch of Sean MacDonald's blast to left field, robbing him of a sure hit. Both teams played errorless ball.

"Both pitchers had good control," said Sylvia. "The field's weenness kept the ball down and both teams made some great catches. The kids on both teams rose to the occasion for this one."

North Quincy had defeated Quincy, 5-2, on Reinhart's bases-loaded triple in their first meeting.

Earlier last week North wasted still another fine pitching effort by Sean Donovan as he dropped a 3-2 decision to Weymouth, making his record a very deceiving 3-5.

The Wildcat's twice came from behind as they moved to within one win of making the Eastern Mass. Tournament.

North took a 1-0 lead in the second when Danny Duncan homered over the left field fence, but Weymouth tied it in the next inning on a double by Steve Kermissey and a two-out single by Tim Daley.

North scored again in the sixth as Shea singled, moved to second on a sacrifice bunt by Anderson and scored on Reinhart's single.

In the bottom of the seventh Kermissey walked, Mike Gates singled him to second but Gates was picked off first base. Daley moved Kermissey to third with a sacrifice bunt and Billy Donahue drove in the winning run.

"There's really not much to say," said Donovan. "We had another really good pitching performance, but Weymouth got the key hits. I thought we could hit better, but we just haven't been hitting well."

Girls Track

Hamilton, Deady Lead North Over Quincy

By TOM SULLIVAN

Senior Suzanne Hamilton came up with two clutch wins and Katy Deady took the long jump and seconds in the 100 and 200 to secure a 71-60 victory for the North Quincy girls' track team over Quincy.

The meet was the closest between the teams in years with every event a tossup. Almost every Quincy girl came up with personal best performances and the meet was highlighted by outstanding freshman performances.

Freshmen accounted for 44 1/2 of the total 131 points in the meet with all scorers in the 100 hurdles and 400 being ninth graders.

"We knew Quincy would be up for this meet after beating Taunton and coming close against Silver Lake," said North coach Geoff Hennessy.

Quincy coach John Franceschini was proud of his squad. "Every girl did her best and we enjoyed a brief lead, but we knew if Hamilton and Deady went 1-2 in the 100 meters, we were in trouble," Franceschini said.

Hamilton's big day didn't start out well as she only cleared 4-2 in the high jump for first place.

"I was concerned because Quincy was psyched to rack up big points in the field events," Hennessy said. "We got together and decided that Hamilton and Deady would forego the 4X100 relay and double up in the 100 and 200, knowing that if Quincy was still close after the 200 we still had the two-mile and 4X400." Both events held a decided advantage for North with Kelly Duggan winning the two-mile which clinched the win.

North improved its record to 2-5, while Quincy dropped to 1-6.

North Quincy winners were Hamilton in the 100 meter (13.5) and the 200 (27.8), Mel Gaziano, 800 (2:38.6); Suzanne Lewis, mile (5:39.4); Kelly Duggan, two-mile (14:09.2); Deady, long jump (14-11 1/4); and Meghan Barry, shot put (31-6).

Taking second places were Deady, 100 and 200; Uchechi Kalu, 400; Marla Levine, two-mile; Lynne Garland, 100 hurdles; Leah Campanale, 300 hurdles; Jen Santry, discus and Heather Simmons, javelin.

Placing third were Amanda Solano, 400; Katie McNamara, 800; Erin Duggan, mile; Laura Blaikie, two-mile; Suk Ting Ng, 100 hurdles; Hamilton, high jump; Jen Pineo, shot put; Tracey Grossi, discus, and Stacey Minukas, javelin.

Quincy winners were Liz Sawan, 400 (66.1); Angela Martinson, 100 hurdles (19.0); Michele Civitarese, 300 hurdles (50.9); Civitarese, high jump (4-6); Laura Molina, triple jump (30-2 1/2); Liz Noble, discus (88-3); Nicole Shaughnessy, javelin (85-3), and the 4X100 relay team of McNaught, Civitarese, Shaughnessy and Martinson (55.0).

Taking seconds were Suzanne Civitarese, 800; Sawan, mile; McNaught, long jump; Sawan, high jump; Solano, triple jump; Noble, shot put.

Placing third were McNaught, 100; Nyesha Young, 200; Sue Civitarese, 300 hurdles; Young, long jump; Martinson, triple jump.

At the recent South Shore Principals meet at Norwell, Lewis took second in the two-mile in 11:52.2, Kelly Duggan ran a 5:58.4 mile, Ursula Feurtado ran a 2:45.8 800 and Phyllis Poon ran a 13:86 100 meters for North Quincy.

Jay Pillard Cycling Across U.S. In Fight Against Breast Cancer

Jay Pillard of Quincy is bicycling across the United States this summer to raise both money and awareness for the battle for breast cancer.

He is joined by Robert Driscoll of Milton. The two are part of a group of five men known as "Mudd, Sweat and Gears" who will embark on their journey beginning June 1 in San Francisco.

Boston will be the finish line of the 3400 mile trek on July 10.

"Each of the riders has lost somebody close, to this disease," said Pillard. "And I'll tell you right now, it is an issue for the entire family. I lost an aunt five years ago and another is currently struggling with it. This is a cause who's time has come, I'm just trying to do my part the best I know how."

Pillard is a merchant-marine by trade so he was able to allot the forty days necessary to completing the journey.

The journey will go encompass three mountain ranges (including the Rockies), two canyons, and 16 states. They will be riding six days a week with Sundays off as a rest day. They will average 100 miles a day at an average clip of 15 mph.

"The reason why it is 'averaging' " said Pillard, "is because when we hit the Rockies we are going to be traveling at a snail's pace on the way up. We should make up for it on the descent, however."

All the proceeds for Mudd, Sweat and Gears bicycling will be evenly split between the Massachusetts and National Breast Cancer Coalitions. The cyclists' goal is $20,000.

Contributions can be made to Mass. Breast Cancer Coalition, c/o Mudd Sweat and Gears, P.O. Box 7188, Quincy, MA 02269. (696-6767)

Joseph Marchese Honored For Volunteer Home Building Work

John Marchese, a Quincy native, was recently honored for his volunteer home building construction work with the South Brevard Habitat Humanity program in Melbourne, Florida.

Marchese, a former South Quincy resident, was recognized as the Habitat program's Very Important Volunteer for March.

His volunteering for Habitat began for Marchese when a friend in Florida, Jean Huntress, told him he should do something during his spare time.

Marchese got in touch with Arden Johnson, the Habitat construction coordinator, and has been giving his time and talents for the past two years.

When asked why he volunteers, Marchese replied, "It is just one of those things you do. You give back some of what you have received."

His 45 years of construction experience in the Quincy-South Shore area brings to Habitat the necessary skills essential to the construction of homes for poor and low income families.

The Habitat honor concluded with the statement, "Joe, we appreciate you and thanks for supporting Habitat and its ministry to God's people in need."

Marchese has retired from construction work in the Quincy area and has been making a permanent home with his wife Mary in Florida.

A CHECK OF THE PCV SYSTEM

Since the 1960's, car manufacturers have outfitted car engines with positive crankcase ventilation (PCV) systems. These devices recycle exhaust gases that seep out of their combustion chambers to collect in the crankcase, where the oil is held. PCV systems send the escaped gases back into the engine cylinder chambers to be reburned and redirected through the exhaust systems. Otherwise, the errant gases would contribute to higher crankcase pressure which reduces power, increases carbon monoxide emissions, and causes rapid engine wear. These same symptoms may also result from a clogged PCV. To guard against this happening, manufacturers recommend that PCV's be replaced at regular intervals.

Better yet, they should be checked at every oil change.

HINT: A clogged PCV can lead to oil leaks into the engine or sludge buildup in the engine, both of which forecast engine failure.

Complaints Heard On Garage Operation

By BILL DONCASTER
A hearing of complaints of Speedee Oil Change and Tune-up, at 366 Center St., took place at the Quincy Board of License Commissioners Tuesday, Ward 4 Councillor

Thomas Fabrizio said he had heard complaints from neighbors regarding: selling cars on the lot, which is not part of their permit; hours of operation; test driving vehicles for repair on Columbia St.; and doing repairs outside of the repair bays.

J. Fruzzetti said the sale of cars was one employee parking his own personal car on the lot with a "for sale" sign in the window.

Board member Matthias Mulvey said that was still in violation. Mulvey said, "Let him sell it in front of his own house." According to Mulvey, any outside repair was against a city ordinance.

He also suggested they test cars up the highway, just going one exit, instead of driving on Columbia Rd.

As to the hours of operation, Mulvey said the hours agreed to on the original license will be found in the minutes of the meeting when it was issued, and forwarded to Speedee Oil Change and Tune-up.

Mosquito Spraying To Start June 1

The Norfolk County Mosquito Control Division announces spraying for mosquito control will begin Tuesday, June 1.

The pesticide resmethrin will be sprayed over marsh land twice a week between 3 and 6 a.m. starting in the peninsula area of Houghs Neck, Germantown, Adams Shore and Merrymount.

Resmethrin is used due to its compatibility with the environment, low toxicity to mammals, low irritation levels, and the fact that it does not harm other wildlife.

Ward 1 Peter Kolson said the spraying could not start earlier because the early morning temperatures have not been warm enough. He said residents should be patient since the mosquito control division has limited resources and manpower.

He noted the division is responsible for spraying 350 square miles in 24 towns, a total of 80,000 acres of marsh land.

"They have six people to do all of that."

"Their budget has experienced cutbacks over the years and this year they were level funded.

They have 12 trucks but can only man three of them," Kolson said.

The councillor, who has received complaints about annoying mosquitos from constituents, said the control division and its director, John Smith, have "always treated Quincy well."

However more state funding would help the situation. "It would help if the state could contribute more, even a small amount to get another truck up and running," Kolson told the Sun Tuesday.

Officials Eye 60,000 Tourists This Season Adams Historic Site Visitation Up 25.6%

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Adams National Historic Site welcomed 25.6 percent more visitors during the start of this tourist season compared to the same period last year, according to the site's chief of interpretation and visitor services.

Through the end of April, 4,005 individuals had visited the Adams Site, which opened April 18, and includes the Adams Birthplaces at 133-141 Franklin St., the Adams Mansion or "Old House" at 135 Adams St., United First Parish "Church of the Presidents" at 1306 Hancock St. and the new National Park Services Visitors Center at Presidents Place, said Caroline Keinath.

Figures for the month of May were not available before the Sun went to press Tuesday.

The site was visited by 2,798 tourists in April 1992, according to Keinath.

"We're very excited about the numbers, and even more so about the kind of services we're offering," said Keinath. "The quality of the (tourists') experience is our number one priority."

Keinath attributed the increase in numbers mainly to the grand opening of the Visitors Center, which coincided with the opening of the other Adams Site locations, as well as both local and national media coverage.

She added that the initial influx of tourists may also indicate that the Adams Site could achieve its projected goal of 60,000 visitors this year, an increase of 20,000 over last year.

"The Visitors Center has helped us organize and do tours in a more effective way," she said. "It helps us have a more effective tour and keeps numbers in one tour to a reasonable limit."

"The Visitors Center can also let people know what's going on as far as times of tours, and about the Josiah Quincy House, Dorothy Quincy House and other sites in Quincy that aren't part of the Adams Site. It would probably take an entire day to tour all of the sites in Quincy. "We look at it as working in partnership with the community."

The opening of the Visitors Center was made possible by $925,000 in federal budget increases and project funding. An article on the center appeared in a recent article of Newsweek magazine, according to Keinath, and the site received 100 letters in one day asking for information about the center.

"We usually receive four or five (letters in one day)," said Keinath, who attributed the increase to the Newsweek article. She noted that those affiliated with the site "feel pretty honored" to receive such national exposure.

Keinath added that the (Cont'd On Page 16) of Public Health's Immunization Program, Susan M. Lett, MD, MPH, has forwarded a "Public Health Alert" regarding a recent outbreak of polio in an unvaccinated community in the Netherlands.

The virus was found in 68 unvaccinated Canadians who visited this community. No cases of polio have been reported yet from the Canadian Community itself, however the polio virus can circulate in an unvaccinated population for several months before the paralytic disease is seen.

Unvaccinated persons having contact with individuals are at significant risk of contracting the disease and spreading it to other unvaccinated persons.

Charles McIntyre Announces Candidacy For Council At-Large

Charles R. McIntyre, 25, son of the late Mayor-Senator James R. McIntyre has entered the political field as a candidate for City Council At-Large.

McIntyre, a third-year law student at Suffolk University, and his wife, Sheila, live at 75 Palmer St.

McIntyre, who had been considering running for the City Council—the same office in which his father began his political career—said the encouragement of many people was the deciding factor in his decision to become an official candidate.

In his announcement, McIntyre said:

"With an ear to the past...and an eye to the future, I announce my candidacy for the office of Councilor-at-Large for the City of Quincy.

"As a youth growing up in the city I learned the value of working hard for the fulfillment of the American dream from my parents James and Sheila McIntyre. Through their efforts, I was instilled with the idea that honest, hard-working people could make a better life for themselves and their children.

"In the past weeks I have talked with hundreds of citizens of the city, trying to discern their thoughts of present-day Quincy. In essence their thoughts boil down to a simple question: Why are we paying so much more, and receiving so much less?

"It was from the encouragement of many of these people that I have decided to announce my candidacy. There are never any easy answers, since the questions themselves are often complex. But with you, we shall attempt to tackle the problems that face all of us.

"My candidacy is, in essence, a way of giving back to the citizens of Quincy for all the kindness and support that my family and I have received throughout the years. I wish to thank you for that support, and pray that if elected I can, in some small way, do the same for you. Thomas Jefferson wrote that when a man endeavors to hold the public trust, he should consider himself public property. I vow never to lose sight of that ideal."

Seven employees of the Quincy Housing Authority will receive early retirement benefits as the result of a new state law.

The seven retirees are:
•John J. Cattaneo, assistant director.
•Leo Kelly and Si Tutunjian, project managers.

•Henry J. Pagnano, storekeeper.

•Butch Inman, Joe Lamantia and Sonny Nicastro, laborers.

Comer said the QHA is planning a "nautical sendoff" for the seven by holding a celebration Friday, June 18 from 7 p.m. to midnight at the Quincy Yacht Club, Houghs Neck.

Squantum Taxi Firm Moving

Marina Bay Taxi will be moving from 260 Victory Rd., Marina Bay, to 86 Summer St., Quincy Point.

The Quincy License Board approved them a change of location of their Hackney and Gasoline Repair License Tuesday.

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro approved of the move, saying that he was glad something was going into that address, which had been an eyesore.

He also said that a business there might keep kids from hopping the fence to the back of a synagogue, "I get calls about that every Friday and Saturday night."

But he cautioned Michael Condon, of Marina Bay Taxi, "Keep it clean, I don't want to see all sorts of junk laying around," DeCristofaro said. "And be careful on those sidestreets. Tell your drivers there are a lot of kids on those streets. You know I'll be down to see you if you don't."

"Other than that I support this action," he said.

by Michael M. Bakerman, M.D., F.A.C.C.

YEAST INFECTIONS AND HIV AWARENESS

Nowhere has the difference between the medical needs of men and women been brought into sharper focus than in the struggle with HIV, the virus that causes AIDS. For one thing, doctors have discovered that recurrent vaginal yeast infections are frequently among the earliest signs of HIV in women. By far the majority of yeast infections are NOT caused by HIV, but individual women should still be aware that vaginal yeast infections that occur more frequently than usual or that don't respond well to proper treatment may be a sign of more serious medical conditions, including HIV infection. While there is yet no cure for AIDS, early diagnosis of HIV can prolong and improve the quality of life. P.S. Pregnancy, oral contraceptives, antibiotics and hormonal changes are all common causes of women's yeast infections.

You can help ward off yeast infections by wearing cotton underwear and looser fitting clothing. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can prevent heart disease, call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. We are dedicated to the compassionate and caring practice of medicine. When treating patients, I always try to consider how I would like myself, my wife and children, or my parents to be treated by a doctor. Office hours are by appointment at 101 Adams St., Suite 24, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Election '93 Warming Up

What started out as a big yawn election year is now beginning to awaken some interest.

There are already nine known challengers for three School Committee seats.

The politically magic McIntyre name will be back on the ballot for the first time in 22 years. And, assures a City Council at-large race.

There is a mayoral contest—not what you would call a red-hot one—but a contest when it looked like there wouldn't be one for the second straight city election.

And, an 18-year old is challenging the incumbent in Ward 4.

Charles McIntyre, son of the late Mayor-Senator James McIntyre has officially announced his candidacy for City Council at-large.

At 25, he will be making his political debut at the very same age his father did in 1955 when he ran for council at-large and won the third spot in the company of powerhouses Amelio Della Chiesa and Thomas Burgin. (That year nine councillors at-large were elected.)

Reports here and elsewhere that McIntyre might run, triggered a lot of positive reaction for his candidacy.

"It has been overwhelming," says McIntyre. "Even people I don't know have been stopping me on the street saying they hope I run. It certainly has been encouraging."

McIntyre says he is prepared to conduct a 12-hour a day campaign this summer. He has one year left in law school. His father who was also an attorney ran for the council while he was still in law school.

Incumbents Tim Cahill and Michael Cheney will seek re-election. Joseph LaRaia, who was named to fill the unexpired term of Patricia Toland after she resigned to become assistant city clerk earlier this year, says he will run also.

McIntyre stresses he is not specifically running against LaRaia, a long-time political rival of his father. "I am going to be running for one of the three seats," he says

Meanwhile the question being asked is how serious is political newcomer Martin Ervin who is challenging Mayor James Sheets.

"I'm serious," he says. "I'm very serious."

Trying to move Sheets out of the mayor's office will be like trying to nudge the Rock of Gibraltar. His job performance and popularity discouraged any major opponent from stepping into the lion's den to challenge him for a third term this year.

THE NINE CHALLENGERS for three School Committee seats this year are:

Sean Barry, acting manager of public affairs at Quincy College who ran two years ago; JoAnn Bragg, president of the Citywide Parents Council who ran in 1991; Wendell Caley, Jr., scientist; Christine Cedrone, who is graduating from Suffolk University this year; Gregory Hanley, former owner of a downtown ice cream parlor; Shareda Hosein, a sales representative and active in the Islamic community; Toni Kabilian, involved in school organizations and a former candidate; Ron McCarthy, Middleboro school teacher and John Spada, accounting manager for an investment firm.

All have nomination papers out and if six of them file it will assure a preliminary election runoff.

Incumbent Ron Mariano is a definite candidate for re-election.

Incumbent Frank Santoro is not expected to seek re-election, creating one open seat. Margaret (Peggy) King has nomination papers out but may not file them.

"I'm still undecided," she says.

At the present time there is only one ward council contest with incumbent Tom Fabrizio being challenged by Michael D'Amico.

MILESTONE: Mary and Tom Collins have joined the grandparents ranks. Daughter Caroline and her husband Bill McBirney are parents of their first child, a daughter, Montana Ashley, born last week at Brigham and Women's Hospital. She debuted at nine pounds, five ounces.

Mary, former School Committee woman and Norfolk County Commissioner, and Tom are thrilled. She looks pretty good for a grandmother, Tom.

Another big event is coming up for the Collins family. Daughter, Christine, and Joseph Kane will wed July 4th. His father, Charles, is the former owner of Kane's on Des Moines Rd.

And, could there be another announcement—along political lines—a little later?

THREE POLITICAL FUNDRAISERS are coming up.

A cocktail reception for Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers is on tap for Thursday, June 10, 7 to 9 p.m. at Raffael's, Enterprise Drive, North Quincy. Tickets are $15 per person and $25 per couple.

An outdoor barbecue for Ron McCarthy, School Committee candidate, is set for Saturday, June 12, 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. at the Merrymount Association Beach. Tickets are $10 per person and $20 per family.

A dinner-dance for John Spada, a candidate for School Committee, will be held Friday, June 18 at 7 p.m. at the Quincy Sons of Italy Social Center. Tickets are $20 per person.

WORTHY CAUSE DEPT: As part of the Quincy Lions Club on-going program to provide "New Eyes For The Needy," Dr. James Will, dentist and member, is accepting donations of used eye glasses at his office, 36 Adams St., Quincy.

The glasses are recycled and distributed to the underprivileged of Third World countries.

If you have any old glasses, he and the Lions Club would appreciate receiving them.

GOOD FRIEND Ray McEachern, Patriot Ledger reporter, is a mighty proud uncle these days.

His niece, Tricia Ann-Regan McEachern was recently crowned Miss New Hampshire and will appear in the Miss America Pageant this fall.

Tricia who is 20 is not only pretty but talented too. She wowed the crowd with an operatic selection "Back to Sorrento." Her goal is to sing with the Metropolitan Opera.

"And I think she will," says proud Uncle Ray.

Part Of Naval Shipbuilding Museum

Quincy Will Be Home To Largest Private Military Collection

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Besides being the birthplace of the only father-son presidents, Quincy will soon have the distinction as the home of the most extensive private collection of U.S. military artifacts, documents and records in the country.

The United States Naval and Shipbuilding Museum, which will be the final port for several naval ships, will also be the permanent home of the Massachusetts Military Division, Research, and Museum, now housed in Natick. The research center, with thousands of artifacts from the Revolutionary War to the present, is the second largest military archives in the United States. Only the federal government's National Military Archives in Washington is larger.

Together, the United States Naval Shipbuilding Museum and Massachusetts Military Research Center will be second to none, certainly in terms of diversity, scholarship and research material.

"No other state has a collection this large and extensive. They may have more weaponry, but they don't have the documents," said James Fahey, archivist for the research center.

The Natick collection has four tons of historical documents; 200,000 paintings, lithographs, and photographs; hundreds of antique flags, uniforms and firearms; and thousands of miscellaneous military artifacts dating from the early Massachusetts Militia period (1776 to 1820) to recent engagements like the Persian Gulf War.

The collection also includes weapons, tanks, armored personnel carriers, howitzers, cannons and a variety of small arms, swords and bayonets. One of the oldest artifacts is a war document signed by John Hancock when he was governor of Massachusetts in 1787. Among the newest items is a captured Iraqi armored vehicle from the Persian Gulf War and two U.S. tanks.

Fahey, the center's archivist since October, 1980, estimates the artifacts are worth "$50 million to $60 million at least."

Moving the center from a warehouse in Natick to a new location at the Fore River shipyard will be beneficial not only for citizens and historians but also for the collection itself, museum officials say.

"This will give more

The museum will move from Natick and become part of the United States Naval and Shipbuilding Museum in Quincy. Kinsley was 19 years old when he enlisted in the Militia in September, 1862. He completed his service in July, 1863.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

"I hope you people realize there are no places like this in New England—not anymore. You've got something special here."
— Blues great James Montgomery, July 1992

By BILL DONCASTER
The Yard Rock Blues Club will feature Big Band live jazz this summer, every Monday night starting June 7, and owner Joe Hajjar is hoping it will attract more people from Quincy.

"We get people from all over," said Hajjar, "but sometimes I think we're overlooked by people in Quincy." According to Hajjar, The Yard Rock, the music portion of Joe's Pub at 132E. Howard St., Quincy Point, has been recognized quite a bit outside of Quincy. The Boston Phoenix said it "may be the best Roadhouse in the world." Blues legend James Montgomery said it was the last of its kind in New England. It's in the running for four "Best of Boston" awards from Boston Magazine including: best blues club, best neighborhood bar, best small venue, and best suburban club.

This summer Frank Shooshan's band will be filling the Monday night spot. Band leader Shooshan played with some of the big bands of the 40's and 50's like Tony Pasta, Tony Reynolds and Sam Donahue. His 15 to 17 piece band includes members of the Boston Pops and Berkeley College of Music professors, all handpicked by Shooshan, Hajjar said.

"It will be more of a cabaret setting," Hajjar said. "It's more of a listening audience, a concert atmosphere rather than dancing." But, he said, if there's a demand for dancing, he'll move some chairs out of the way.

There will be a $3 cover charge.

According to Hajjar, the Yard Rock Blues Club is building a reputation among performers, making it easier to get them to play there. "They actually want to play here," he said. "They charge us less, and we try to keep the cover charge in keeping with the economy."

Some of the blues acts featured this summer are national acts like Luther "Guitar" Johnson Jr., Darrell Nulisch, who fronted the Ronnie Earl Band, and his band Texas Heat and Ronnie Earl.

"I grew up in Quincy, I still live here, my kids went to Quincy High," Hajjar said. "I'm a Quincy guy, and I'm hoping more people from Quincy check the place out."

"We're across the street from Quincy Shipyards," he said, "and I think a lot of people pass us by because the neighborhood doesn't look like much. But it's a good neighborhood, and people are coming in from as far away as New Hampshire on a regular basis."

Hajjar said he hopes the Monday night Big Band will attract an older, more established clientele.

Impact Quincy To Celebrate First Anniversary

A special "annual meeting" of Impact Quincy Wednesday, June 9 will mark the one-year anniversary of the Quincy Coalition for the Prevention of Alcohol, Tobacco & Other Drug Problems.

The meeting will be held at The Neighborhood Club, 27 Glendale Rd., Quincy Center, beginning at 7 p.m. Refreshments will be served. The public is invited, but persons wishing to attend are asked to call the IQ office at 472-6027 by June 7.

"The June meeting of the coalition marks a special anniversary for us," said Janet Powell, co-chair of Impact Quincy. "One year ago the community took responsibility for this project with the election of our first Leadership Team, and the selection of our full-time staff. On June 9 we'll report to the community on some of the efforts we've made this year, as well as thank some of the people who have been important to our growth."

The June 9 meeting will feature reports from coalition members and staff on such efforts as a recently completed Violence Prevention

Training for high school-age youth, Active Parenting education and support groups that have been sponsored throughout the city, and awareness events addressing special populations.

The election of two new members of the Leadership Team by registered Coalition members will also take place at the meeting. The Leadership Team serves as the steering committee for the coalition, planning and monitoring the completion of the goals of the project.

Outgoing members of the Leadership Team will also be recognized for their efforts this past year.

Also to be honored are the original 15 community members who worked for over a year developing the idea for Impact Quincy, and the grant from the U.S. Center for Substance Abuse Prevention that supports the coalition.

"It is important to recognize these community members," said Mitch Finnegan, IQ Project Director. "Their vision and perseverance led to the creation of Impact Quincy, and our community is better able to address these important needs because of them."

Quincy Will Be Home To Largest Private Military Collection

do the same. "But we want to take it one step forward. Quincy is unique. This city has built aircraft carriers, destroyers, submarines, battleships, and LSTs. We intend to tell the story of Quincy's military history in relation to its people, the men and women who built the ships and fought the battles, and in some cases died.

"This will be the largest museum of its kind in the country in terms of artifacts and research material and documents. It will be largest in terms of scholarship. It will be an educational institute," he added.

In Quincy, the collection will be worked into exhibits on the second floor of the main building. Each exhibit will have a particular theme and explain a facet of military past told from a human perspective.

"It won't be a collection but rather a series of exhibits which will tell a story. These things will tell a story and you will learn something from each artifact," MacMullen said.

"It's how you tell the story and use of these artifacts is the best way of telling the story of people who served in the armed services and people who stayed home," MacMullen said, adding exhibits will be changed about four times a year.

The artifacts will also help re-enact military periods of yesteryear.

A working trench system will be recreated inside the museum, "right down to the smell," MacMullen said. The research center has one of the largest collections of World War I artifacts and visitors will be able to walk through the trench which will be wired for sound.

"You'll be able to hear bullets whizzing by," MacMullen said.

Fahey also plans to build a ballistics range inside the research center building that complies with federal and state requirements so reenactment groups who drill on the USNSM grounds can test fire their period weapons.

It was a simple phone call which led to the museum-research center marriage.

Fahey, a Braintree resident, called MacMullen one day last year when the museum office was in Scituate. He was interested in locating some artifacts in the naval museum because of a space problem.

"At first we thought there would be just naval artifacts," MacMullen explained.

At about the same time, Mayor James Sheets got a call from a Dedham resident who wanted to know if the museum could take the entire collection. The interested party, understanding the space problems in Natick, didn't want the collection to move out of Norfolk County.

The state, which owns the collection, was looking to relocate the center to Worcester. The potential site had little parking and was near a high crime area. "They (the state) feared the collection would become another vault of military history of the Commonwealth—with no visitors," MacMullen said.

The mayor mentioned the Dedham phone call to MacMullen who had already spoken with Fahey. MacMullen and Kathy Devine, the museum's financial consultant, decided to visit the Natick center.

"After we saw how large it was, we decided to try to incorporate it into the whole museum." On their next trip, MacMullen brought Sheets.

"He (Sheets) saw the Civil War artifacts and became fascinated with it," the director said.

MacMullen arranged to meet with Major General Wayne F. Wagner, the adjutant general of Massachusetts, and his attorneys about moving the collection to Quincy. "We came to the understanding that the collection would best be served by moving it to Quincy," the director said.

Fahey thanked Gen. Wagner and his staff for supporting the facility over the years and agreeing to allow the collection to move to Quincy. The state will retain ownership of the collection but once relocated, it will fall under the stewardship of the Quincy museum.

The research center will add a unique dimension to the museum which will be dedicated to the preservation of the country's long and rich naval and shipbuilding history.

Located at the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point, the naval museum will feature several ships, including the U.S.S. Salem, the last of the heavy gun cruisers built in Quincy. Museum officials are trying to secure other ships, such as a destroyer and submarine, and other vessels which have a meaningful past.

For instance, MacMullen said the museum is hoping to work out a deal with the MDC, the owner of the tugboat Luna. The 63-year-old Luna, the first diesel electric tugboat ever, helped pull the Salem out of the Fore River shipyard in the early 1940s. The wooden tugboat, now berthed in East Boston, is the last of its kind, MacMullen said.

The museum will also feature dozens of big guns, such as the world's only 24-inch gun. The gun, designed to have a range up to 32 miles, was only a prototype and never utilized because World War II ended.

MacMullen is trying to secure other artifacts for the museum, including an F-4 Wildcat fighter, (the kind that flew off the first U.S.S. Lexington in World War II); a TBF Avenger (what former President George Bush flew in WWII); and an SBD Dauntless Divebomber, (instrumental in the Allied victory in the Battle of Coral Sea.)

"World War II airplanes are very hard to come by," MacMullen said. "The fact that this museum can capture those artifacts is quite a feather in our cap."

The private, non-profit museum corporation was created by an act of the Massachusetts Legislature in January. The corporation has the authority to float up to $10 million in bonds. The corporation will float $5 million to create the museum, including site work, and float another $5 million to keep in reserve.

Under the museum's charter, no municipal money is involved. Bonds will be repaid by revenue generated by admission and other fees. Museum officials also are applying for grants and have begun a fundraising drive to help get the museum underway.

To make a donation to the museum, call 479-7900 or visit the museum's office at Presidents Place, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

A JAPANESE spy camera and dog tag utilized during World War II are two of the rare artifacts which are now part of the Massachusetts Division History Research and Museum. The museum will become part of the United States Naval and Shipbuilding Museum in Quincy.

Adams Historic Site Visitation Up 25.6%

local media coverage of The Quincy Sun, The Patriot Ledger, WJDA and Continental Cablevision has also "helped significantly" the cause of the Visitors Center, saying that "there's a lot of curious people out there."

A new trolley service which is expected to transport tourists throughout Quincy and to its historical sites should also help the number of visitors increase, she said. Keinath noted that those at the Adams Site are hoping the trolleys could be operating in the city by June 15, but added that "five or six" companies are interested in the trolley contract, which "should be going out for bid today (Tuesday)."

Mayor James Sheets had said the National Park Service Visitors Center will be vital in making "tourism a larger slice of Quincy's economic pie."

Representatives from at least two nearby businesses said Tuesday the center's presence is good for the area.

Jeff Dennis, a clerk at the Tedeschi's Food Shop at Presidents Place, said business has "definitely" increased since the opening of the center.

"I can't give you percentages, but it has definitely increased," said Dennis. "We're selling a lot more coffee, we have more people coming in on Saturdays and Sundays and we're hoping for more in the future."

Tom McFarland, co-owner of Barry's In The Square at 1237 Hancock St., said while "it's too early to tell" how his business will be affected, he has noticed employees of the center frequenting his restaurant.

"It's nice to see new faces, and volume usually follows," said McFarland. "I think it's (the center) definitely a positive."

Neighborhood Meeting On Stop And Shop June 10

A neighborhood meeting regarding Stop and Shop's proposal to build a larger store on property now owned by Pneumatic Scale at Holbrook Rd. and Hancock St. will be held Thursday, June 10 at 7:30 p.m. at Sacred Heart School, North Quincy.

According to Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien, Stop and Shop will present plans to the neighborhood and residents will be given a chance to ask questions and to make comments. "Stop and Shop has not formally applied to the city for permission to build at the Pneumatic Scale site. When they do, "Chretien said, "the City Council will determine if, and under what conditions, the project will be approved."

In a letter to constituents, Chretien said he wants to know how residents feel about this project. While there may be benefits of a new supermarket for the city, such as real estate taxes and local jobs, he said there are major questions which need to be addressed.

For example, is the Pneumatic Scale site appropriate for a large supermarket, and possibly other retail stores? Other issues include traffic impact, the future of Pneumatic Scale and what would happen to the building now containing Stop and Shop on Newport Ave.?

A neighborhood advisory committee to study the project will be formed. Residents interested in serving can call Chretien at 472-1400.

Studds Visits Two Manufacturing Plants

In an effort to promote economic development on the South Shore, Congressman Gerry Studds toured two manufacturing plants in Quincy Wednesday, including one with an innovative worker training program.

Studds first visited Pneumatic Scale Co., which employs 300 people to make packaging machines at its plant at 65 Newport Ave.

Studds then toured the Proctor and Gamble Manufacturing Co., which sponsors a model employee training program in conjunction with South Shore Regional Vocational Technical High School in Hanover. Some workers at the plant spend a few hours each week at South Shore Vo-Tech, where they receive advance training. Company and school officials would like to expand the program to other companies in the area. Studds said similar programs could be run all over the nation.

In the afternoon, Studds met with Mayor James Sheets to discuss the future of the Fore River Shipyard. Two weeks ago, the Congressman introduced legislation to revive the shipbuilding industry nationally, and he has been working with companies to encourage investment at Fore Rivers.

Morrisette Opens Zone Title Defense June 9

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Morrisette legion baseball team, which last year won the state championship and went to the semifinals of the Northeastern Regionals before being eliminated by the eventual champions, East Hartford, CT., in a 4-3 squeaker, will open its 49th season and defense of its Zone 6 title Wednesday June 9 at 6 p.m. at Milton.

This game will follow non-zone games against Fall River at home this Friday and at Kingston Sunday.

Dave Perdios is back for his seventh year as coach and has 12 returnees from last year's state champions. He has six newcomers up from the Babe Ruth League.

Perdios has some big shoes to fill as he lost his big three of Tom Balzano, Mark Kelleher and Chris MacDonald, who supplied most of the power a year ago.

"We have added some speed and hope we can take advantage of it," said Perdios. "Our defense should be better but it still needs a lot of work. Last year we made numerous errors early in the season."

Perdios feels the zone is stronger this year with some of the weaker teams of 1992 having much more experience. He looks for Quincy and Holbrook to be stronger along with Braintree and Weymouth. Wollaston could be a dark horse with its excellent pitching.

There are 10 teams in the zone with the addition of West Roxbury, which joins Morrisette, Quincy, Wollaston, Braintree, Weymouth, Milton, Canton, Randolph and Holbrook.

In addition to 18 games in the zone, Morrisette has eight attractive outside games. It will travel to the Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, N.Y., and play Whites Town, N.Y., on June 27.

Also on the schedule are a touring New York all-star team, Bristol, R.I., Florida, Waltham and East Hartford.

Morrisette has a strong pitching staff with North Quincy's Mike Patch (9-0 with two saves) and Sean Donovan (8-2) heading the staff. Also back is Matt O'Toole, a member of this year's Massasoit Community College national Div. 2 Jr. College champions (5-1 last year) and Tom Malvesti of Quincy High, the starting shortstop who was 5-0 pitching, all in relief. Dan Duncan's only three starts were in the post season. The team won all three games and he had one win.

Others who could see action are starting outfielders Dave Reinhart and Mark Cahill, A.J. Cantlas of North Quincy, Pat Bryan of B.C. High and Chris Cotter of Quincy.

Serge Belcastro is back catching. He played for Assumption College this spring and will be backed up by newcomers Sean Dolbeare of North Quincy and Andy Joyce of B.C. High.

Jay Schnabel of B.C. High, used primarily as a pitch hitter last year, will be at first base. He has good power and speed.

Robbie Kane of Quincy, one of the better second basemen in Zone 6, is back as is third baseman Pat Shea of North Quincy. They are two-year starters.

Malvesti is back at shortstop and Adam Calvert will see more action as a utility infielder and will replace Malvesti if he is called upon to pitch.

Joining Reinhart and Cahill in the outfield will be Duncan and Newcomer Jim Sapientza of North Quincy.

Returning is pitching coach Rom Malvesti, who did an outstanding job with the staff last year. He lost his number one starter, Pat Clifford, who was unbeaten with Abp. Williams' state champions, to an early season injury and took a young and inexperienced staff and moulded it into one of the best in the state.

Also back are manager and former long time coach Ray Cattaneo, athletic officer Frank Osborne who, with his wife, Eleanor has again put together an ad book to help fund the program; scorer and statistician Richard "Berger" Ryan and Chris Dolan, who charts the pitchers.

Quincy, North Wind Up Losing Seasons

The Quincy and North Quincy baseball teams completed frustrating seasons last week, the Presidents finishing with an 8-11 record and the Raiders with an 8-10 mark.

Quincy, which faltered after a promising start this spring, finished on a winning note as it defeated Silver Lake, 7-1, in its finale.

Steve Miller pitched three hit ball over five innings for the win as the Presidents scored early and never looked back. Chris Cotter pitched the sixth and Robbie Kane, one of the best second basemen in the Old Colony League, made his pitching debut in the seventh and retired the Lakers in order.

"Robbie has been asking for a chance to pitch and, with this being his final high school game, I thought I'd give him the chance," said coach Bob Sylvia. "And he did all right."

Miller also led the attack with three hits and three runs betted in, while

Duane Holmes, one of the leading batters in the league, had a double and single and two RBI.

Earlier in the week Quincy lost to Billerica, 6-5, in a game in which the Presidents had many chances to win.

Tommy Malvesti pitched a complete game and deserved to win. The Presidents led on two occasions but several key errors enabled Billerica to pull out the win.

"We had a lot of opportunities but couldn't take advantage of them," said Sylvia. "Tommy pitched an excellent game but lost it due to unearned runs."

"We received some good pitching this year and some good hitting, but we just couldn't put them both together. It was disappointing to have a losing record after such a fine start."

Holmes, Miller and Malvesti led the offensive against Billerica.

North Quincy's season ended with a 2-1 loss to Bridgewater-Raynham and the way the Raiders lost was typical of their season, outstanding pitching but no hitting.

North was held to one hit by Charlie Rozanitis by B-R's Brian Rivers, who finished with a 7-0 record.

Sean Donovan, who finished with a deceiving 3-5 record, lost his fourth heartbreaker, allowing B-R only four hits.

Donovan lost two three hitters and two four hitters and had an impressive 1.49 ERA, one of the lowest in the OCL.

Mike Patch, North's other standout hurler, finished the season with a fine 2.00 ERA.

Both should have outstanding seasons this summer for Morrisette Legion's defending state champions. Last year Patch was 9-0 and Donovan 8-2 for Morrisette.

"I guess this was a fitting end to our season," said North coach Leo Donovan. "We had a great pitching end to our season from Mike and Sean but we just couldn't hit for them."

Junior League

Rotary Runs Streak To Six

Rotary rolled over Colonial Federal, 18-8, for its sixth straight victory in the Quincy Junior Baseball League.

Hitting stars for the Rotary were Kevin Shaw, who went 5-for-5 including his third home run and a double; Kevin Tupe, 4-for-5 with a homer and two doubles; Nick Cyr, 3-for-5 with a double; Adam Goodrich, 3-for-5 with a double; Frank Currier, 2-for-3 with his first triple; Billy Connolly, two doubles; T.J. Wilson, two singles; and Paul Wise, a single. Tupe and Goodrich shared the pitching.

For Colonial Federal Tommy Daley had two doubles, Randy Feetham went 3-for-5 with a double and home run; Michael Shaw doubled, Paul Markarian had a double and single and Matt Lebo had two doubles and a single.

The pitching of Kevin Walsh and Mike Powers led Continental Cable over South Shore Buick, 7-2.

Each pitched three innings with Powers getting the win. Mike Welch and Mark Donn keyed the offense with two hits each, while Ryan Hutchings played strong defense.

Cable dropped an error filled 7-6 decision to the VFW, which pulled out the win in the last inning, parlaying three walks and two errors into three runs.

Andy Nestor scored three runs for VFW and Steve Rochon and Mike Glynn had hits. Joe Tower pitched a complete game, yielding 11 hits and striking out seven.

Chad Fitzpatrick paced Cable with three hits, including a triple, and Powers had three hits, including a triple.

The Elks out-slugged the Police, 13-11, with Ryan Piccinin the winning pitcher and Matt McAnn the loser.

The Elks rallied after falling behind, 6-1, after two innings. Danny Nichols went 3-for-4, drove in two runs and scored three; Shaun Lynch had two hits and scored twice and David Riley and Billy Miller had long triples.

The Police scored three runs in the sixth to move to within two runs and had the tying runs on when the game ended.

BEFORE GOING ON VACATION

Before drivers set out with their families on their annual car vacations, it is strongly recommended that the family car be professionally serviced. It is always better to have preventive maintenance performed by an auto technician who has earned your trust than to have a mechanical crisis handled on the highway by the first available tow-truck operator. If it is not yet time for a major service, at least bring the car in to have the brakes, tires, radiator, fluids, hoses, and other components and systems checked. Take another look at the spare tire to see that it is fully inflated and in good condition. Use the opportunity of a vacation to finally invest in a highway emergency kit. All these steps should afford peace of mind at a time when it is most needed.

HINT: Never read a map while driving. Familiarize yourself with the route before heading out and pull off the road to double-check while en route.

We know how important your vacation is to you and that you would like to take whatever precautions are necessary to prevent a breakdown during it. Make an appointment today at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. Here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550) our skilled technicians will treat your car as if it were their own and they were going to take their own family on vacation in it. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Hours: Mon.-Fri. 8am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

"Charity begins at home" is a vastly misused, misunderstood slogan for the reason some people don't realize what charity really is. Charity is not merely giving goods or money to the needy. Such gifts, without love, are merely contributions, a self-levied donation. Charity is love. When you define charity as love, the "Charity begins at home" is an indisputable truism.

Love is silencing the tongue instead of throwing a temper tantrum. Love is being patient, even when another's tongue lashes out. Love is sealing the ear to rumors and scandals. Love is consideration of others; a "do as I say, not as I do."

When "Charity begins at home" is thought of in this way, the words of Samuel Johnson are especially meaningful - "It is a most mortifying reflection for a man to consider what he has done, compared to what he might have done." And he might very well have added, the place to start reflecting is right at home!

Council Cuts $310,000 From Mayor's Budget

With other departments still waiting to be reviewed, the City Council Finance Committee has cut approximately $310,000 from Mayor James Sheets' proposed FY94 $128,689,981 city budget.

The council, which has 40 days to act on the budget that Sheets submitted to the City Council May 3, plans to review the police and school budgets Wednesday, June 9 at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chamber at City Hall.

Although the public is invited to attend, residents will not be allowed to speak, as it is not a public hearing. The council held a public hearing last May 10.

The School Committee held a public hearing last night (Wednesday) at 6:30 p.m. in the City Council Chambers on its proposed FY94 $38.7 million budget, which is about $2 million more than its FY93 budget.

The new fiscal year begins July 1. Councillor Timothy Cahill, chairman of the Finance Committee, said two weeks ago he believes $500,000 can be cut from the mayor's proposed budget. The council cut only $86,516 from the budget Sheets proposed last year for FY93, according to City Auditor Robert Foy.

Departments that have received cuts in their FY94 budgets so far include the assessors and law departments and the department of public works.

The city's largest budgets include those for the fire, police and school departments. Sheets' proposed $9.8 million for the fire department budget, an increase of 1.5 percent over last year, was the most part left intact last week when it was reviewed by the Finance Committee.

Sheets' proposed FY94 budget exceeds FY93's $124,791,584 budget by 3 percent. It also includes a 2.5 percent increase in the city's property tax levy, the maximum allowed under state law, as well as 2 percent pay raises for most city employees. Quincy's school teachers are slated to get 4 percent raises.

The City Council has the authority to cut the mayor's budget, but not add to it. The mayor has no power to veto any cuts made by the council.

New Marina Bay Restaurant Granted License

By BILL DONCASTER

A new restaurant opening at Marina Bay was granted a liquor license Tuesday, but Councillor Bruce Ayers is hoping it doesn't turn out to be "another barroom."

Siro's is planning on opening in July, according to owner Kristine Henriksen. She said she plans to open a "fine dining establishment," and is aiming for a different type of clientele than the barroom crowd Ayers worries about.

After agreeing to a smaller bar size, Henriksen reduced it from 13 seats to nine, from 300 square feet to 126, Ayers took issue with the bar being open after the kitchen closes at 10:30 p.m.

"I see no need to serve after you stop serving food," Ayers said. "I would like to see it close when the kitchen closes."

Henrikson argued that she needs to serve until last call to remain competitive with other establishments on the boardwalk, and also to accommodate late diners.

According to License

Fri: baked lasagna with meat sauce, vegetable, fresh baked Italian roll, fruit juice, milk.

Board Chairman Joseph She, the board doesn't have the authority to restrict times on a liquor license anyway, unless on a voluntary agreement basis, as time restrictions are laid by the state.

Tues: Full day of school. American chop suey, corn, fresh baked Italian roll, jello, milk.

Wed: chicken fricassee, mashed potato, peas, cranberry sauce, fresh baked white roll, milk.

Work Begins On Quincy Center Watermain Project

The city of Quincy's contractor, J. D'Amico, Inc., began installing new watermain along Hancock St. between Saville St. and the intersection of Hancock and Adams Sts. Tuesday.

Normal work hours will be between 7 a.m. and 3 p.m. Monday through Friday. The project is expected to be completed in six to eight weeks.

According to DPW Commissioner David Colton, the $180,000 project calls for replacing 10-inch mains installed in 1883 with a 12-inch main. The work involves about a 1,000-foot stretch of roadway on the west side of Hancock Street, the scene of several water main breaks.

The project will also prepare the area for downtown refurbishing this summer, including landscaping, paving and installing antique-style street lamps.

To minimize the inconvenience to businesses, residents, abutters and the travelling public, the city has directed the contractor to take, as a minimum, the following steps:

•Alternate routes shall be designated, clearly marked with appropriate signage. During the construction period, the commuting public is encouraged to use the alternate routes.

•Traffic police details will be provided for the convenience and safety of the travelling public.

•Parking will be limited on either side of Hancock St., within the project limits, during the construction period.

•Three traffic lanes (two north and one south) will be maintained at all times during the work.

•Traffic and water services from the side streets will be interrupted for about three to four hours when the work at these intersections is being performed.

•Work at the intersection of Hancock St. and Adams St. may be performed during off-peak hours, if warranted.

For more information about the project, call Mike Linehan of J. D'Amico, Inc. at 961-3700 or Fred Mirza, city engineer at 376-1934.

Time To Plant The Plants

3-4 more weeks to get those annuals and perennials in the ground in order for them to do their best.

Things to be concerned about this month...

1. Fertilizing every 2-4 weeks depending on the type of fertilizer and plant variety.
2. Insects start to become a problem this month but watching for these pests and catching them early can save the plants and save you time.
3. Water...a thorough soaking once or twice a week is much better for the plants than a daily sprinkling; on the other hand, watering a plant the day after it dies won't help!
4. Extra produce from the vegetable garden makes a nice donation for food pantries or shelters.

Good luck with the mosquitoes

Nearly 200 Brave Rain For Violence Prevention Vigil

By BILL DONCASTER
Nearly 200 braved a rainy Saturday night for an hour long "Violence Prevention Vigil" at the United First Parish Church in Quincy Center.

The event was co-sponsored by the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office along with 75 area companies. It was made up of 20 short speeches, music and an outdoor candlelight vigil.

The purpose of the event, explained to Rev. Sheldon Bennett, minister of the United First Parish Church, was, "find ways to stop the scourge of violence," and concentrated on domestic, racial and criminal violence.

Media Coordinator for the event, Mary Moore, called the night a success, although she acknowledged the rain may have kept people away.

Joe Finn, of the Father Bill's Place homeless shelter in Quincy, said, "Many of us have become desensitized to issues of violence," but added that on such a night, "we gather to call forth that which is best in us."

Finn also spoke against less obvious forms of violence, including economic injustice, the lack of affordable housing, and the deinstitutionalizing of the mentally ill.

Mayor James Sheets said that such a vigil was admirable, but, "If we are to dispel the darkness, then government must end the double standard of condemning violence and then mainstreaming it through inaction and indifference."

Sheets called those in attendance, particularly the young, "role models." But, he added, "Our failed justice system allows violent people on to our streets and into our homes. Government too, must be a role model."

Fr. Richard DeVeer, pastor of St. Boniface Church in Germantown, relayed the story of two men he knew playing basketball against each other, "They had to win, they got into an argument, and they had to win that. The argument became a fight, and they had to win that too," DeVeer said.

Want Project Cut By $1 Billion And State To Bond Construction

Sheets, Mayors Want Harbor Cleanup Reduced

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Mayor James Sheets and a host of area mayors are developing a two-step strategy to stop spiraling water and sewer bills by reducing the scope of the Boston Harbor cleanup

On Tuesday, Sheets and eight other mayors in the MWRA district met in Boston to discuss ways of scaling back the $7 billion cleanup to help ease the burden of ratepayers who are primarily funding the massive project.

Sheets said the mayors came up with essentially two main proposals. The first seeks to cut the project by $1 billion while the other attempts to convince the state legislature and Gov. Weld to assume $3.5 billion in construction projects through state bonding.

Although potential savings were not discussed, Sheets said he and the other mayors believe the cleanup reduction plan would help hold the line on sewer and water bills. The bills are projected to rise above $1,200 for a typical family of four within the next four years.

To scale the cleanup back by $1 billion, leaders must persuade Federal District Court Judge David Mazzone who ordered the cleanup and has been overseeing the project since the mid-1980s.

Considering mounting public pressure for ratepayer relief, Sheets said he believes Mazzone may accept the plan.

"All of the participants at Tuesday's meeting would like the scope of the (cleanup) project reduced by $1 billion. I think that's doable. There have been some comments by Judge Mazzone which have encouraged us to go this way."

"I think the judge is concerned about the impact all of this has on the ratepayers. No one can predict how he'll respond but hopefully he will respond with action for some relief."

Mazzone has said he would be willing to allow a cutback in the cleanup operation as long as the harbor ultimately meets federal environmental standards.

The main scale-back targets appear to be the secondary treatment plants and the combined storm drainage overflow systems for Boston. By limiting the number of secondary treatment plants and the size of the drainage overflow project, Sheets said, "I think we could save close to $1 billion."

The group of mayors plans to meet again in about a week. They hope to appear before Judge Mazzone in U.S. District Court in Boston before the end of the summer.

While the $1 billion reduction may have a sound chance of becoming reality, the second part of the reduction strategy faces a stiffer challenge.

Under that plan, the mayors hope to pressure the state legislature and governor into funding $3.5 billion in cleanup-related construction costs by bonding the projects. State bonding the construction would help bring about rate control, Sheets said.

"We would try to get the legislature and the governor to bond the construction of the cleanup plants and let the ratepayers pick up the operation tab."

"The state could bond projects for up to 40 years or longer. It would become part of the state's debt service. It wouldn't be a separate line item in

Council Votes $100,000 For Point Improvements

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The lower Washington St. section of Quincy Point will receive nearly $100,000 for new sidewalks, trees, and other renovations as well as an additional weekend police officer.

The money was appropriated by the City Council at its Monday night meeting.

City Auditor Robert Foy explained that the funds were left in the city budget's reserve fund by the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority on July 1, 1992, the beginning of FY93.

The MWRA, which pays an annual fee to the city to compensate for the presence of its sludge processing plant at the Fore River Shipyard, put the funds in reserve "as estimated receipts," Foy said. The money had to be appropriated by the end of this fiscal year, he added.

The two separate appropriations of $98,258.56 for the renovations and $1,741.11 for what Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro described as "a beat man on Friday and Saturday nights" totalled $99,999.67.

DeCristofaro said the money would be good for the area.

"This is just a way of making things a little better down there," said DeCristofaro.

City Council President Charles Phelan agreed.

"I feel this money is certainly deserved," said Phelan. "The people of Quincy Point have certainly borne the brunt of (the impact of the shipyard)."

Parade, Fireworks To Mark Flag Day

Quincy will celebrate Flag Day June 14 with a parade at 7 p.m. followed by a World War II Victory Flag raising ceremony and fireworks display at Adams Field.

This year's observance promises to be one of the biggest celebrations ever, and could surpass last year's events which were watched by more than 50,000.

"This year's parade is shaping up to be larger than ever and we urge everyone to come and enjoy the festivities. There is something for everyone, young and old alike," said Event Chairperson Edward Keohane.

The Quincy Flag Day Parade, which honors United States veterans, the United States flag and youth groups, will step off at 7 p.m. at the intersection of Washington and Coddington Sts., and will proceed north to and on Hancock St. The parade route passes Veterans Memorial Stadium and ends at Adams Field, at the intersection of Hancock St. and Southern Artery.

Among the units highlighting the parade are the National Gettysburg Peace Flags, Waltham Post Band, Canton Legion Post Band, Boston Gaelic Fire Brigade, North

Quincy High School Band as well as floats, military vehicles including tanks, howitzers and weapons carriers, and a contingent from the United States Naval and Shipbuilding Museum.

The parade route will be lined by loaned United States veterans memorial flags. A memorial flag is given to the family of a veteran by the Veterans Administration to be displayed on the casket during the veteran's funeral.

At Adams Field, the World War II Victory Flag, which measures 45 feet by 90 feet and weighs approximately 300 pounds, will be raised. The flag was first unfurled at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii on the 50th anniversary of the bombing of Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7, 1991.

There will be a band concert by the Waltham Post Band and addresses by Parade Grand Marshal and former Red Sox radio announcer Ken Coleman, Adjutant General Wayne Wagner of the Massachusetts National Guard, Rear Admiral Joel Sipes of the United States Coast Guard and Mayor James Sheets.

Edward Keohane, event chairperson, will be master of ceremonies.

The evening will conclude with a fireworks display, orchestrated by Rockingham Fireworks Display Company of Seabrook, N.H. More than 1,000 shells will be projected skyward, starting at approximately 9 p.m.

Viewing will be best from the end of the parade route, at Adams and Pageant Fields, at 100 Southern Artery. The fireworks display will last approximately 15 to 20 minutes.

WJDA-AM, 1300, Quincy, will broadcast patriotic music in time music with the fireworks.

After the fireworks, people are asked to stay and help fold the World War II Victory Flag. An estimated 200 people will be needed to complete this task. All people are invited to attend the parade and ceremonies and to help celebrate Flag Day. Last year, more than 50,000 spectators were present.

The parade is sponsored by the Quincy Partnership, Inc., and the City of Quincy.

Council To Pass City Budget June 16

By MICHAEL WHALEN
The City Council will pass the city's FY94 budget June 16, according to the chairman of the council's Finance Committee.

Councillor Timothy Cahill said Tuesday the council will pass the budget at the conclusion of its final budget session.

The council, which has held several budget sessions and has already cut at least $310,000 from Mayor James Sheets' proposed FY94 budget of $128,689,981, was scheduled to conclude its review of the city's fire department budget and begin reviewing the police and school budgets last night (Wednesday).

Any budget items which have not yet been acted upon will be finalized at the June 16 session, Cahill said. He added that about "probably about $100,000" in the budget has been put aside for further review.

Sheets' proposed FY94

police and fire budgets are $11,371,154 and $9,811,863 respectively, increases of 6.3 percent and 1.6 percent from the FY93 budgets of $10,659,989 and $9,662,814.

The School Committee submitted to Sheets an FY94 budget of $38,784,074, up 5.1 percent from its FY93 budget of $36,806,772.

Cahill said Tuesday he did not know what, if any, cuts would be made in the police and school budgets or the remainder of the fire budget.

"I really can't say until I talk to the other members of the council," he said.

Cahill said last month, however, that was his opinion that as much as $500,000 could be cut from Sheets' proposed budget. Departments that have received cuts in their FY94 budgets so far include the assessors and law departments and the department of public works.

Last year, the council cut only $86,516 from Sheets' proposed FY93 $124,878,100 budget, according to City Auditor Robert Foy. No cuts were made in the police, fire or school budgets.

The council received Sheets' proposed budget May 3 and has only 45 days to act upon it, meaning that it must be passed by June 17. If not passed by then, the budget would pass as proposed by Sheets.

Sheets' proposed budget exceeds FY93's $124,791,584 budget by 3 percent. It also includes a 2.5 percent increase in the city's property tax levy, the maximum allowed under state law, as well as 2 percent raises for most city employees. Quincy's school teachers are slated to receive 4 percent raises.

The City Council has the authority to cut the mayor's budget, but not add to it. The mayor has no power to veto any cuts made by the council.

DiBona, 39, of Quincy, joined the Quincy Police Department in August, 1981, after three years with the Braintree police force. He was promoted to sergeant in April, 1987.

Roadway Hearing June 28

The City Council and Planning Board will hold a joint public hearing Monday, June 28 at 7 p.m. in the City Council Chamber at City Hall to discuss a proposal by Home Quarters to build a partial roadway through the Willard St. area of West Quincy.

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio said after Monday night's council meeting that Home Quarters, an establishment similar to Home Depot, is building a store in Braintree near the Quincy line.

Fabrizio noted that although most of the roadway will also be in Braintree, about "a quarter of it" will be on Quincy property that is currently Planned Unit Development (PUD)-zoned.

Sheriff Designs Program To Fight Crime Against Seniors

In an effort to address the increasing number of reported crimes, con games, swindles and schemes directed toward senior citizens, Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford H. Marshall has designed a program called, "Senior Outreach Services" (SOS). SOS will operate within a three-way network among the sheriff's office, Quincy Police Department and senior citizens groups in Norfolk County. The National Sheriff's Association and the American Association of Retired Persons will assist.

(preventive) and post-victimization (support). Seminars, informative brochures and alert bulletins will be presented to various groups on a timely basis.

Arrangements are being formulated for a SOS/Triad referral network to offer support and follow-up to seniors. The program is intended to reduce crimes against older citizens and improve the quality of life for everyone.

"As the number of older Americans increases, this demanding need is being addressed," Marshall said. "Crimes against seniors are among the most appalling and hideous of acts, they will not be tolerated in Norfolk County and we work together in our communities to take preventive measures whenever and wherever possible."

Volunteers are needed to help implement the program. To help or for more information, contact Dick O'Leary at 329-3705.

NEW REASONS TO EAT YOUR BROCCOLI

Broccoli has provided some comic relief in recent years, but the sober truth is that scientists have discovered another reason to give the vegetable more than a little respect. A substance called sulforaphane, present in large amounts in broccoli, has been found to trigger the production of enzymes within the body that neutralize cancer-causing agents. Researchers hope that further study of sulforaphane may lead to better understanding of ways to prevent cancer. While sulforaphane's potential is still being tested, scientists are also exploring the protective qualities of other substances such as fiber and vitamin C, which are present in broccoli and other vegetables. P.S. Research continues to show that eating whole foods rather than relying on supplements is the best protection for your health.

For a healthy treat, try steaming broccoli and serving with a wedge of lemon, or sauteing sliced broccoli in olive oil with chopped garlic and walnuts. If you would like to learn what you can do to stay healthy and ward off the dangers of heart attacks, feel free to call COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. If necessary, we will refer you to another medical professional. Office hours are by appointment at 101 Adams St., Suite 24, in Quincy. ## Collins Council Candidate ?

This year's City Council at-large race started off in slow motion but got a good interest shot-in-the-arm when Charles McIntyre entered the field.

It could soon get another.

Mary Collins, former School Committeewoman and Norfolk County Commissioner, has been hinting she might return to the political front.

She isn't saying for sure or for what.

Friends, however, are convinced that if she decides to hit the campaign trail once again it will be as a candidate for City Council at-large.

As far as political observers are concerned, Collins is keeping—or trying to keep 'em guessing—until she is ready to publicly make her plans known.

"How do you know, I might run for the School Committee," she says.

Sounds like a political smokescreen but the thought of that might be enough to drive Clayton Johnson up the nearest wall.

The embattled president of Quincy College has enough problems right now with the present School Committee.

Collins was his severest critic when she was on the board. To have her back and the college still under the School Committee would be the ingredients for nightmares for Johnson.

But it's unlikely she would be a School Committee candidate. She's already been there. The City Council would be a new challenge—a new interest.

McIntyre, the 25-year-old son of the late Mayor-Senator James McIntyre, made a contest out of the council at-large picture when he announced his candidacy last week.

MCINTYRE

That makes four candidates for three seats.

Incumbents Tim Cahill and Michael Cheney are up for re-election and Joseph LaRaia, named to fill the unexpired term of Patricia Toland who resigned to become assistant city clerk, is running for that seat.

They know McIntyre is a threat. And Collins would be another one.

Collins has been a consistent top vote getter all her political life especially in a one-out-of-three votes race.

And if she were the only woman council candidate, that would be a big extra plus.

Only three women have been elected to the City Council in Quincy's history: Edna Austin and Patricia Toland at-large and Joanne Condon in Ward 6.

Stay tuned.

COLLINS

ONE QUESTION STILL to be answered is whether LaRaia, filling out the Toland term, will be considered an incumbent and entitled to the designation "Candidate For Re-election" on this year's ballot.

City Clerk Joseph Shea has asked City Solicitor Steve McGrath for a ruling.

"I would be inclined to think he is," McGrath said when we asked him the question. "But I will look into it."

LARAIA

A RE-ELECTION RECEPTION for City Council

PHELAN

President and Ward 5 Councillor Charles Phelan is set for Thursday, June 17, 7 to 9 p.m. at 1 Adams Place, Quincy Center.

Tickets are $50 per couple and may be obtained by calling 472-6339.

YOU'RE A YOUNG old-timer if you remember Quincy's version of "Cheers" and the Bull & Finch Pub.

It was the Dutch Lounge on Temple St., Quincy Center, which had the same type square bar and was a favorite spot for lawyers, politicians and the news media in the 1940's and 50's.

And, for them, it really was a place where they could go where everybody knew their names.

Mount Wollaston Cemetery Beautiful For Memorial Day

Editor, The Quincy Sun: As one who has frequented Quincy's largest cemetery, Mount Wollaston, on a regular basis ever since my first visit as a toddler, circa 1913, may I offer my heartfelt thanks to all of those responsible for the immaculate, neatly-manicured plots and graves which greeted the hordes making their Memorial Day pilgrimage to honor the deceased.

May I ask, rhetorically: Has the venerable burial ground ever looked more beautiful than during the long holiday weekend? Thanks to the dedicated work of Ray Cattaneo, Richard McNeice and the competent crew of grass cutters and trimmers, with strong support from City Hall. Their valiant efforts effectively complemented the annual "labor of love" by surviving family members, the gorgeous flowers planted every year with tender, loving care, to keep green the memories of the dear departed.

Kudos to all who "kept the faith" by participating. With solid support from my siblings, I've loved caring for the Spargo family plot for nigh onto 60 years, aided and abetted by my wife, Kae, who, with her trusty "green thumb," bears the brunt of the labor involved.

QHS Alumni War Memorial To Be Dedicated Sunday

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

A memorial honoring Quincy High School, Trade School and Vocational Technical School alumni who were killed in action or died of injuries resulting from service to their country in war time will be dedicated Sunday at 2 p.m. at the high school.

Capt. William Sullivan, a Quincy High School graduate and veteran of World War II, will be the guest speaker.

The unique memorial will be an appropriate and permanent tribute to Quincy High, Trade School and Vo-Tech students and graduates who gave the supreme sacrifice.

"With this memorial, we hope students of Quincy High School remember past students who have given their lives during war time," said Robert LaFleur of the Quincy Veterans Services Dept. "The committee wants the students to walk by that memorial every day and see the names of students from their school who gave the supreme sacrifice."

"You'd like the students to remember that the reason they still have a school is because of these past students. A lot of students left school early and didn't graduate to serve their country."

"They felt they had an obligation to serve," said LaFleur, a 1968 Q.H.S. graduate and a Navy veteran of the Vietnam War who experienced the loss of several classmates during that conflict.

Deceased veterans honored by the memorial are those Q.H.S., Trade School and Vo-Tech students or graduates who were killed or are missing in action, or died from injuries sustained during a conflict.

After many hours of research, the memorial committee has compiled a list of deceased veterans. Anyone who knows of a loved one or a friend that is not on this list is asked to contact by phone or letter Col. Joseph Ciampa, Q.H.S., 52 Coddington St., Quincy, MA 02169, 984-8845 between 7:30 a.m. and 3 p.m.

The memorial will stand about eight feet tall and eight feet wide inside Quincy High, just outside the school's Pride Room. Names of deceased veterans will be engraved on name tags and placed on blue felt. The memorial will be encased in glass.

Students at the Quincy Center for Technical Education are doing the wood work for the memorial, LaFleur noted.

The effort to erect the memorial is being coordinated by a committee comprised of three local organizations: Friends for a Better Quincy High School, QHS R.O.T.C., and the Quincy Veterans Council.

The QHS Veterans Memorial Committee is still accepting donations to help pay for the $2,000 memorial. Donations, made payable to Friends for a Better Q.H.S., can be sent to Chris Barrett, 17 Clifton Rd., Quincy, MA 02169, or to Robert LaFleur, c/o of the Quincy Veterans Services Dept., 1120 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Committee members are Chris Barrett, parent and veteran; Col. Joseph Ciampa, R.O.T.C., Robert LaFleur, Department of Veterans Services; Principal Lloyd Hill, Joseph Mazzarella, director of Center for Technical Education; and George Peachey, Friends rep and veteran.

Currently, the committee lists more than 150 deceased veterans for the memorial. They are:

Plan A Backers Report Progress In Petition Drive

The general committee formed to restore Plan A government to Quincy met at the Morrisette Legion Post and reported "satisfactory progress" in its petition drive to have to have the Plan A vs. Plan E question placed on the November election ballot.

The news media was barred from Thomas J. Gilmartin, Lawrence J. Curtin, Charles M. Shafte and James J. Ricciuti, all members of the committee which had no identifiable chairman.

Meanwhile, the petitioners were running into some problems circulating their papers.

There were protests that 12-year-old boys, members of the Koch Club of North Quincy, were helping out in the petition drive after being promised by an unidentified sponsor that they would receive ball point pens and baseball equipment for their help.

President Richard J. Koch said that the Koch Club had no connection whatsoever with the Plan A drive, although he conceded that he and other adult members had been collecting signatures.

Joseph E. Brett, general chairman of the Elks' Golden Jubilee Flag Day Parade, said he was opposed to plans to circulate Plan A petitions along the parade route. He said he was opposed to petitions on any such occasion, not just Plan A.

SEEK LAND FOR SCHOOL

The School Committee asked City Manager Blatt to put in a request with the City Council to take 10 acres of land adjacent to the Squantum Gardens Navy housing development for construction of a new elementary school.

Asst. Supt. Rudolph Lofgren told the committee that a 12-room school, enough to handle the 105 youngsters living in the development, could be built if the federal government chipped in $170,000 and the state came through with $120,000.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Michelle Lydon Named To Park-Recreation Board

By MICHAEL WHALEN
Michelle Lydon, chairwoman of the Quincy Park Improvement Committee, has been elected to the Quincy Park and Recreation Board.

Lydon, who spearheaded efforts in the recent restoration of the Collins-Rest-A-While playground on Southern Artery, was elected to the board by the City Council at its Monday night meeting. She will replace Gerard Coletta Jr., who is moving from Quincy after more than 30 years of service to the city.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, noting Lydon's involvement with the Collins-Rest-A-While project, said she has earned the position.

"She certainly has proven her abilities," said Kolson.

"Michelle has done an outstanding job," agreed

Councillor Michael Cheney, who suggested that the council send letters to both Lydon for her efforts and Coletta for his years of service to the city.

Lydon did not attend Monday night's meeting.

Council President Charles Phelan added that commendations will be awarded to those involved with the playground project at the council's next meeting.

$8 Million Bond Issue Sent To Committee

By MICHAEL WHALEN

An $8 million bond issue for school additions and repairs, flood-control projects and department equipment sent to the City Council by Mayor James Sheets was placed in committee at Monday night's council meeting.

Councillor Timothy Cahill had the matter put into the council's Finance Committee without discussion.

Cahill, the Finance Committee chairman, said because he had only received the bond issue earlier that day, he needed more time to review it. He added that he could not discuss the matter in detail, saying only that it totalled about $8 million.

The bond package includes:

- $2.5 million for a new seawall and pipeline in Squantum and for a new drainage system in Montclair to control flooding in those areas.

- $1 million for various school improvements and maintenance projects such as new roofs, windows, flooring, and plaster ceilings and electrical and heating problems. (The exact needs differ from school to school).

Sheets has said the bond package will also include equipment for other departments, including Park, Forestry and Cemetery.

The council has already approved two items that will be part of the package:

- $2.7 million for the construction of a new early childhood education center on Brooks Ave. in South Quincy and an addition to the Bernazzani Elementary School on Furnace Brook Parkway. Ground was recently broken for both projects.

- $125,000 for a new front-end loading truck for the Quincy Department of Public Works.

Sheets has said the city can afford to borrow more money for the projects because it has significantly reduced its debt for older projects.

The bond would enable the city to finance the cost of the projects over several years.

City Auditor Robert Foy said the city is presently rated A by two Wall Street credit rating agencies, Standard and Poors and Moody's Investor Service. Foy said the rating is a good one, especially for a city.

"Most cities are rated A or below," he said. The only higher ratings are AAA and AA. Foy added.

Terms of the major items in the bond package are 20 years at 5.9 percent for the Bernazzani addition and early childhood education center and 5 years at 4.6 percent over the front-end loader, according to Foy.

He added that the terms for the other items, if they are approved, would be 10 years at 5.2 percent for the seawall and 20 years at 5.9 percent for both the school improvements and the Montclair sewer project.

Sheets, Mayors Want Harbor Cleanup Reduced

the state's budget," Sheets said.

The mayor acknowledged the struggle for rate relief would be more difficult on Beacon Hill.

"The legislative piece will be more difficult than the court act because it's a question of where they (the state) will get the money. They have to change their priorities, without question," he said.

Besides skimming $1 billion off the project, Sheets said Mazonne has other options.

For instance, he could change the time frame of when certain plants must be built and when certain operations must commence. Although that would spread out some costs, Sheets said he is not fond of that idea.

"We're really not interested in that. We interested in scaling the project back so that there isn't that additional cost."

Besides Sheets, mayors from Revere, Melrose, Malden, Newton, Everett, Medford and Woburn attended. Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn, who was in Washington Tuesday, sent two representatives to the meeting.

The City Council Monday night passed a resolution calling for Governor William Weld, the MWRA, EPA, federal legislature and representatives from MWRA communities to set up a number of meetings to work together to find a solution to the harbor cleanup project.

Ward 1 Councillor Peter Kolson, citing past actions against MWRA sewer and water bills such as the recent "Tsa Party" at Marina Bay, said that now is the time for "an economic summit" on the issue.

"We've got to continue to do everything we can to beat the drum—that's what we do, that's our job," said Kolson. "We've had some success, they've heard us in Washington, and now we have to continually push and push and push."

Other councillors voiced similar sentiments.

"We have to continue to work on this issue, because it is far from being resolved," said Council President Charles Phelan.

"An economic summit is not only in order, it's the logical next step," agreed Councillor Michael Cheney.

License Board Invited To Check On Jazz Show

By BILL DONCASTER

Members of the Quincy License Board and Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro were invited down to the Yard Rock Blues Club, in Quincy Point, next Monday night to examine the operation of a weekly big band jazz show there.

Police Chief Francis Mullen expressed concern about an article appearing in last week's Quincy Sun concerning The Yard Rock featuring a 17 piece jazz big band on Monday nights.

Mullen and Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro both expressed concern about increased traffic and parking problems.

According to Joe Hajjar, owner of Joe's Pub and the Yard Rock, he doesn't see it drawing the same size or type of crowds as on Friday or Saturday nights, when he features blues bands. He said parking and traffic are not problems then.

"My parents don't come to my business," Hajjar said. "They know it's nice, and they're proud of what I've done with it, but they don't like that style of music. I wanted this band to play so they and people their age could have something to listen to. I'm looking for an older clientele with this."

Hajjar's big band nights started this past Monday, 24 customers were in attendance at the "concert atmosphere show."

According to Hajjar, the band is made up of veteran performers, members of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and Berkeley School of Music Professors, who play his club for very little money.

"I don't pay them," said Hajjar, "it's a somewhat unusual situation, but the band is playing strictly for a $10 cover." Hajjar said they play there because of the reputation of the club.

Mullen said he was disturbed by the mention of possible dancing in the Sun article, which Hajjar is not licensed for. He also said that he was concerned that Hajjar was housing a 17 member band in a room with only a 99 person capacity.

Hajjar invited the license board and DeCristofaro to the next big band night on Monday, they accepted and will make a report at next Tuesday's meeting.

Ammunition License Runs Into Opposition

There were approximately 30 calls to Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien, and 27 more to City Clerk Joseph Shea, according to Shea, in opposition to Norfolk Firearms gaining an Ammunition license at 265A Whitwell St.

License Commissioner Joseph Shea said Chretien wrote an informal letter to abutters regarding the request for a permit from Paul Miller of Norfolk Firearms. A letter from Chretien to Shea read during the meeting says he received "approximately 30 calls from area residents in opposition."

Shea said at the License Board meeting Tuesday that he received 27 more calls.

Paul Miller was not at the meeting Tuesday, and the decision on the permit was postponed due to his absence.

Miller has said in the past that he does not intend to store either guns or ammunition at 265A Whitwell St. Rather they will be stored in an associates safe in Bridgewater. Miller is a licensed dealer of firearms, selling primarily at gun shows to collectors. He does not intend to sell retail until some time in the future.

According to Miller in an interview May 19, the original hearing date on the request, he is seeking the permit in Quincy because he would like to open a retail store in Quincy at some point.

Police Honor Deceased Members At Memorial Service

The Quincy Police Department held a memorial ceremony at the Police Memorial Monument in Mt. Wollaston Cemetery Sunday.

"On this occasion each year," said Police Chief Francis Mullen, "we honor those who chose this dangerous profession as a career and who enforced the law with pride and dignity... earning the respect of the community."

"Like our departed brothers," Mullen said, "we too have enforced the law with pride and dignity but we do not always earn the respect of the community. But I am proud of our Quincy Police officers, our civilian personnel and our record of service to the public."

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio, during his address, recalled his 15 years of working with the Quincy Police Department as a part time employee in the communications division. "No other experience has prepared me more for public service or motivated me more to serve our community than the examples that I witnessed while working for the department," Fabrizio said, "especially the concern and commitment demonstrated by members of the police force."

Fabrizio also listed the names of the five Quincy Police Officers who were killed in the line of duty; Chief Frank Burrell and Officers Patrick Kelleher, Charles Crooker, Joseph Connor and Alfred Hollis.

Fabrizio said that public officials and residents of Quincy cannot "forget that these great men died at the scene of 'so called' routine events. The fact is that in police work, no call is routine. Every officer goes to work not knowing whether he or she will ever return home."

Also at the ceremony, Chief Mullen introduced the new police recruits who will join the ranks of the Quincy Police Department after completion of Academy training.

Officer Francis Barnes read the "Roll of Honor," a list of Quincy Police Officers who have died in the past six years.

596 Receive Degrees At Commencement

Quincy College Graduates Urged To Bring 'New Vitality To Old Ideas'

By WAYNE FITZPATRICK

House Speaker Charles Flaherty urged the 34th graduating class of Quincy College to bring, "new vitality to old ideals" during the college's commencement Sunday at the Quincy Center for Technical Education.

The graduation ceremonies, scheduled for Veterans Memorial Stadium, were forced indoors due to inclement weather.

In a speech peppered with images of "reformation" and "making a difference," Rep. Flaherty reminded the 596 graduates to "not be afraid to take the untraveled road" while commemorating the 25th anniversary of Robert F. Kennedy's death.

Echoing the messages of RFK, Flaherty challenged the graduating class to, "reaffirm the ideals for which he (Robert Kennedy) stood."

"Above all, let us act upon the conviction of which Robert Kennedy lived, the conviction to give so much hope to the excluded of America and beyond, the intense conviction that an individual can make a difference to the life of his or her times", Flaherty told the graduates.

Flaherty also stressed the importance to bridge the gaps which exist between the "white and the non-white, the rich and the poor, and the aged and the young."

Flaherty was presented an honorary degree by Quincy College President O. Clayton Johnson for his public service of more than 30 years in the Massachusetts legislature.

List Of Graduates On Page 20

Reciting the poem, "Fire and Ice" by Robert Frost, Mayor James Sheets reminded the graduates to prepare for an "ever-changing world."

"As you step into the world of the 21st century, you stand at the threshold of a new beginning," declared Sheets.

Robert J. Murphy, president of Phi Theta Kappa, told his fellow graduates to "seize the day", and to "not look at this graduation as an end to your learning process."

"We will walk on our own feet, work with our own hands, and speak with our own minds", said Murphy, an accounting major.

Michael Wayburn, the Student Government Association president, announced the donation of eight benches in Coddington Hall as a gift by the graduating class.

President Johnson presented Dean Robert Downey with a plaque for his service to the college. A Scottish bagpiper serenaded Downey with the hymn, "Amazing Grace", in memory of his late mother who was Scottish, after the presentation.

Quincy school committee member Margaret O. King remembered the late Patricia Glancy, who died May 18, for her service to the college as a computer science professor at the college.

The late Hugo Fabrizio, a former member of College Courses, Inc. who died last December, was also remembered.

The graduating class was the largest in the college's history. It also had the highest grade point average of any other graduating class at Quincy College.

Mayor Sheets presided over the conferring of degrees, while Rev. Richard F. Brondyke, pastor of the Fort Square Presbyterian Church, led the invocation and benediction at the commencement exercises.

Track

Lewis, Gott Shine At All-State

By TOM SULLIVAN

Suzanne Lewis closed out a brilliant high school career for North Quincy and Jeremy Gott gave a taste of things to come with outstanding performances in the Mass. All-State Track Championships at Shrewsbury High School.

Lewis ran a personal best 11:29.5 to take fifth place in a grueling two-mile battle. Running conservatively early on, the fast pace of the leaders took its toll on many high calibre runners. With each lap Lewis moved up from 12th to ninth with a lap to go.

Over the last 200 meters she beat four people, including former state champions Jenny Martin of Newton North and Deidre Milligan of Brockton. The race was dominated by Western Mass. runners with Candida McCarthy of Mt. Greylock winning in 10:58.2.

Eastern Mass. rival Cait Hurley held off Lewis in the final 100 meters for fourth and Walpole phenom Claire Kelley, forced to run the second heat due to slow qualifying time in the class meets, took sixth.

Lewis will pass up the New England's this Saturday to attend a cousin's graduation in Ohio. The next time she suits up will be in the uniform of Brown University, where she will continue her education.

"She might not be the best, but she was the most consistent," said coach Geoff Hennessy. "This was by far her best executed race -- every lap was evenly paced, and the strategy finally paid off. This race was a Who's Who of Massachusetts distance running and she beat a classy field."

For Gott, his future is only beginning. The talented junior only placed fourth in the class meet, the last possible qualifying spot to advance to the all-state. Gott ran his fastest time of the season (1:59.2) to qualify for the New England, placing sixth.

The race makes amends for a disappointing indoor all-state where, running in the second heat of the 600, he led only to tie up the final 100 yards and finish last.

"He's got boundless potential," said coach Peter Chrison. "He high jumps and triple jumps as well as anchoring our mile relay team and we did minimal speed work on the track, so he should run even faster as time goes by." He was also a member of North's Super Bowl champion football team as a defensive back.

LORI NOVAK of Quincy was the most improved player on the Bentley College volleyball team. The sophomore earned first team AVCA Division II All-Northeast Region honors and second team all-Northeast 10 accolades. A two year starter, the Quincy High graduate averaged 8.3 assists per game and led the team in ace serves (44) and serving accuracy (.963).

Junior League

Rotary Wins 9th In Row

Rotary continues to be the hottest team in the Quincy Junior Baseball League with nine straight wins to lead the National League by eight points.

Rotary scored 38 runs in the last three games and has scored 127 runs in its 13 games. Pitching and defense also continue strong allowing only 52 runs on the season.

Rotary topped the Lions, 13-7, with Kevin Shaw and Adam Goodrich sharing the pitching. Billy Connolly went 3-for-4 with a triple, Keave Tupe 3-for-4 with a double and Nick Cyr 3-for-4. Shaw hit his fourth home run and also hitting well were Matt Praetch, Goodrich, Frank Currier, Matt Millerick and Jay Grazioso.

Pat Dolbear pitched well for the Lions, Mike Keddy, Dobeare, Currier and Mike McEvoy had the hits and Mike Reidy and Jim Sullivan played well in the field.

Rotary defeated Keohane's, 18-9, with Shaw pitching a complete game for the win. He was topped up for seven runs in the first but came back to handle Keohane's the rest of the way. He had 11 strikeouts and gave up only two hits over the last five innings.

Connolly went 5-for-5 with two home runs, a double and two singles; Grazioso hit his first home run, a three run blast; Goodrich had a double and two singles and Tupe had two doubles and a single.

Yankees Edge Pirates

The Yankees edged the Pirates, 10-9, in Quincy Triple A Baseball League action as Frank Alibrandi won his first pitching start.

Currier continued to shine both defensively and offensively, had two hits and sparked in the field. T.J. Wilson had a single and Joe Thorley played strong defense.

Brian Nolan and Jody Bravo pitched for Keohane's. Nick Distasi, Ryan Barrett, Shawn Manning, Stephen Ford, Chris Carthas, Bravo and Ryan Deshler led the offense and Brian Burke and Chris Griffin played well defensively.

Rotary also topped the Elks, 7-4, with Connolly getting his first pitching win. He pitched four scoreless and hitless innings. Goodrich got his seventh save.

Praetch went 3-for-4 with two doubles, Goodrich 3-for-4, Shaw 2-for-4, and Cyr, Tupe, Wilson and Grazioso all chipped in with hits. Paul Wise, Thorley and Millerick played strong defense.

Ryan Piccinio pitched well for the Elks, going six innings and strikeout six. Nathan Derosario played strong defense and Sean McCusker, Piccinio and Mike Feiber had hits.

Continental Cable held on to first place in the American League with wins over Keohane's and Kiwanis.

Cable outlasted Keohane's, 12-11, rallying for four runs in the bottom of the fifth inning.

Paul Carney led off the inning with a single and, after two strikeouts, Tim O'Connor's third hit was followed by an RBI double by Chris Bregoli. Mike Powers followed with an RBI single and Kevin Walsh ripped his fourth hit scoring the tying and go-ahead runs.

Mike Welch got credit for the win after relieving Powers. Walsh led the attack with four hits and four RBI. O'Connor had three hits, including a triple, and Bregoli and Powers each had three hits and two RBI.

Keohane's was paced by the three hits and three RBI by Nolan. Steve Ford had three hits, including a triple and Chris Carthas had three hits and two RBI.

Powers pitched three innings as Cable topped Kiwanis, 6-3, for the win with three innings of relief help from Bregoli.

After Kiwanis took an early 1-0 lead, Cable took a 3-1 lead as Chad Fitzpatrick and Bregoli singled, Powers doubled in a run, Walsh singled in another and Mark Dunn drove in the third.

Bregoli's long two-run homer provided the final cushion in the sixth. Powers had four hits and lifted his average to .630. Bregoli had two hits as did O'Connor and Walsh. Chris Wilson and Ryan Hutchings also had hits.

Kiwanis was led by the pitching of Bobby Johnson, who also had two hits. Mike Carloni had a double and two RBI, Matt O'Mahoney had a single and RBI and Peter Donovan had a hit. Matt Nicklas and Bobby bell made outstanding fielding plays.

The Sons of Italy edged the Elks, 5-4, with Steve Miller and Jonathan Calari combining to pitch a no-hitter.

Dave Gunther had a triple and single, Erik Goodrich had the game-winning home run and Jared Downey and Mike O'Neill played strong defense.

Mike McGlothlin and Russ Corner pitched well for the Elks.

Mike McEnvoy pitched a no-hitter and struck out 14 for his fifth win as the Lions topped, Burgin Platner, 4-0.

Dobeare had a two run homer and Mike Keddy a single.

The Lions also topped the Police, 9-3, led by the hitting and pitching of Dolbear.

The Lions scored five runs in the second inning when Mike Riedy, Ryan Krueger and Steve Avallon had successive hits and Dolbear hit a triple. Andy Currie and Jim Sullivan had two hits each.

Dolbear had 10 strikeouts while winning his third game.

The standings:

American League: Cable, 10-3; Beacon Sports, 9-4; Lions, 9-4; Burgin Platner, 6-7; Kiwanis, 6-7; VFW, 4-8-1.

National League: Rotary, 11-2; Keohane's, 7-6; Colonial Federal, 5-8; South Shore Buick, 4-9; Police, 4-9; Elks, 2-10-1.

ALTERNATIVE REALITIES

The alternator is the part of an automobile's charging system which produces electricity. If it or its control device (the voltage regulator) were to go bad, the alternator light on the dash would glow red. On cars outfitted with charge indicators, the needle would show a continual discharge or low voltage. In either case, there is insufficient amounts of electricity being produced to keep the battery fully charged, as well as meet the demands of the ignition system, lights, fans, radio and other accessories.

To guard against a dead battery, turn off all unnecessary accessories and head to the auto technician at the first warning of alternator failure. In some cases, the fault will simply lie with a slipping drive belt.

HINT: To guard against being stranded by a dead battery, travel with a set of jumper cables in the trunk. Stop in and visit with us soon at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Baintree (843-1550) if you need to have your alternator replaced. LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO also invites your inquiries about almost anything connected with the care of your car. Learn for yourself why so many of your friends already rely on us to keep their present car properly maintained. Hours: Mon.-Fri. 8am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

TO OUR BROTHER TIMMY

June 7, 1965 - June 7, 1993

Today you would have been 28 years. We wish we could be together with you to celebrate your birthday. Since we cannot, we are sending this birthday message to you, with thanks for the many happy years you gave us while you were here. Even though we can no longer see your smiling face, we have all those happy memories we will never erase.

Timmy, you are always in our thoughts and deep inside our hearts. We miss you so very much.

Love, Kevin and Terry

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SCOTT DEWARE

We learn the words to the "Pledge of Allegiance" early in our lives. Yet many Americans do not know the history of the heritage of our flag. They are unaware that the first Flag Day was in 1777. On June 14 of that year, the Continental Congress passed a resolution, legally establishing the "stars and stripes." As a young nation, our new flag proved to be a symbol of strength and victory. We all link the name of Francis Scott Key and the poem "The Star Spangled Banner." Key was held prisoner aboard a British man-of-war in Baltimore harbor during the war of 1812. The British were confident they would capture the Fort before sunrise. All through the night with the "rockets red glare" and bursting bombs the stars and stripes held fast. The Americans had been victorious.

In some cases, one flag can have many histories. Did you know that the same flag that flew over the U.S. Capitol in Washington on Dec. 7, 1941, at the beginning of World War II, was also flown from the mast of the USS Missouri during the final Japanese surrender on Sept. 2, 1945? Let us on June 14 take time to remember our flag and be proud of what it represents to all of us...

Nearly 200 Brave Rain For Violence Prevention Vigil

DeVeer said at the end one had been shot, the other committed suicide soon after. He said it was an example of how simple tensions can escalate quickly into horrific violence.

Many of the speakers were students. A young Janelle Spiker of Quincy said she's "tired of hearing about kids being hurt or killed, sometimes I'm afraid to stay a kid."

Marc Germain, a student at Randolph High School and a member of the Massachusetts Student Alliance Against Violence and Racism, said, "We as a people, not black or white but of the human race, must begin to realize that occurrences in Bosnia, increases in domestic violence, has a great deal of relevance to what our country, our world and our children's world will face."

Between the speeches there was music by the South Shore band "Maelstrom."

After the speeches were over, those in attendance stood in front of the church for a candlelight vigil.

Flag Day, Quincy Style

LARGE AMERICAN FLAG is carried north on Hancock St. to Southern Artery by volunteers during Monday's Flag Day Parade in Quincy.

WORLD WAR II Victory Flag, measuring 45 feet by 90 feet and weighing 300 pounds, is unfurled at Adams Field as a crane hoists it nearly 100 feet in the air. The flag was first unfurled at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, on the 50th anniversary of the bombing of Pearl Harbor.

Pratt Cites Poor Upkeep

Women's Baseball Star Wants Her Name Removed From Field

By BILL DONCASTER

Mary Pratt stepped onto a baseball field named in her honor recently, and asked they take her name off it.

Pratt, a lifelong Quincy resident and North Quincy High alumna, played in the All American Girls Professional Baseball League from 1943-1947. She pitched for the same Rockford Peaches glamorized in the movie "A League Of Their Own." A plaque bearing her name commemorating the league hangs in the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown.

She also worked for many years as a physical education teacher in the Quincy School system.

Deanna Hebert, a teacher at the Snug Harbor School, thought it fitting to name a ball field after her.

They chose the athletic fields at the Atlantic Middle School, mostly because it had not been named yet, according to Dr. Mary Lydon, Director of Health and Physical Education for the Quincy School Department. It was done more than a year ago.

According to Ray

Cattaneo, director of the Parks, Forestry and Cemetery Department, the field falls under the jurisdiction of the School Department.

Pratt visited "her" field recently.

"Can you possibly imagine my disappointment," said Pratt, "when I found myself standing ankle deep and even in some places knee deep in grass and weeds, looking up at a sign that had been defaced attached to a cement wall."

According to Lydon, it's essentially a soccer field, where they put in a backstop, bases and a pitchers mound.

"If it was meant to be a soccer field," Pratt said,

In Free Cash Account

City To Start FY94 With $400,000 Surplus

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

With less than two weeks remaining in FY93, Mayor James Sheets said he expects the city will start FY94 with a small surplus of up to $400,000 in free cash.

"My best judgement is we're looking at $200,000 to $400,000 in free cash (when FY93 ends June 30). That would be better than last year when we ended up with zero. We were careful not to take too much out of free cash this year," Sheets said Tuesday.

The city's free cash situation should get a boost in August when the state certifies that account. The mayor said the free cash reserve should grow to as much as $1.5 or $1.6 million.

"In August, we should have $1.5 or $1.6 million in certified free cash because of additional lottery money that has not yet been certified by the state," he said. "That money will be set aside for emergencies."

Sheets explained that the state certifies free cash once a year in August. As a result, it is possible for additional money to be allocated for cities and towns by the state after the August certification, but because it has not yet been certified, municipalities cannot place the money in a free cash reserve fund. In other words, money which is not certified by the state in August of any fiscal year cannot be appropriated until after it is certified the following year.

This year, the city will start the fiscal year in better fiscal shape than last year. "We're $400,000 better than last year. We anticipate we'll end the year with a $400,000 balance."

Last year, Quincy finished FY92 with zero dollars in free cash. But in August, the state certified $1.6 million as free cash. Sheets said about half of this money came from back taxes collected from some major corporations after the last certification.

The mayor said wicker winter weather and money for additional police patrols drained as much as $760,000 from the free cash account this year.

Sheets had budgeted $300,000 for snow and ice removal as has been the custom during recent administrations. However, several major winter storms, which dumped more than 60 inches of snow on Quincy, forced the city to spend an additional $380,000 on snow and ice removal.

A considerable amount of free cash revenue was also transferred to the police overtime account. According to Sheets, approximately $900,000 was spent on police overtime, of which $380,000 was transferred from free cash during the fiscal year.

Sheets said about $200,000 in additional revenue was spent to keep the special operations unit on the street. Other money was expended for expenses related to the 18 police cadets which are undergoing training and are expected to hit the streets in the late summer or early fall. The mayor also said some additional revenue was spent to cover other manning shortages caused by injuries or vacations.

Commenting on additional police overtime money, Sheets said, "This ensured that we had police coverage on the streets. We did that knowing we had the money in free cash."

The fire department is expected to finish the fiscal year within budget and not require a free cash transfer to erase any shortfall, the mayor said.

For the most part, Sheets called FY93 a "typical year. Some budgets were over while some other budgets were under so we could bring in

Powers, Flood In Line For Quincy Court Judgeships

Former Quincy Councillor Warren A. Powers and John H. Flood, former Democratic state representative, are in line for appointment to associate judgeships at Quincy District Court.

Gov. William Weld has submitted their nominations to the Governor's Council which is expected to act on them Wednesday, June 23.

Powers, 51, has been a Norfolk County assistant district attorney since 1971 and has been in charge of all district court jury trials in the country. He now lives in Norfolk.

Flood, 54, a Canton resident, left the legislature to run for governor in 1990. He has been practicing law in Boston since.

Powers, who is married to the former Holly

Grazioso of Quincy, served as Ward 5 City Councillor from 1974 to 1977.

He is a 1964 graduate of Suffolk University and a 1971 graduate of Suffolk Law School. He practiced law part-time in Quincy and was appointed assistant district attorney by then Dist. Atty. George Burke in 1971 after he passed the Massachusetts Bar. Prior to that he had worked as administrative assistant to Burke from 1969.

When present Dist. Atty. William Delahunt succeeded Burke, he retained Powers as an assistant district attorney.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL Alumni Veterans Memorial was recently dedicated inside the school lobby near the Pride Room. The memorial, which was made by Center for Technical Education students, lists more than 200 names of Quincy High, Trade School and Vocational-Technical students who died while fighting for our country. Committee members admiring the memorial are, from left, guest speaker and QHS alumni Capt. William Sullivan, U.S. Navy; Bob LaFleur, Chris Barrett, George Peachey, Col. Joseph Ciampa, aerospace science instructor; Joseph Mazzarella and Lloyd Hill, Quincy High principal.

Plan Could Save MWRA Ratepayers $400 Million

Ratepayers in Quincy and 42 other Greater Boston communities charged with cleaning Boston Harbor could save significantly on their water and sewer bills under a plan the state legislature has ordered the MWRA to test this summer.

Researched and developed by MIT professor Donald Harleman and sponsored by the Pioneer Institute for Public Policy Research, the plan is expected to save ratepayers approximately $400 million by dramatically reducing the size and the price of the MWRA's proposed secondary sewage treatment plant. To date, the Pioneer plan is the only proposal that can downsize the treatment plant while meeting effluent restrictions established under the Clean Water Act.

Using technology that has proved effective in plants in California and other states, Harleman and his research team are confident that the CEPT method, which uses minute amounts (15 parts per million) of chemicals during the treatment of waste water, would ensure a faster, more efficient, and less expensive process.

"Our plan offers striking cost savings and important environmental benefits," Harleman said. "For generations to come, residents of Greater Boston will experience in their water and sewer rates and in their quality of life the effects of this multi billion-dollar project. To be short-sighted at this critical point when substantial improvements can be made is pure folly."

The MWRA balked at the Pioneer plan's implementation until the House Post-Audit and Oversight Committee ordered its testing. Supporters of the plan point to the method's success in other states and the fact that it can be implemented under the MWRA's court-ordered schedule.

"This technology has the potential to save hundreds of millions in construction costs and the time to test it is now," said Lovett Peters, chairman of the Pioneer Institute. "When the chemically enhanced primary treatment plant is put into effect everyone will win, especially those who are losing the most under the current plan, the MWRA ratepayers."

Last week, nine area mayors, including Mayor James Sheets, united in support of reducing the Boston Harbor cleanup project, including scaling back the secondary treatment and a combined storm drainage overflow system for Boston. Sheets said cutting back on secondary treatment and the overflow system could slice as much as $1 billion from the $7 billion project.

The mayors hope to make their pitch before U.S. District Court Judge David Mazzone, who is overseeing the cleanup, before the end of the summer. Mazzone has said he is willing to reduce secondary treatment provided the harbor project can meet federal environmental standards.

The Harleman report won top honors in the Pioneer Institute's 1992 Better Government Competition. The Institute is an independent, non-profit research organization that specializes in the support, distribution and promotion of scholarly research on Massachusetts public policy.

Airplane Noise Due To Runway Reconstruction

Bernice Mader, administrative assistant to Mayor James Sheets of Quincy, who is also Chair of the Community Advisory Committee to the Massachusetts Port Authority, has investigated citizen complaints about recently increasing airplane noise in the City of Quincy and other South Shore Communities.

In speaking with Betty

Desrosiers, director of Noise Abatement at the Port Authority which administers Logan Airport, Mader determined that much of the newly perceived noise is due to reconstruction and repair of two runways at the airport. Because of that rebuilding, some of the normal runway combinations are shut down and several of the regular departure and landing routes have been temporarily used for very long periods of time in order to adapt to both the physical constraints of the repairs and high traffic demands.

Desrosiers said that work is expected to be completed approximately during the third week in July.

Citizens with noise complaints can register themselves "on the record" at Massport by calling the complaint line at 567-3333.

Citizens may also request that Massport forward them a paper copy of their complaint.

New Location For Sought Ammo License

By BILL DONCASTER
Norfolk Firearms has withdrawn its request for an ammunition license at 265A Whitwell St., and plans to reapply for one at 14 Cottage Ave., in Quincy Center.

Paul Miller, owner of Norfolk Firearms, said in a letter to City Clerk Joseph Shea that he is withdrawing in response to a letter from Ward 3 Councillor Lawrence Chretien in opposition to the license.

Miller now plans to supply sportsmen with a "full service outlet where they can get supplies for both fishing and hunting," in Quincy Center. He said in the letter that such a business would be accepted by area businesses.

Both Chretien and Shea said they received numerous calls from residents opposed to granting the license for a residential area, Shea received 45 calls alone, even though Miller planned to store no guns or ammunition at that address.

Shea said he advised Miller to withdraw, saying that the board was not going to vote against that kind of public response, but will support him in his new request.

"I feel a little sorry for him," Shea said, "he is an absolutely fit person for this kind of business." Shea said that there is no law in Quincy preventing Miller from gaining such a license for a retail shop, Quincy already has two stores selling guns. "He has all the necessary licenses, he's fully checked out by the state and police," Shea said, "It's just that the days of operating this kind of business out of a house are gone. People hear 'guns' and they get nervous, understandably."

Morrissey, Bellotti Call Noise Levels On Island 'Unacceptable'

Sen. Michael Morrissey and Rep. Michael Bellotti have contacted the Massachusetts Highway Department Central Artery Project concerning the excessive noise from the pile driving operation on Spectacle Island.

Morrissey, who is a Squantum resident, told Peter Zuk, the project director, that "noise levels have been unacceptable. Local residents have had to endure excessive noise levels into the early morning hours because of the construction project, particularly on the weekends."

"Spectacle Island is being capped and prepared to accept fill from the Big Dig," said Bellotti. Spectacle has also been identified as one of the harbors' biggest polluters because of run off and leachate from its previous dump and landfill operation.

According to Zuk, the island is being prepared for fill by J.M. Cashman Co. of Quincy who was awarded the pile driving contract. "The contract is expected to run five days a week, 24 hours a day," said Zuk.

In response to calls from Morrissey and Bellotti, the Central Artery Tunnel Project Environmental and Community Affairs Department has attempted to identify the nature of the work and location that is causing the excessive noise levels. According to Bellotti, attempts to gain noise levels and environmental readings on the pile driving have met with limited success.

Incomplete data has been gathered due partly to equipment failure of the crane on Spectacle Island and low level readings gathered on the island and in sections of Squantum.

"Peter Zuk has pledged to step up monitoring activities and work to resolve neighborhood noise concerns," Morrissey said.

According to Bellotti, the legislative delegation and local officials are working to set up a noise hotline to assist the Central Artery in identifying the specific time and nature of the pile operations that are causing the excessive noise levels.

Bellotti and Morrissey also emphasized that the community and local officials will not tolerate this "outrageous" situation and will seek legal redress if necessary. Further, the two legislators also reminded Zuk of the Central Artery/Terminal projects' commitment to work with local residents and businesses that will be affected by the construction.

Zuk responded that the pile driving operation was an unfortunate unintended adverse impact that he pledged to resolve as quickly as possible, the legislators said.

Morrissey and Bellotti expect to meet with the Spectacle Island project coordinator later this week.

Peace Vigil Credit Due

Editor, The Quincy Sun:
As a member of the Bethany Congregational Church and a participant in the Peace Vigil which took place in Quincy June 5, I wish to bring to your attention an oversight in your article concerning the vigil.

The young people who make up the Massachusetts Student Alliance Against Racism and Violence, in conjunction with their Alliance Theatre Project, worked extremely hard for several weeks rehearsing in Bethany's Social Hall in preparation for their presentation on the Saturday night of the vigil.
I am sure it was a great disappointment to them that their performance at Bethany (since Quincy High at the last minute was not available) was neither reviewed nor ever mentioned in the articles pertaining to the vigil.

The skits which they presented were created and performed in a very professional manner. All who attended were moved by their energy and sincerity. I am sure I speak for many when I say
"Congratulations" and
"Well Done" to this wonderful group.

Please give a little credit where credit is due.

IT'S NEVER TOO LATE FOR VITAMIN D, CALCIUM

The dairy folks have done a great job of spreading the word that calcium and vitamin D, both abundant in milk, are good for our bones. While dairy fat has become a no-no, however, evidence continues to pile up that calcium and vitamin D can prevent loss of bone density and broken bones among the elderly. In a study being heralded as "extremely important" by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, elderly patients who took supplements of calcium and vitamin D had 43 percent fewer fractures than a similar group that took no such supplements. The patients ranged in age from 69 to 106, promoting researchers to emphasize that the supplements can have a positive effect even for the very old.

P.S. Elderly people tend to be deficient in calcium and vitamin D due to poor diets and little exposure to sun.

It's never too late to make positive changes in your lifestyle, whether that means increasing your intake of vitamin D and calcium, switching to a diet low in saturated fats, or quitting smoking today.

Della Chiesa Childhood Center?

When it comes time to name the new Early Childhood Center to be built on the site of the former Lincoln School, Ward 4 Councillor Tom Fabrizio has a nominee in mind.

"I would like to see the center named after Amelio Della Chiesa," he says.
"I think it would be quite appropriate."

Appropriate, it would be.

The late mayor, state representative and city councillor had deep roots in the South
Quincy area and that neighborhood.

He was born in a house at 43
Rodman St. in 1901, just a stone's throw from the old Lincoln School which he attended, Fabrizio notes.

The area, which is now in Della Chiesa Fabrizio's Ward 4 district, was then in the old Ward 3 from where Della Chiesa launched his brilliant political career.

He was elected Ward 3 councillor in 1943, a seat his brother, Aldo, had held before going off to World War II.

His political career spanned 22 years. It included 12 years as mayor—longest of any mayor in Quincy's history. Two terms were under Plan E and four under the present Plan A.

To many he was "Mr. Quincy."

A good many residents grew up knowing him as their only mayor. He was mayor when they entered the first grade and was still on hand as mayor to help hand them their diplomas when they graduated from high school.

He retired as mayor in 1965 and as state representative a year later, giving up both seats, as he put it, "for the woman I love," borrowing a famous line.

His devoted wife, Evelyn, who he affectionately called "Blondie," had quietly and patiently remained in the background as he rode from plumber to become one of Quincy's all-time powerful and respected political figures. Now he wanted them to have more time together.

Della Chiesa died in October, 1975 at age 74 after a long illness. He and Evelyn had moved to Pembroke after he retired. She is also deceased. They are entombed at Mount Wollaston Cemetery.

The Thomas Crane Library because of his strong belief in education—including early childhood.

Fabrizio acknowledges there are commemorative plaques in the city bearing Della Chiesa's name, among others. In such places as the Quincy Vocational Technical School, Atlantic Fire Station, North Quincy branch library and additions at Quincy Hospital, all built during his administration.

There is also a memorial stone and plaque honoring the Della Chiesa Family in front of Quincy Center Plaza.

But Fabrizio thinks Della Chiesa singularly deserves something more.

He notes the Ross Parkway is named for Mayor

Charles Ross, the Burgin Parkway for Mayor-Senator
Thomas Burgin and old City Hall is now the James R.
McIntyre Government Center honoring the late mayor and senator.

He thinks naming the Early Childhood Center for Della Chiesa would be the ideal tribute to a man who was born and grew up in the neighborhood, long served his city with distinction and became a legend in its history.

MAYORAL HOPEFUL Martin Ervin and Michael D'Amico, Ward 4 City Council candidate have already filed their nomination papers. That makes them this year's political early birds. The filing deadline isn't until July 27.

SPEAKING OF Ervin, he visited Mayor James Sheets at City Hall the other day and came away liking him.

"He's a nice man," says Ervin. "A lot nicer than I expected."

But Ervin says that's not going to change his mind about running against Sheets.

"He's done an excellent job on the budget and in some areas but there are other areas that need improving," he says.

Ervin says he will get more specific as the campaign goes on.

ANOTHER INCUMBENT apparently has a challenger. Robert Boussy of Farrington St., a Boston school bus driver, has taken out nomination papers to run against Ward 3 Councillor Larry Chretien.

ATLANTIC CHECK, all but one incumbent had taken out nomination papers for this year's election. The lone one who hasn't is School Committee member Frank Santoro apparently confirming reports he won't seek re-election.

FORMER SENATOR Paul Harold is lecturing at the American Legion Boys State Program at Bentley College this week for the 14th year. But the association goes back to 1965 when he represented Sacred Heart High School,
Weymouth as a student.

Incidentally, Harold's lecture subject is "Politics And The Media" a topic he knows well as a former senator and a former reporter with The Quincy Sun.

Council Passes Resolution On Gulf War Veterans' Funds

Gulf War veterans should get what they deserve, according to Ward 2 City Councillor
Ted DeCristofaro.

The City Council last week passed a resolution introduced by DeCristofaro that stated that the City of Quincy should contact

Massachusetts Senate
President William Bulger regarding $800,000 raised two years ago at a fundraiser for the veterans.

DeCristofaro, who said the state still has not released the proceeds to the veterans, said he feels Bulger should do something about the situation as soon as possible.

"I just think it's very important," said DeCristofaro. "It would show them (veterans) that we haven't forgotten about them."

DeCristofaro said that once the money is released, it will be divided among the veterans.

"It wouldn't be much,"
he said, "but it would be something."

Successful Kidney Transplant

A Special 10th Anniversary For Two Quincy Sisters

By MICHAEL WHALEN

When Maryrose Mirick recently played the Wicked Stepmother in "Cinderella" at The Woodward School, she dedicated her performance to her sister, and it's easy to see why.

The production, which was held at the school in late April and early May, coincided with the 10th anniversary of the time her sister saved her life.

On April 27, 1983, Mirick, now 40, underwent a kidney transplant operation at New England Medical Center in Boston. Tricia Sullivan, 34, her younger sister, was the donor involved with the procedure. (Their story appeared in The Quincy Sun and other local media sources).

It is an experience--and a memory--that has remained with both for the past decade, something that strengthened the bonds between two members of an already close family.

The daughters of the late John J. Sullivan Sr., who died in 1984 at age 63 after serving 10 years on the Quincy School Committee (1973-83) and Mary Sullivan of Wollaston, the two learned early to put others--especially family members--first.

That lesson was also instilled into their other brothers and sisters, Jackie (John Jr., who died six weeks after his father of a brain tumor at age 42), Daniel, 49, of Canton; David, 48, of Dedham; Claire Ball, 46, of Newport, R.I., and Barbara Arnold, 44, of Wollaston. Both Mirick and Tricia Sullivan recalled how all six brothers and sisters were willing to be the donor for Mirick.

Indeed, Sullivan said that when she was told by doctors that her kidney was better suited for Mirick than that of anyone else in the family, she didn't think twice about what she would do.

SISTER ACT--Tricia Sullivan and Maryrose Mirick pose outside Sullivan's home in Wollaston. Mirick, a Weymouth resident, received a kidney donated by her younger sister during an April 1983 transplant operation.

"I didn't ever look at it as a choice," she said. "You don't even question something like that." She added that her only fear was that something might go wrong during the procedure and that Mirick might end up not benefiting from the operation.

Mirick, for her part, expressed similar sentiments, saying she was more afraid for Sullivan than for herself.

"I was petrified that my baby sister was going to go through this and something would go wrong," she said.

Fortunately, the operation was a success, and Mirick, who had suffered with kidney problems for nine years before becoming seriously ill, said she immediately felt the results.

"I felt so good," she said. "You wake up (from a transplant operation) and you feel like someone's given you a bottle of energy."

Today, Mirick is a financial secretary at The Woodward School and also co-owns Mirick Real Estate in Weymouth with her husband, Wayne. They live in Weymouth with their two children, Andrea, 12, and Jacquelyn, 7.

Mirick noted that Wayne and Andrea, who was adopted in June 1981 (because of her illness, Mirick was unable to safely become pregnant until after the operation) were both a constant source of strength and inspiration for her during her time of crisis.

Sullivan, who is single, still lives in Wollaston and is a kindergarten teacher at Snug Harbor School.

Both sisters say they have learned from the transplant experience, adding that it reinforced what they already knew about how important it is to have a loving, supportive family.

"If one of us lost a leg, I think another one of us would offer it," said Mirick.

"We're a very close family," agreed Sullivan, who added that she also learned the importance of the medical profession during the time of the operation.

"I learned that you should never take your health for granted," she said. "Thank goodness for people in medicine who dedicate their lives to procedures like this."

It was Mary Sullivan who initially contacted

The Sun about the anniversary of the operation, saying that her daughters' story "would be an inspiration to anyone with this illness."

The two sisters agreed, adding that if others should learn anything from their experience, it's that no one need be afraid of undergoing a kidney transplant.

"No matter what you say you can't make it through, you can," said Mirick.

Sullivan added that people should also have no fears about being an organ donor, noting that she recovered fully from the operation and never experienced side effects of any kind.

Mirick said even today, she thinks constantly about her sister's sacrifice and the years it has added to her life.

"Well, I hope you have 50 more," Sullivan told her sister.

"I will," responded Mirick with a smile. "It's going to be great."

Perhaps Mary Sullivan summed up her daughters' special relationship best of all.

"They're both very fortunate to have each other," she said.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Council Rejects Bid For Purchasing Agent

The City Council was in a mood to reject most everything at its weekly Monday night meeting.

Councillor Frank N. Orcutt failed to get approval on a resolve asking that City Manager William J. Deegan Jr. stop making purchases himself and appoint a city purchasing agent.

Orcutt said Deegan, who is paid $13,500 a year, and his $5,000 a year assistant were devoting too much of their time to purchasing and too little time to overall city management.

"They tell us about all these thousands we are saving," said Orcutt. "Well, I'm from Missouri. Let's cut out the fooling. Let's cut out making a mockery of the purchasing department."

The Council also turned down a proposal by Councillor Alfred G. Helfrich asking that $225,000 be taken from the excess and deficiency fund to start an account to build a new high school in five years.

Another Helfrich bid was rejected to establish municipal internships to further the training of graduate students in public administration who wish to be town and city managers.

ANGELS TIE UP TRAFFIC

The Navy's Blue Angels stunt flying team put on a show over the Squantum Naval Air Station that attracted 200,000 spectators and tied up traffic from the Fore River Bridge to Columbia Circle in Boston.

It took nearly two hours to filter some 10,000 cars parked on the Squantum base back into traffic on Quincy Shore Drive after the show. Parked cars lined side streets as far away as North Quincy High.

The display by the six Grumman F9F Panther jets, which skimmed the field as low as 100 feet off the ground at speeds up to 500 miles an hour, led five local youths to apply for Navy flight training.

Frances Muncey Quincy Hospital Employee Of Month

Frances Muncey, a clinical aide in the Progressive Care Unit (PCU), has been named employee of the Month at Quincy Hospital.

Muncey began her employment with Quincy Hospital in 1987 on the advice of her daughter, Leslie Tusi a nurse in the intensive care unit. Another daughter, Christine Muncey, is also a nurse at the hospital.

At the time, Muncey was working at an area high-tech company and was ready for a change. "I have never regretted it," says Muncey. "The Quincy Hospital staff is a nice group of people. Everyone helps one another."

Muncey says the care at Quincy Hospital is excellent. "There have been some patients who I never thought would make it," she says. "The nurses sometimes seem to work miracles- they are incredibly dedicated."

Muncey has made many friends in the PCU, including Dr. Alan Berriek.

FRANCES MUNCEY

"Fran is a pleasure to work with. She's always willing to lend a helping hand. She's efficient, conscientious and caring," he says.

Politics is one of Muncey's burning interests, according to co-worker Darlene Rich. "She's quite informed and follows the issues, sometimes writing letters to let her representatives know what she thinks," says Rich.

In addition to daughters Leslie and Christine, Muncey has a son, Thomas, and two daughters Janice and Geraldine, and six grandchildren. Her husband Gerald is retired. They live Brockton.

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

Ernie Aristide Honored At Ward 4 Assn. Ceremony

Ward 4 Neighborhood Association President Ernie Aristide has received the Al Conti Southwest Person of the Year Award.

Ward 4 Councillor Thomas Fabrizio presented the award to Aristide at a recent ceremony.

The award was established in 1990 by the Ward 4 Neighborhood Association and Quincy Neighborhood Housing Services, and a committee of volunteers selects in secret an honoree from all of those nominated by association members.

A lifelong Quincy resident, Aristide, 73, has been active in Quincy community activities for 48 years. His years of service to South and West Quincy include work with the Holy Name Society, the Knights of Columbus, the South Quincy Civic Association and the Southwest Community Relations Playground Committee.

Aristide said there are many other volunteers who deserve recognition as well, crediting his successful efforts to "the group working together."

He added that his wife Margaret, who is a volunteer interpreter for the Quincy Deaf Club, should also share some of the credit for his community action service.

"And the best move of my life was marrying Peg," he said.

Aristide said the among his latest achievements is helping establish a community center as part of a new elementary school being built at Brooks Ave. in South Quincy.

"Up to this point, we've had no community center for South and West Quincy," Aristide said. His future efforts will be centered around the community center, he added.

In addition, Aristide said that he is proud of his efforts in getting a playground for the Lincoln-Hancock School, and securing a non-denominational chapel for Quincy Hospital.

"When I see children playing there (at the school), it's a wonderful feeling," he said.

The awards ceremony, which was attended by 50 residents, featured appearances by State Rep. Steve Tobin, City Council President Charles Phelan, Councillors Timothy Cahill and Michael Cheney, and School Committee member Daniel Raymond.

Also in attendance were QNHs Executive Director Normand Grenier and Rev. James Kimmell, pastor of Faith Lutheran Church. The ceremony included a speech by Normand Goyette, a longtime friend of Aristide's.

AMONG THOSE WHO participated in the recent "Walk For Teens" were, from left, Jonathan Bragg, Hillary Rogers, Steven Goff, Lisa Bragg, Laura Shea and Karen Goff. The event was held to raise funds for the opening of a youth center in the City of Quincy this summer.

Donations Still Needed

'Walk-For-Teens' Raises $1,400 For Youth Center

The Committee to Establish Youth Centers in Quincy recently raised $1,400 with its first fund raiser, a "Walk-For-Teens."

Proceeds will benefit The Teen Get-Away, the youth center the committee hopes to open by this summer.

Mayor James Sheets and Committee to Establish Youth Centers Executive Director JoAnn Bragg kicked off the start of the walk by cutting the official ribbon. All walkers completed the six-mile route, which included checkpoints with water and oranges for participants.

The event was sponsored by the Quincy Citywide Parents' Council, Paula Gordon's Campfire Troop, Quincy Teen Mothers Program, the mayor's office, Koch Club, Quincy Youth Soccer, City Youth Councillors, and teenagers from Central Middle School and North Quincy High School.

Patricia Arnold, an eighth grader at The Woodward School, was congratulated for raising $110, the largest amount of donations for the youth center. Groups who also contributed were Impact Quincy, Monadnock Mountain Spring Water, Quincy Public Schools, Bella Fruit-State Rep. Michael Bellotti, Barry's Deli, St. John's Church, Mantis Plants and Flowers and the Emergency Management Agency and their staff.

At the end of the walk all participants were treated to a cookout donated by the Police Athletic League and musical entertainment was provided by the local teen band Perousia.

Donations are still needed to reach the committee's goal of $4,000. Those wishing to make a contribution are asked to make checks payable to "The Teen Get-Away" and send them to Jean Shea, 84 East Elm Ave., Quincy, MA 02170. Donations are tax deductible.

Nominations Sought For Ward 6 Councillor's Award Program

Ward 6 City Councillor Bruce Ayers announces that nominations are sought for the second annual Councillor's Award Program.

The award is presented to an exemplary child of middle school age living in Ward 6. Last year's winner was Shannon McCauley, an eighth grader at Sacred Heart School.

Ayers said that the middle school years are extremely important in terms of the development of a child, and he feels that providing positive reinforcement is invaluable.

"It is my hope that this award will help to set an example for younger students as well as for the peers of the award recipient, giving them an incentive to work to the best of their ability in school and to take an active role in the community," Ayers said.

The winner will receive a $100 savings bond along with an award which will be presented July 4 at the Squantum Playground after the Fourth of July Parade.

Those wishing to nominate a student should submit a written explanation of why the student is deserving. The award recipient will be judged on his/her academic achievement and contribution to the community.

Deadline for nominations is June 29. Nominations should be sent to Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, City Council Office, 1305 Hancock St., Quincy, MA 02169.

access ramp at the Taylor St. entrance to the building, along with a decorative planter.

The group received a check for $500 from Elmo Baldassari of BFI at the awards ceremony recently.

David Colton, Commissioner of Public Works, said their entry, "was chosen first place winner because it has made a substantial permanent improvement to the Wollaston School. By choosing to build a ramp to the school's entrance you have accomplished a major public service."

"This improvement was accomplished in an economical way," said Colton, "which employed the use of many volunteers from the neighborhood exhibiting a great deal of community spirit."

The Merrymount Elementary School PTO received second place, the Mayor's Award, and a check for $250, for continued beautification of the school property.

Third place, the Commissioner's Award, went to the Atlantic Neighborhood Association and the Adams Shore Community Association for improvements made to local playgrounds.

The Atlantic Neighborhood Association planted four trees, several shrubberies and painted playground equipment at Welcome Young Field. Adams Shore Community Association enhanced the appearance of the Heron Beach playground through nautical theme landscape improvements.

JoAnn Bragg Candidate For School Committee

JoAnn Bragg will officially announce her candidacy for School Committee Tuesday, June 22 at a 7:30-10:30 p.m. campaign kickoff at the Common Market, Willard St.

Bragg is president of the Citywide Parents' Council and has been involved in the school system for over a decade. She has served on many committees at every school level in several different leadership capacities.

Bragg was a School Committee candidate two years ago. Since that time she has stayed involved and has had success in bringing some of the issues she campaigned for to a reality. As a member of the Superintendent's Recycling Task Force she worked to bring system wide recycling into the classroom and serving on the Board of Directors of the School-Community Partnership she has worked first hand on expanding business partnerships.

"As a mother of three

children in our public school system and being a graduate myself," she said, "I want to be a member of the School Committee because I care deeply about our youth and their education. I regularly attend school committee meetings and have for several years.

"As president of the Citywide Parents Council I participate in the discussion at school committee meetings. As an elected member I can be more effective by being able to vote and implement real change."

Bragg has operated her own income tax preparation and accounting business for more than 14 years.

Bragg says she is the only candidate with children in every level of the public school system. During the past year she says she has visited every school in the system and has spent time listening to students, parents, teachers and administrators.

"I have learned each school has its own strengths and concerns. This perspective will assist me in my role as a school committee member," she said.

For the past year Bragg has been executive director of a committee she formed to open youth centers in Quincy.

"We need more activities for the young people of our city to do. We need to get them off the streets and into programs that stress positive behavior and productive, healthy lifestyles," she said.

Toni Kabilian Candidate For School Committee

Toni Kabilian, 33 Hyde St., announces her candidacy for a four-year term on the Quincy School Committee.

Kabilian, 46, a lifelong Quincy resident and a 1964 Quincy Public School graduate, said the city's school children will be her top priority.

Kabilian is active in the Sterling Middle School PTO, of which she was president for four years.

She has served as president, co-president and vice president of the Citywide Parents' Council, a 35-member citywide group that represents each school in the city.

As president of the Citywide Parents' Council, she held a non-voting seat on the Quincy School Committee for four years.

As an education activist, Kabilian has protested teacher layoffs, opposed classroom overcrowding, and budget cuts that affected the quality of the Quincy School System.

TONI KABILIAN

She said the three major reasons for her candidacy are: a deep rooted concern for children, a great love for the city, and a desire to make a difference.

The majority of the current committee's time is being spent on Quincy College business, she noted. She said she believes that the focus of the School Committee should be 100 percent on kindergarten through Grade 12.

"Quincy College is an independent education facility in our city. Our concern and our time must be given to educating the future citizens of Quincy," she said.

Kabilian and her husband, Arthur, have three children in Quincy schools. Their oldest son A.J., 18 years old, is attending Quincy College; daughter Toni Marie, 15, is a ninth grade student at Quincy High School, and David, 12, is a seventh grade student at Sterling Middle School. Kabilian is the daughter of Andy and Fran Ruggiano.

A campaign fund raiser will be held Thursday, June 24 at the Morrisette Legion Post, from 8 p.m. to midnight.

For more information call 773-5171 evenings or 479-2853 during the day.

Former Star From Quincy Donating $100,000

U Mass Sports Hall Of Fame To Be Named For George Burke

Quincy's George Burke, former University of Massachusetts basketball star, is donating $100,000 to his alma mater to re-establish its Sports Hall of Fame on the Amherst campus.

Burke, who was known as "Trigger" for his sharpshooting ability, is the only University of Massachusetts player to ever hold the team records for both "highest score" and "most assists" in one year. He did that in 1956.

Burke went on to become a Boston Celtics rookie before shifting career gears to the court of law.

In recognition of his continued support to the school, the hall of fame will be named in Burke's honor, said John Nitardy, director of athletic development at U Mass.

Athletic Director Bob Marcum said:

"On behalf of the athletic department and our athletes, I want to express our sincere appreciation to Trigger for his generosity in re-establishing the hall of fame. It will be a tremendous benefit to future athletes while also acknowledging the success of past team members."

Burke graduated from U-Mass in 1956 with a degree in political science. During his college career, he achieved several honors, including being chosen for the Yankee Conference All-Star team; second team All-American; first team All-East; first team All-Boston Garden. After graduation he was a rookie with the Celtics before returning to law school.

George Burke

Burke, now a successful practicing attorney in Quincy, served eight years as a city councillor—two as council president—state representative, and 12 years as Norfolk County district attorney. He was also president of the Massachusetts District Attorneys Association.

He was selected for the U-Mass Sports Hall of Fame in 1981. At his induction, Burke said: "The greatest days of my life were spent on campus. At $50 a semester, attending U-Mass was the greatest bargain of my life."

Nitardy said that with Burke's gift, the campus will re-open the hall on the third floor of the Mullins Memorial Center with plans for future inductions starting next spring. The hall, with 19 members, was discounted shortly after Burke's induction because of a lack of resources.

Burke is a long time supporter of the University and is an original member of the Chancellor's Council. He also received the Distinguished Service Award from the University.

Tomorrow (Friday) Burke will be honored at a dinner at the Mullins

Memorial Center for his latest contribution to the campus. Earlier that day he will play in the second annual Athletic Fund Golf Invitational at the Crumpin-Fox Golf Club in Bernardston. The invitational is sponsored by Spalding, U.S. Air, and Don Lorenz Inc. Proceeds will go toward the U Mass George "Trigger" Burke Sports Hall of Fame.

FLUID SITUATIONS

Whenever the brake light on the dashboard warns of a low brake fluid level, the car should be taken to the auto technician as soon as possible for inspection of the brake system. A leak in any part of this hydraulic system can lead to brake failure. Even under normal conditions, brake fluid should be inspected and changed periodically to guard against internal corrosion of the brake system. This preventative maintenance is made necessary by the fact that nearly all brake fluids are alcohol-based. The moisture that these fluids absorb over time can lead to corrosion. Only silicone-based brake fluids do not absorb moisture and, therefore, do not require periodic replacement as do alcohol-based brake fluids. HINT: A typical brake job entails replacing brake linings, surfacing rotors and drums, adding brake fluid and bleeding the system, as well as inspecting other components.

Come in and get acquainted with our technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, located at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (843-1550). Personalized service and attention is given to each customer whether they would like us to simply check their brake fluid level or to use our Hunter computerized brake analyzer. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Hours: Mon.-Fri. 8am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. We hope all Dads have a happy Father's Day!

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

When is a father just "Dad"? H.C. Chatfield answers this question this way: "If he's wealthy and prominent, and you stand in awe of him, call him 'Father.' If he sits in his shirt sleeves and suspenders at ball games and picnics, call him 'Pop.' If he tills the land or labors in overalls, call him 'Pa.' If he wheels the baby carriage and carries bundles meekly, call him 'Papa,' with the accent on the first syllable. If he belongs to a literary circle and writes cultured papers, call him 'Papa,' with the accent on the last syllable. If, however, he makes a pal of you when you're good, and is too wise to let you pull the wool over his loving eyes when you're not; if, moreover, you're sure no one else you know has quite so fine a father, you may call him 'Dad.'"

Regardless of what you are called ... Father ... Pop ... Pa ... Papa ... or just plain Dad ... Have a Happy Day!

Beach Water Testing To Start June 29

The Quincy Health Department will begin its summer water sampling program on Tuesday, June 29, announces Health Commissioner M. Jane Gallahue.

Water samples will be collected every Tuesday until Sept. 7, at 10 beaches, one to two hours before high tide. The results will be analyzed for fecal coliform counts by a certified private laboratory, and will be made available to the media throughout the summer months.

The Metropolitan District Commission will collect an analyze water samples at four locations along Wollaston Beach. The samples will be obtained Wednesday and will be reported to beach managers and the Quincy Health Department by Friday of each week.

Quincy, like most coastal communities in the South Shore area, is utilizing a standard of 200 or greater fecal coliform colonies as an indication of health risk. Beaches with counts of 180 or greater will be resampled. Beaches with counts of 200 or greater will be posted with signs which read: "Warning, Beach Unacceptable For Swimming per order of Quincy Health Department."

Such beaches are considered unsafe for swimming and the signs will remain in place until water samples show fecal coliform counts below 180.

If a period of rainfall has occurred after the water samples were taken on Tuesdays, it is important that people understand that such samples may not represent an accurate reflection of the water quality which will be reported on Fridays, said Gallahue. "Sewerage is often discharged into the harbor from pipes and drains that contain overflow wastewater in combination with rainwater after 1/4 on an inch of rainfall or greater occurs in a given day.

"We therefore recommend that people refrain from swimming or bathing for a period of 48 hours after a rainfall to allow for the natural flushing action of the tides to dilute and cleanse the water."

The City of Quincy is in a multi-year program to detect and repair problems with the City's sewer and storm drain pipes which may adversely affect Quincy Bay. The project will involve a series of steps which include the cleaning of sewer and storm pipes, the detection of possible leaks through the use of closed circuit television equipment and dye testing, and finally, the repair of any leaks or problems which are detected. The public is urged to avoid bathing or swimming in the areas immediately adjacent to storm drain outlets until the project - cleaning, detection and repair work on the pipes is completed.

The dye testing aspect of this project is scheduled to occur periodically over the next few years. On occasion, releases of dye may be noted at different locations within the waters of Quincy Bay. The dye used is fluorescent green-yellow in color, is water soluble and is not harmful to humans or the environment.

A pamphlet on the Bathing Beach Water Sampling Program will once again be available from the Quincy Health Department. For more information regarding the testing program contact 376-1270.

Beechwood Offers Summer Day Camp Program

An expanded Summer Camp program will be available for children aged 5-12, in Quincy this summer.

Beechwood Community Life Center plans a "Flex-plan" Kids Camp this summer to accommodate the varied daily and vacation schedules of working parents.

"Traditionally, Day Camps run from 9 to 4," said Sharron Beals, Beechwood's Executive Director. "With more than half of all mothers of young children employed, families now need a longer camp day. This summer our Camp Day will begin at 7:30 a.m. and close at 5:30 p.m. for families needful of an extended day."

Beechwood's Summer Camp will offer one and two week sessions. "Camp-Outs" (sleep overs) and "Parent Days" will be options. Family Days provide special group opportunities for parents and children to share kite making, field trips and other special activities.

Sarah Terrill, Beechwood's After School Director, an accredited educator, directs the Summer Program.

"We have a dynamic and varied program, we'll offer a traditional smorgasbord of sports, outdoor activities, cook-outs and crafts, complimented with field trips and special enrichments," said Terrill. "This year we will add chess, Computer Arcade and a community garden. Children can also take music lessons, enroll in Reading and Math Enrichment, Computers and Science Clubs."

"Many of our campers from last year are returning this summer. We must be offering what children and parents are looking for," said Beals. "We plan our program to foster self-reliance, a curious appreciation of nature and good sportsmanship. Camp at Beechwood Community Life Center offers a warm, enriching experience in a setting where traditional family values are supported and where children learn to be part of a caring community."

Registration forms are available at Beechwood Community Life Center, 225 Fenno St., Quincy. Call 471-5712 for more information.

Women's Baseball Star Wants Her Name Removed From Field

"why install a miniature backstop? If it was meant to be a softball diamond, why cut out the semblance of an outfield with the first baseline a 'stone throw' from a cement wall?"

Pratt asked Cattaneo to remove the sign, that the area be dedicated to someone else. Cattaneo said he removed it late last week.

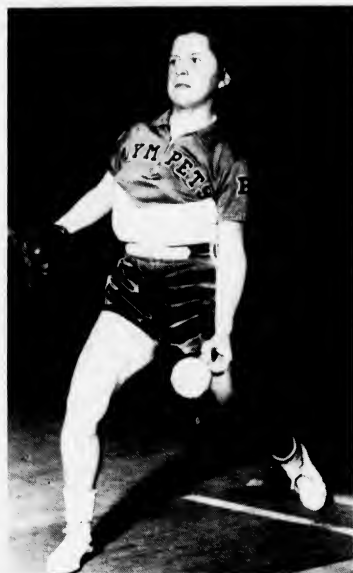

"All I can say," said School Committee Vice Chairman Stephen Durkin, "is I don't blame her."

She contends that if a park or building is dedicated to anyone, it should be well kept. "I just thought it was inappropriate."

Lydon went a step further, saying first that it seemed to be the only park available, most others already dedicated to someone, but added that the city needs to do something to recognize Pratt, and Quincy's other Girls Professional Baseball League veteran.

Helen (Ketola) LaCamera played in 1950 for the Fort Wayne Daisys, she's a lifelong Squantum resident, now retired to Florida.

"And yet the Trophy Room at Quincy High School (where LaCamera attended) nor the Pride Room (where Pratt attended) have anything about them," said Lydon. Yet, both are named on the plaque at the Baseball

MARY PRATT shows her form pitching for the old Boston Olympettes, who played in 1939 and 1940 in Boston Garden.

Hall of Fame.

"I've talked to both principals," she said, "and the School Department, and they've all said 'yes, you're right,' and haven't done anything."

Pratt said she was working at North when the Pride Room was established, working with special education students, and was "a little sensitive" about being excluded.

She's also said that she's been turned down for jobs coaching girls softball with the School Department with the jobs being filled by men who, she said, had little experience with softball.

Pratt said, "I'm not a great one for honors, I think it can be very shallow, but it was just inappropriate."

City To Start FY94 With $400,000 Surplus

money to balance these budgets."

The City Council was expected to approve the city's FY94 budget Wednesday. Councilors cut $310,000 from Sheets' proposed spending plan of $128,689,981.

The mayor said the council acted responsibly in cutting several items in his proposed budget.

"I think they did a good job with it. They spent more time on it than before. It's tough to cut money out of budget which is very tight. They stopped short of making false cuts and I think that's important."

Last year, the Council trimmed only $86,516 from the mayor's budget.

This year, councilors cut debt service from $750,000 to $650,000 after Auditor Robert Foy informed them that the principal and interest for $10 million in new bonds would cost the city $641,000. The bonds are for the West Quincy sewer project and the construction of the Early Childhood Education Center and addition to the Bernazzani Elementary School.

Councilors cut another $100,000 in workmen's compensation but Sheets said the money will probably have to be added at some point during the fiscal year.

Sheets noted the city's revenue projections have been on target the past several years, helping to stabilize finances.

In FY92, the city's projection was 99.9 percent accurate and Sheets expects another bulls eye for FY 93. "We hit it within one tenth of one percent. That's pretty good."

"It stabilizes finances. I credit (Auditor) Bob Foy for that—he always does a good job."

Interstate Distributors Addressing Complaints, Attorney Tells Board

By BILL DONCASTER

The attorney for Interstate Distributors in Scantum sent a letter to the Quincy License Board listing ways they are addressing complaints of noise from the residents at the Seawinds condominium next door.

One of those residents, Priscilla Conley, is making her own list of late night and early morning noise over the past three weeks.

License Commissioner Matthias Mulvey said yesterday that he's anxious to see that list, and said, "They're first class people in that building and shouldn't have to put up with this."

"Interstate should smarten up and be good neighbors," Mulvey said.

He added that he's currently investigating them for licensing infractions, saying that trucks they use for distribution of periodicals may not be licensed by the city.

"I'm not seeking out noise," Conley said, "this is just what I hear and causes me to lose sleep." Conley said noise from Interstate Distributors is so constant that she occasionally sleeps through it through sheer exhaustion.

When told of the four measures taken by Interstate, Conley said they have made no difference.

"I hate to get this frustrated," she said, "but I've tried to get a peaceful solution. A barking dog gets more attention."

Conley said residents at Seawinds, 90 Quincy Shore Drive, would now like to see a strict enforcement of the Quincy's noise ordinance, forbidding the use of commercial machinery except between the hours of 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

At a hearing with the Quincy License Board several weeks ago, Atty. Peter Eeley, representing Interstate said that his client is willing to compromise, but cannot suspend operation between those hours.

Because of the timely nature of their business, distributing magazine's and other periodicals, they occasionally have to accept deliveries early morning.

However, Nancy McNally, an attorney who also resides at Seawinds, contended that inability to comply with the law is not an excuse to break it.

Mulvey says he has stopped by Interstate Distributors at late night hours, intending to enforce the noise ordinance if he found them in operation. He hasn't witnessed anything.

He says he intends to file a formal complaint in district court.

Conley said this past Sunday they operated as late as 11:55 p.m. and picked up again at 2:15 in the morning. Many mornings they can begin working at 4:30 or 5 a.m.

When Conley and her husband, John, purchased their unit, Interstate had delivery hours posted as 7 a.m. to 4 p.m.

"I'm still holding out the olive branch," she said, "I'm still hoping that this is a basic human right, the right to peaceful enjoyment of a nights sleep."

Residents have been working closely with Ward 6 Councillor Ayers in trying to resolve the problem.

Sheets' $8 Million Bond Issue Package Awaits Council Action

By MICHAEL WHALEN

An $8,145,000 bond package from Mayor James Sheets will likely be approved by the City Council at a special meeting next week.

The package, which was discussed at length at Monday night's meeting of the council's Finance Committee, includes bond issues for the renovations on the city's schools and other public buildings, departmental equipment, seawall repairs, sewers and drains, and other matters.

Councillor Timothy Cahill, the Finance

Committee chairman, said the package could not be voted on Monday night because the council had not had enough time to advertise it. The matter was placed in committee until next week's special meeting.

If the package is approved, it would be the largest since the late 1980s, when Quincy expanded its police station.

Cahill said after listening to council members express their opinions on the package at the meeting, it appears there will be little or no opposition to the package next week.

"It seems that way," said Cahill. "I thought it would take longer to get through it, but there's nothing frivolous about these bond issues. Financially, the city can handle it."

"I have no problem if this passes next week. The reason I originally had it placed in committee (at the council's June 7 meeting) was because I wanted people to have more time to think about it. A lot of the money being spent has been

McGrath Optimistic City To Sue MWRA For Rate Changes

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The Sheets administration and City Council are planning a lawsuit against the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority which will be likely filed before September.

City Solicitor Stephen McGrath, speaking for the administration, said Tuesday the litigation will be filed as an attempt to change the MWRA's current method of charging its water and sewer rates.

"The basis is the methodology the MWRA uses in its billing," said McGrath. "We're pleased with the complaint we've come up with, and I think we have a good chance of success."

The MWRA currently bases its water and sewer rates on population rather than usage. McGrath has said in the past that this methodology benefits cities such as Boston but places an unfair burden on other communities such as Quincy.

Mayor James Sheets was in New York City

Tuesday attending the 61st annual U.S. Conference of Mayors and was unavailable for comment. Executive Secretary Thomas Koch deferred all questions to McGrath.

"He (McGrath) is representing the administration," said Koch.

The City Council Environmental Control Committee Monday night discussed the matter for 40 minutes behind closed doors in the council's first executive session in 13 years. A session related to the city budget was held in 1980, according to McGrath.

Ward 2 Councillor Ted DeCristofaro, who is in New York with Sheets, and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers were the only councillors not in attendance at the executive session. Ayers, however, was in attendance at the council's regular meeting later in the evening.

After the session, Cheney issued a public statement saying the committee was happy with the research McGrath is doing in the matter.

"This committee is very satisfied with the direction we're going in," said Cheney. "The city solicitor is doing an excellent job in the fact-finding stage of the lawsuit. We are moving forward."

After the statement, Cheney said he could not go into details about the litigation but added that action could be taken by the end of the summer.

"We're close," said

Public Hearing On Home Quarters June 28

The City Council will hold a public hearing Monday, June 28 at 7 p.m. in the City Hall Council Chamber regarding an application filed from Home Quarters regarding a proposed home improvement retail store on the Braintree-Quincy town line in West Quincy.

Home Quarters retail facility has applied for a planned unit development special permit to construct a single story concrete masonry building consisting of a 102,940-square-foot home improvement retail store and a 24,763-square-foot garden center located in Braintree and Quincy on the town line at 840-866 Willard St.

At 7:30 p.m., the council was scheduled to discuss a proposed zoning amendment concerning accessory uses for supplementary provisions (tool sheds, garden shed, etc.)

Artery Shift Suspended To Cut Squantum Noise

In response to calls from Sen. Michael Morrissey, Rep. Michael Bellotti and Ward 6 Councillor Bruce Ayers, Central Artery Tunnel project Director Peter Zuk has suspended third shift pile driving that has been the cause of excessive noise in Squantum and other local communities.

In addition, the agency has set up a hotline to assist the Central Artery in identifying the specific times that noise levels are the worst. The officials encourage residents to call the hotline, CAT-HELP, whenever there are excessive noise levels.

Other communities such as Hull and Winthrop have been bothered by the noise levels, Bellotti noted. "Quincy legislators will continue to work closely with legislators from these communities to try and solve the problem," Morrissey added.

Senior administrators and engineers from the Tunnel and Artery project are currently meeting and reviewing noise mitigation options, Bellotti said.

"We are hopeful that the project administration will continue with their commitment to work with local residents to minimize the impact of construction. The complaints from local communities has generated a quick response from Mr. Zuk but we hope to work out a permanent solution in the near future," Morrissey said.

Ayers said project officials "have been cooperative and are seeking solutions to the problem in a timely manner."

Zuk has pledged to work with local legislators to resolve the problem.

Liquor License Sought At New Restaurant

By BILL DONCASTER

A new restaurant is taking over the site of Bentley's restaurant, at 579 Southern Artery, and had its first hearing for a liquor license on Tuesday with the Quincy License Board.

Kevin Gill, of Gilesin Enterprises, is owner and will also manage the restaurant. He said it will be a family style restaurant called "Owen O'Leary's," and both City Clerk Joseph Shea and Building Inspector Matthias Mulvey say they have visited another of Gill's restaurants in Framingham.

A representative from the River Bay Club has spoke Tuesday in opposition saying their facility for the elderly had problems with Bentley's restaurant. He cited litter, noise and even cars banging into fences.

Ward 1 City Councillor Peter Kolson spoke in favor of the license, calling Gill an "excellent candidate for a license," and said that type of restaurant would be a welcome addition to the neighborhood.

The hearing was continued until next week, as it is the practice of the license board to hear liquor license request for at least two weeks.

City Council Passes $128,360,915 Budget

The City Council last week passed an FY94 city budget of $128,360,915.

The final budget is $329,066 less than the $128,689,981 budget proposed by Mayor James Sheets.

The FY94 budget will provide slightly expanded police, fire and school department services for the new fiscal year, which begins July 1.

The budget also calls for a 2.5 percent increase in property taxes, the maximum allowed under state law, and a $1.2 million increase in the city's water and sewer assessment from the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority. In addition, it includes a $2 million subsidy for the employee pension fund at Quincy Hospital.

Councillor Timothy Cahill, chairman of the council's Finance Committee, said last month it was his opinion that as much as $500,000 might be shaved from Sheets' proposed budget. Cahill said last week, however, that he viewed the $329,066 cut as "a success."

Last year, the council cut only $86,516 from Sheets' proposed FY93 budget, according to City Auditor Robert Foy.

The FY94 budget approved by the council exceeds the FY93 budget by about 3 percent.

All of Quincy's 3,100 municipal employees will receive raises, something Sheets said is possible because the city saved several million dollars in health insurance and trash removal costs.

The council, in approving the new budget, authorized 2 percent raises for 2,400 municipal employees, including police and firefighters, and 4 percent raises for Quincy's school teachers.

The council also authorized hiring an additional 18 police officers, 10 firefighters and 14 teachers.

The police department's budget for FY94 increased by $711,000 and the fire department's by $189,000.

The budget for the department of public works decreased by $668,000, excluding the MWRA water and sewer assessment. The council approved an MWRA assessment of $13.44 million, an increase of $1.2 million over FY93.

During its recent budget review, the council cut $100,000 in proposed workmen's compensation payments and an additional $100,000 in bond payments for school and sewer projects.

Other cuts made were $30,000 for informational literature on property assessments, a new $24,500 assistant traffic engineer's position in the department of public works, a $19,000 sanitation inspector's position in the health department and $15,000 for emergency inspections by the building department.

City To Begin FY94 With $600,000 Surplus

By MICHAEL WHALEN

The city will begin FY94 with a free cash surplus of about $600,000, according to City Auditor Robert Foy.

Foy said after the City Council Monday night appropriated a final $804,261.91 from free cash to allow the city to balance its books, approximately $600,000 remained in Quincy's free cash account. The new fiscal year begins July 1.

Asked by City Councillor Joseph LaRaia if $600,000 is a typical free cash surplus for a city to begin a new fiscal year with, Foy said some cities begin with very little or nothing at all in their free cash accounts.

"I think it is a good position to be in," said Foy.

In fact, Mayor James Sheets estimated last week that the city's free cash surplus for FY94 would only be $400,000 at most. Sheets, who is in New York City attending the 61st annual U.S. Conference of Mayors, was unavailable for comment Tuesday.

Councillor Michael Cheney said Sheets and the council worked extremely hard together for the city to finish FY93 with such a large amount of free cash.

"I think it demonstrates the success of the City Council and the mayor being financially conservative," said Cheney.

Foy agreed. "I second that motion," said Foy. "The City Council and the mayor work very well together. We all have something to be proud of."

Of the $804,261.91 appropriated Monday night, $413,952.49 went toward the costs of snow and ice removal from last winter, $270,000 toward police overtime and $100,000 toward the city's school lunch program. Other, far smaller, amounts went toward general insurance, the mayor's office, fire department and city election.

CAROLYN McKEON (left), New England Telephone's Director of Public Affairs, presents a $1,000 donation to the Open Door in Quincy. Accepting the donation along with Ward 1 City Councillor Peter Kolson is Gail Cocio, executive director of the agency. The Open Door was founded in 1990 to provide a safe environment where positive relationships and support are offered to youth in the Germantown area.

City Council Approves $2.2 Million Block Grant

The City Council Monday night passed a Community Development Block Grant FY 1993-94 budget of $2,267,000.

The budget, which $238,000 more than the $2,029,000 FY 1992-93 CDBG budget, was discussed during a meeting of the council's Finance Committee.

The breakdown for the new budget, which will benefit a number of community organizations and services, is as follows:

- *$328,000 for housing rehabilitation grants and loans.
- *$272,000 for housing rehabilitation program support.
- *$225,000 for senior center and day care services.
- *$75,000 for removal of architectural barriers.

*$25,000 for public facilities improvement.

*$78,550 for neighborhood public improvement.

*$400,000 for commercial revitalization in Quincy Center.

*$300,000 for Quincy 2000, $250,000 of which would go toward special economic planning activities such as business loans and grant programs and $50,000 toward planning initiatives.

*$340,050 toward public services.

*$403,400 toward planning studies and CDBG administration.

Athena LaRocca of the Planning Board reserved the authority over the above list of expenditures. Councillor Michael Cheney said he would like a more in-depth report of exactly how the Quincy 2000 funds are being spent.

Council President Charles Phelan agreed.

"I'll get (Quincy 2000 Executive Director) Chuck D'Aprix to compose a list of how the money is spent," said Phelan.

Councillor Timothy Cahill, the Finance Committee chairman, said he would like to see more money spent on the city's parks, citing Faxon Park as one that could use some maintenance.

"We're spending a lot of money on streets and sidewalks, but not parks," said Cahill. "We should focus on a ballfield or two and maintain those fields in a little better shape."

Medically Speaking

by Michael M. Bakerman, M.D., F.A.C.C.

HEAR, HEAR!

What's that? You say you've been having trouble hearing lately? Over half of everyone over age 65 experiences some type of hearing impairment, and that percentage rises to 90 percent after the age of 90. The most common age-related hearing problem is sensorineural disorder, in which the inner ear's tiny hair cells deteriorate, hampering the transmission of sound vibrations. A hearing aid may be the remedy for this condition, which is generally not reversible. Other causes of hearing loss related to malfunctions of structures in the ear can often be corrected with drugs or surgery. If you think you have a hearing problem, consult your physician to determine if there is a medically correctable cause.

P.S. About one-third of students entering college have detectable hearing losses due to rock concerts, walk-around stereos, etc.

You can help reduce your risk of noise-induced hearing loss by keeping the volume on your personal stereo at a low volume, and by never running more than one noisy household appliance at once. If you would like to learn more about this topic, or about how you can modify your lifestyle to help ward off heart disease, call me, Dr. Antonelli, or Dr. Dunlap at COMPREHENSIVE CARDIAC CARE at 472-2550. Office hours are by appointment. Our new office offers a pleasant surrounding for medical care, and is located in Crown Colony, 700 Congress St., Suite 2C, in Quincy. I am affiliated with Quincy Hospital and South Shore Hospitals.

Draft Donnelly Movement

Former Congressman Brian Donnelly took himself out of the Boston mayoral race but isn't saying no to a bid for governor next year.

He isn't saying yes, either.

But he's thinking about it.

Donnelly was the keynote speaker at the Ward 6 Democratic City Committee breakfast meeting Saturday at Amelia's at Marina Bay.

And had no objections whatsoever as state Senator Paul Harold distributed political buttons proclaiming: "Draft Donnelly Governor."

Harold is serious. He's also been distributing the buttons in other areas of the state wherever Democratic convention delegates gather.

Would Donnelly, who represented Quincy and the South Shore in Congress, and has a big following here, seriously consider running for governor in 1994?

He said he is going to think about it and will come to a decision in late summer or early fall.

At the Ward 6 breakfast Donnelly kidded: "I didn't think I would be here today. I thought I would be in Ireland."

He had been considered in the running for appointment as ambassador to Ireland but lost out to Jean Kennedy Smith, sister of Senator Edward Kennedy.

But he will be in Ireland shortly—if only briefly. He's going to receive an honorary degree from the University of Galway.

MARY COLLINS, former School Committee-woman and Norfolk County Commissioner, has taken out nomination papers for City Council at-large and is expected to make an official announcement shortly.

This makes five candidates for the three seats and sets the stage for what could be one of the best council races in recent years.

Collins and Charles McIntyre, son of the late Mayor-Senator James McIntyre, are challengers the incumbents have to be concerned about.

Tim Cahill, Michael Cheney and Joseph LaRaia who hold the three seats now are going to have to work at it to keep them.

ANOTHER CANDIDATE in the School Committee race. John McDuff, who has run in the past, has taken out nomination papers.

That makes a total of 12 candidates—10 challengers—so far.

QPIC Members Commended

By MICHAEL WHALEN

Members of the Quincy Park Improvement Committee (QPIC) who participated in the recent restoration of the Collins Rest-A-While playground on Southern Artery were honored at Monday night's City Council meeting.

Council President Charles Phelan, whose ward includes the playground, presented commendations to the QPIC members in attendance and praised them for their efforts in raising money for the playground through fundraisers and selecting the equipment for the site.

He added that the city also had a hand in getting the project moving.

"This is something that took over two years, and I would note that the $15,000 that started them off came from the city," said Phelan. "This is an example of the city and the community working together, and that's why it was successful."

QPIC Chairman Michelle Lydon praised Phelan and Assistant City Clerk Patricia Toland for their assistance during the project and gave special thanks to the QPIC members in the audience.

In addition to Lydon, the list of commendation recipients includes:

Elizabeth Angelo, Scituate; Ronald Ceriani, 386 Quarry St.; Donna Buccheri, 64 Willard St.; Roseanne Cristiani, 1367 Quincy Shore Drive; Deborah Durkin, 41 Buckingham Rd.; Lynne Houghton, 19 Wayland St.; Carol Ann Marx, 87 South Walnut St.; Daniel McLaughlin, Hanson; Stephanie Veneto, 85 Steadman St.; Carol Lydon, Weymouth; Janet Lydon, Milton; Joe and Claire McGillicuddy, 26 Taylor

St.

Douglas Guthro, 57 Commonwealth Ave.; Jack and Diane Lydon, 41 Adams Circle; Jean Palmer at Petar's Automotive, 330 Quincy Ave.; Savale Perdios, Milton; Joan Pritchard, 48 Dysart St.; Steve's Fogel of Steve's Beale St. Diner, 17 Beale St.; Mary Gagin of The Yacht Shop, 542 East Squantum St.; David Smith, 431 Adams St.; Maureen Grindley, 90 Winthrop Ave.; Kristin Miller, 286 Whitwell St.; Jimmy Dunn, 50 Bayview Ave.; Peter Hoyt, North Weymouth.

VI GILLIS, wife of Norfolk County Commissioner and former City Clerk John Gillis, was painfully injured in a fall down a flight of stairs at their Falmouth home last week.

Vi, a talented artist, suffered fractures of both wrists and two vertebrae in her neck, necessitating casts and a neck brace.

She's now recuperating at their Richard St., Quincy home and "feeling a little better."

A speedy recovery, Vi.

A RETIREMENT PARTY for Arthur Morrissey, Division Coordinator of the Plumbing and Pipefitting Department at Quincy Vocational-Technical School, is set for today (Thursday) from 3 to 8 p.m. at the Quincy Yacht Club, Sea St., Houghs Neck.

Morrissey, the father of state Senator Michael Morrissey has been a teacher for 26 years.

He was the foreman pipefitter in charge of the installation of the heating and cooling system during the construction of the Vo-Tech school which was completed in 1967.

He finished his work on a Friday as foreman and returned to the school on Monday as a teacher.

The farewell party is being held by his family. It's open to all his friends. No admission charge.

THE FIRST FUNDRAISER for Charles McIntyre's city council at-large campaign will be held Tuesday, June 29 from 7 to 9 p.m. at the North Quincy Knights of Columbus Hall, Hancock St. and Hollis Ave. Tickets are $15 per person and may be obtained by calling 847-1812 and will also be available at the door.

OBSERVATION: The white pick-up truck came barreling up Scammel St. with several youngsters sitting in the open back. They wore baseball caps, possibly members of a youth baseball team.

The truck sped through the red light onto Quincy Ave. despite the sign: "No Turn On Red."

It swerved onto Water St. and then sharply onto Summer St. and partly onto the sidewalk before disappearing.

If there had been a collision with another vehicle, these youngsters could have been thrown into the street and seriously injured or worse.

Knowing where your children are these days is not enough. Knowing who they are with is just as important.

Doc Kendall And The Kettle Hole

A Plea For Kendall Park

By Mary-Margaret Alessi
Who was Doc Kendall?
What is a Kettle Hole?
Where is Kendall Park?
When did the City of Quincy receive the deed to this famous Atlantic estate?

Why is it in a state of neglect?

If you live in the Ward 6 area, I'm sure you are familiar with the empty park with no name and the dump behind it known as Kettle Hole, on the corners of North and Atlantic Sts.

On Dec. 23, 1938, Dr. Walter G. Kendall, dentist, octogenarian, dog fancier horticulturist, sportsman and gentleman, gave the City of Quincy a handsome Christmas gift, when he signed over the deed to his famous Atlantic estate to be used as a park.

The deed was accepted by Mayor Thomas S. Burgin on behalf of the people of Quincy. Mayor Burgin insisted the estate by known as Kendall Park. Dr. Kendall said, "I would like to see the city take over the entire property and maintain it both for its geological aspect and for its horticultural aspect. If this would not be feasible, I would be willing for the city to accept the rear half on which the hole is located. They could either maintain the present vineyard in the hole, or they could uproot the vines and seed the hole down in grass."

A relic of the Glacial Age, the kettle hole is a geological phenomenon, and a rarity in this area. This is not the biggest, or the smallest kettle hole in the world but it happens to be the most perfect.

On its symmetry it bases its chief claim to world distinction. An added claim is that under the careful hand of Dr. Kendall, it had for almost half a century produced the finest grapes grown in this or any other country.

A kettle hole is a hole in the ground shaped like an inverted cone caused by glacial action a few million years ago. Within the great glacier that passed over Quincy was a comparatively little whirlpool. Swirling around in this whirlpool was a large boulder, probably as big as a good sized house, and this boulder, as it spun about like a top in a tide race, bored out the Kettle Hole. The hole is about 150 feet in diameter at the top and about 50 feet deep. The rim is almost a perfect circle. There are numerous similar kettle holes throughout the world, but few if any so perfectly symmetrical as the one in our own backyard.

We can start by cleaning up after ourselves. The park right now is just a dog dump. I think it's great that dog owners, with small or no backyards, have a place to bring their pets to run and get their exercise, but we should all be courteous to the small children who play ball there and bring a scoop with us.

A park, void of all playground equipment, leaves a lot to be desired. What a waste of scarce and valuable play area for our children. The children old Dr. Kendall gave his land to.

Let us not delay any longer. It has been vacant and abused long enough. Let's start right now and change this eyesore into something it was meant to be. Something to be enjoyed and something to be proud of. We should work together as a community to reverse the damage that's been done, and make the most of this generous gift, given to us, the people of Quincy.

If you have any questions, ideas or comments, please write to me: Mary-Margaret Alessi, Vice President, A.N.A., Atlantic Neighborhood Center, 12 Hunt St., North Quincy, MA 02171.

Volunteers are needed to help paint the fence at Kendall Park. Let's all pitch in and show our children and the city that we care.

Please call the Atlantic Neighborhood Center at 376-1381 and leave your name, telephone number and the days and times you are available. Or please stop by the Center at 12 Hunt St. and fill out the sign-up sheet. We'll be glad to see you.

(Mary-Margaret Alessi is Vice President of the Atlantic Neighborhood Association.)

Quincy's Yesterdays

Drive Begun On Illegal Fire Crackers

Deputy Fire Chief William Sands inaugurated a campaign against the sale of powerful firecrackers that had been declared illegal by Sate Fire Marshall John W. Reth following reports of many injuries among youngsters.

Sands issued the warning to more than 50 stores in Quincy that were selling fireworks in the weeks prior to the Fourth of July.

The illegal firecrackers were described as Chinese-made, two inches long, three-eighths of an inch in diameter and containing an explosive charge made up of 3.7 grains of aluminum dust, potassium nitrate, charcoal and sulphur.

The aluminum dust gave the cracker a much greater explosive power than the black gunpowder that is usually used, said Sands.

DRUNK DRIVING EXPLAINED

Judge Albert Avery in Quincy District Court fined a Dorchester salesman $100 for driving a car under the influence of alcohol—even after the judge conceded that the man might well be a better driver drunk than sober.

The man's attorney asserted that his client could not possibly be drunk since he drove all the way from Nantasket Beach to North Weymouth in heavy traffic, passing at least a dozen police officers on the way, without mishap.

"Ofentimes," said Judge Avery, "a man under the influence of liquor will be found to be a more careful operator than is the case when he is sober."

Mariano Applauds MWRA Decision To Seek Harbor Cleanup Scaleback

Rep. Ronald Mariano, a member of the Committee on Post Audit and Oversight Subcommittee on the MWRA, has applauded the decision by the authority's Board of Directors to seek federal court approval for significant scalebacks to the Boston Harbor cleanup project.

"The MWRA subcommittee began this examination of the Boston Harbor project in October of 1992 to determine if cost savings could be realized for rate payers by scaling back this project. Our efforts have been successful and this is the first in a series of efforts to make water and sewer rates more affordable," Mariano said.

The savings realized by the scaleback include: •$90-$130 million by eliminating Battery D of secondary treatment and decreasing the size of Battery C of secondary treatment;

•$700 million by reducing the size of a proposed deep tunnel storage system for combined sewer overflows;

•$20-$35 million by scaling back sludge handling and other equipment.

"It shows that hard work pays off by working together with a unified legislative agenda we can solve this complex problem and bring rate relief to all of us," Mariano said.

We were at a family first communion when our niece Cecilia (better known to all of us as "Bunny") brought a seven layered salad that was not only pleasing to the eye, but delicious as well! (Great with summer cook-outs).

It can be made ahead and kept well overnight leaving the dressing, bacon and cheese until just before serving time.

Bunny's Seven Layered Salad
Layer in large salad bowl the following: (I like a see-through bowl)

- Lettuce (cut up, any kind)

- 12 ounces of fresh shredded mushrooms
- 1 Bermuda onion (sliced)
- 2 peeled sliced cucumbers

10 ounce package of frozen peas (thawed, not cooked)

2 or 3 stalks celery (cut)

Dressing

Mix together the following:

2 cups mayonnaise

1 teaspoon basil (fresh if you can get it)

1/2 teaspoon garlic powder

Our Policy On Engagement Photographs And Wedding Announcements

The Quincy Sun will continue to publish photographs with engagement announcements as it always has.

The Sun will also continue to use in wedding announcements the names of all members of the wedding party including maid or matron of honor, best man, parents, bridesmaids, ushers, flower girls and ringbearers, etc.

We invite engaged couples to submit their photos with their announcements, and when submitting their wedding photo to include a complete listing of the wedding party.

Black and white photos are preferred. The Sun can convert most color photos to black and white for publication but the photo loses some clarity in the process.

We suggest that when you have your engagement photo taken, you request the studio to send a copy to The Sun with the reminder that The Sun is continuing its policy of publishing engagement photos.

The Sun also publishes articles and photos of wedding anniversaries beginning with the 25th anniversary.

And, as in the past, there is no charge.

SIX QUINCY RESIDENTS were recently commended by Quincy Police Chief Francis Mullen, far left, for assisting Officer Robert Cugini after he was attacked while responding to a noise disturbance last June. ## Six Residents Commended For Aiding Police Officer

Six residents who bravely came to the assistance of a Quincy police officer last June were honored by the Southeastern Chiefs of Police Association at a recent reception dinner at Amelia's.

Chief Francis Mullen commended Alfred Braun, Paul Wassiege, William Dineen, Keith Oliver, Angelo Kapetanekos and Walter Szczesul for assisting Officer Robert Cugini June 7, 1992 who was attacked after responding to a noise disturbance.

Cugini was dispatched to 79 Piermont St. on a "loud noise call" and when he first responded, he spoke to the occupant, William Cenga, and advised him regarding the disturbance to the area residents. Cugini returned to the address a second time and again advised Cenga. As the officer was leaving the house, Cenga took Cugini off-guard, knocked him to the ground, and proceeded to beat him violently with a rock as he struck the officer's head on the sidewalk.

Several neighbors witnessed or heard the incident and they called police emergency 911 to report an officer was in trouble. Prior to the arrival of the police, Paul Wassiege, 71 Piermont St., Keith Oliver, 38 Sherman St., Walter Szczesul, 295 Elmwood Ave., Alfred Braun, 149 Milton St., all came to Cugini's assistance.

Angelo Kapetanekos, 216 Newbury Ave., and William Dineen, 91 Taylor St., were driving by in a motor vehicle when they saw Cenga on top of Cugini. They immediately joined into help the neighbors in their efforts to free the officer from Cenga's grip. They were able to drag Cugini to safety, handcuff the suspect, and hold him until police arrived and placed him under arrest.

"It is indeed rewarding to me and all of the officers of this department to know that there are citizens who are willing to risk their own safety to help us when we need assistance," Mullen said.

"I thank and commend all of the brave citizens for their prompt actions which saved Officer Cugini, and I also appreciate the many neighbors who alerted the police that one of their officers was in trouble.

"I believe that it is through the combined courageous efforts of each and every one of these brave citizens that a potential tragedy was averted," the chief added.

Sportsman Shop Proposed At Quincy Center Site

By BILL DONCASTER

Paul Miller went before the Quincy License Board Tuesday to ask for an ammunition license for a new address.

Miller had previously tried to attain the license for an address on Whitwell St., a residential neighborhood. Due to pressure from residents he withdrew that application and is now proposing to open the Quincy Sportsman Shop at 14

Cottage Ave., in Quincy Center.

Miller said it will be a sporting goods store supplying hunting and fishing gear.

Miller, who is a studying to be a gunsmith, said they would be selling hunting and fishing gear, including hunting rifles and ammunition, and would do firearm repair off site, a his workshop in Bridgewater.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said the problem with his previous request was purely the location. He said that there is no law prohibiting this kind of business in Quincy, and that Miller is the proper kind of person to be doing it.

According to Shea, Miller holds all the necessary licenses with the State.

The board continued the hearing until next week, Shea said, because they are waiting to get an opinion from the Downtown Businessmen's Association. Shea said the board has a history of working closely with them on such issues.

he said it will be on the agenda for next week.

Gregory Hanley Candidate For School Committee

Gregory M. Hanley of 32 Shed St., Quincy, announces he is a candidate for a seat on the Quincy School Committee.

Hanley, 28, will officially launch his campaign at a kick-off party tonight (Thursday) from 6 to 9 p.m. at Pat Flanagan's Pub, Parkingway, Quincy Center.

Educated in Quincy Public Schools, Hanley graduated in 1983 from Archbishop Williams High School and Norwich University (the Military College of Vermont) in 1987. He is married to Annemarie (Sullivan) Hanley. They have a son, John, and are expecting another child this month.

After graduating from Norwich, Hanley opened Screamin' Ice Cream parlor at age 23. "My community involvement was enhanced as a businessman and I worked diligently on behalf of many organizations," he said.

Hanley is a past

GREG HANLEY member of Quincy Community Action Board of Directors and has raised funds for the homeless and for children from the Big Sister-Big Brother Organization.

Hanley is a current member of the Quincy Youth Baseball Board of Directors and has sponsored, coached and organized youth baseball leagues in Quincy. He has raised money for the St. Boniface Building Fund.

Through the city's Community Development Block Grant funds, Hanley recently founded the Germantown Athletic Club which gives adolescent children an alternative social/athletic environment from which to choose.

Hanley said got into the School Committee race as a result of the Quincy College governance issue and school teachers contract. he said that school buildings are being built "which is good" but he feels that the "give away" school properties of the 1980s shows "short-sightedness amongst past committees."

"The current state of school buildings should be addressed," Hanley said.

On other issues, Hanley said he advocates "quality pay for quality education" and more interactive programs designed for students "to adhere to a 90s social standard versus the 1960s."

In addition, Hanley said he wants to reestablish school sports at the middle school level and tap into corporate resources as alternative funding for programs.

Sheriff's Office Awards $1,000 Grant For Quincy D.A.R.E Program

Norfolk County Sheriff Cliff Marshall recently presented Quincy Chief Francis Mullen with a $1,000 grant toward Drug Abuse Resistance Education (D.A.R.E.) program in Quincy.

This is the third year that Norfolk County has offered this grant to local police departments as part of a regional law enforcement grant. The money is made available on a yearly basis through the Sheriff's Office budget supported by the Norfolk County commissioners and County Advisory Board.

The Norfolk County Sheriff's Office Regional Law Enforcement Grant not only helps local police train a D.A.R.E. officer in his or her respective city or town, but provides support for the sheriff's D.A.R.E. officers to become trainers or "mentors" to local law enforcement agencies in need of training assistance.

The grant also provides D.A.R.E. officers with individual programs including "in-service" training and supplies for classroom instruction.

The D.A.R.E. program offers a highly structured, intensive curriculum that targets elementary school children. D.A.R.E. instructors are uniformed police officers or deputy sheriffs who work with children to raise their self-esteem, decision-making skills and identifying positive alternatives to alcohol and drug use. Uniformed D.A.R.E. instructors serve as role models for impressionable school age children and develop a rapport that promotes a positive attitude toward police and a greater respect for the law.

The Norfolk County Sheriff's Office employs two professional D.A.R.E. officers: Deputy Sheriffs Fred Canniff and Paul Galvin. Canniff received his D.A.R.E. training from the Massachusetts Criminal Justice Training Academy (MCJTA) in January, 1990. He is currently teaching in Holbrook at the South School and St.

Joseph's Elementary School.

Galvin received his D.A.R.E. training at the Mass. Criminal Justice Training Academy in September, 1990. Both Galvin and Canniff teach D.A.R.E. at the Dale Street School in Medfield.

Fifth, sixth and seventh graders in Holbrook, Avon and Medfield will graduate soon from the 17-week D.A.R.E. training program taught by Norfolk County Deputy Sheriffs Fred Canniff and Paul Galvin.

"One of the goals of the Sheriff's Office is the continue to offer support for established drug education programs like D.A.R.E.," Marshall said.

"As long as the Norfolk County commissioners and County Advisory Board continue to make these funds available through the Sheriff's Office, we will continue to offer technical and financial support to every local police department in Norfolk County.

"It is our hope that every community will have an experienced D.A.R.E. officer to provide a positive role model for young people. It's so important for us to reach these children at such an impressionable age," the sheriff added.

Gerry Coletta Honored For 31 Years Of Service On Park, Recreation Board

Gerry Coletta of Quincy was honored for 31 years of service on the Quincy Park and Recreation Board at his last regular board meeting June 1 at the Richard J. Koch Family Park and Recreation Complex.

Coletta's service to the board began after the new Park and Recreation Commission was formed 31 years ago. The first board meeting was June 4, 1962.

At that meeting, the first motion made by Coletta was to approve a request from the Squantum Fourth of July Committee to utilize Wendall Moses Playground for a Fourth of July event. Ironically the last motion filed by him June 1, 1993 was for the Squantum Fourth of July Committee use of the same playground for this year's festivities.

Following the meeting, a reception was held in the Community Meeting Room attended by family, friends and city officials. Mayor James Sheets presented Coletta with a citation thanking him for his many hours of service on the Board and for his wisdom and knowledge on matters pertaining to park improvements and recreational programs that have been initiated during his tenure.

Council President Charles Phelan and fellow Councillors Ted DeCristofaro and Tim Cahill presented a proclamation to Coletta for his dedication and service to the citizens of Quincy. DeCristofaro and Cahill also served with Coletta on the Park and Recreation Board.

Sen. Michael Morrissey, who worked in the Recreation Department during that time, presented Coletta with a citation from the State Senate signed by Senate President William Bulger.

The evening was highlighted by newly elected Park and Recreation Board Chairman Kathleen Mitchell's announcement that a motion was made at the regular board meeting May 3 to rename Upper Merrymount Field on the corner of Hancock St. and Southern Artery the "Gerry A. Coletta, Jr. Field." The motion passed unanimously.

Former Norfolk County District Attorney George Burke, a long-time friend and associate who was instrumental in getting Coletta appointed to the Board in 1962 when Burke was a city councillor, was also in attendance and spoke briefly of Coletta's accomplishments.

At this time, Coletta addressed the gathering and introduced his family and friends while reminiscing about the past 31 years and the accomplishments of the Board.

Recreation Director Barry Welch and Park, Forestry and Cemetery Director Ray Cattaneo conducted the evening's program and each thanked Coletta for his service to the city.

Morrisette Edged By Braintree

By TOM SULLIVAN

The Morrisette Legion team, last year's state champion and Northeast Regional runner-up, suffered its first loss Monday night as Braintree won, 4-3, in a rain-shortened game.

Morrisette defending its Zone 6 title, is 3-1-1.

Morrisette will face a Florida all-star team at Braintree tonight (Thursday) at 5:30, will play Whites Town, N.Y., at Doubleday Field in Cooperstown, N.Y., Sunday at 9:30 a.m. and will return to Zone 6 action next Tuesday, hosting Weymouth at 8:30 at Adams Field.

Monday's loss to Braintree was hard to take as Morrisette tied the score at 4-4 in the top of the seventh inning on Tommy Malvesti's home run. However, the rain came and, after a short delay, the game was called and the score reverted back to the sixth with Braintree leading, 4-3, and getting the win.

Braintree took the lead with a run in the first and Morrisette tied it in the fourth on his by Robbie Kane and Brian Hayes and, with one out, Dave Reinhart walked to load the bases and Serge Belcastro scored Kane with a sacrifice fly.

Morrisette took a 3-1 lead in the sixth on singles by Hayes and Jay Schnabel. Hayes scored on a wild pitch and Schnabel wound up on third. Another sacrifice fly by Belcastro scored Schnabel.

Braintree came back in its half of the sixth to score three times on a hit batter, a double and Sean Lynch's three run homer. Lynch drove in all four Braintree runs.

Mike Patch started for Morrisette and pitched all six innings and suffered his first loss. He gave up five hits, walked three and struck out three.

Hayes had two hits and Pat Shea, Kane and Schnabel one each.

Last Friday Morrisette pounded Wollaston, 16-1, breaking open a scoreless tie in the third as it sent 12 men to the plate and scored seven runs on seven hits.

In the fourth it sent 13 men to the plate and added eight runs on seven hits.

Morrisette had 17 hits, six for extra bases. Kane went 4-for-4 and played outstanding defense. Matt O'Toole, the starting and winning pitcher, went 3-for-5 with two RBI. Schnabel had two hits, including a bases-loaded triple.

Reinhart had a double and single with two RBI, Belcastro a double and single and two RBI, Shea a triple and an RBI, Hayes an RBI single, Malvesti an RBI single and Andy Joyce an RBI double.

O'Toole had a no-hitter going into the sixth by Morrisette committed three straight errors and Charlie Rozanitis singled home an unearned run. O'Toole struck out seven.

Chris Cotter pitched the seventh and allowed one hit. Terry Manning was the starter and loser for Wollaston.

In its previous game last Thursday Morrisette rolled over Quincy, 21-9, sending 18 men to the plate and scoring 14 runs in the fifth to break open a 5-5 game.

Quincy jumped off to a 4-0 lead in the first off starter and winner Dan Duncan as it put together five hits and took advantage of a key error. Terry Gaide's two-run double was the big hit.

Morrisette took the lead in the second with five runs off starter Tim Byrne. The big hit was a base-clearing double by Malvesti.

Shea drove in one and later scored on a wild pitch.

Quincy tied it in the third when George Wirtz stole home a delayed steal after a single. Dan Burke relieved Byrne and took the loss.

Morrisette's 14-run outburst in the fifth was highlighted by a bases-loaded double by Shea, who also tripled in a run in the inning. He had three hits and five RBI and scored three runs. Malvesti had two hits in the inning and drove in four runs. Hayes went 3-for-4.

Coach Dave Perdios cleared his bench in the sixth and used 16 players. Adam Calvert had two hits and an RBI.

Pat Bryan made his first Legion pitching appearance in the sixth and seventh. He was roughed up in the sixth by settled down to retire six batters in a row.

Gaide had a fine game for Quincy with five RBI and two doubles. Wirtz had two hits as did Mark Karlson.

Morrisette had opened its home season with a 3-2 victory over Braintree in a typical Morrisette-Braintree game that went down to the wire.

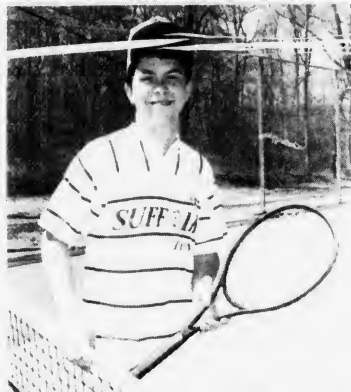

Sean Donovan started for Morrisette and had a no hitter going into the sixth inning with Morrisette leading, 2-0, on two unearned runs. Donovan walked the second batter in the sixth and, with two outs, Scott Goggins belted a home run over the 387-foot sign in left-center to tie the game.

Lynch followed with a long triple but was left stranded.

O'Toole relieved Donovan in the seventh and retired the side as Morrisette pulled off its third double play.

In the bottom of the seventh Shea was hit by a pitch, Kane sacrificed, Belcastro was intentionally walked, Schnabel hit into a fielders choice and Reinhart singled home the winning run.

The game was featured by outstanding pitching and defensive play. Morrisette's infield of Shea Kane, Malvesti and Schnabel came up with one great play after another.

JOHN DROHAN of Quincy was one of the outstanding freshmen of the Suffolk University tennis team, playing number 5 in singles and teaming with fellow Quincy teammate Tim Kane in doubles and losing only one match as a pair. Drohan is the son of Edward and Diann Drohan.

"We have a young team and have started slowly with not much hitting but our bats are coming around and Jeff Craig, Jon Gangi, Terry Manning and Matt McGowan have been hitting well," said first year coach Mike Draicchio.

In the Holbrook double-header Gangi went 4-for-7 with two triples, two RBI and two runs scored. Craig had three hits along with Manning and Charlie Rozanitis went 3-for-5 with two RBI.

Scott Kelly pitched the 5-0 shutout, gave up only four hits and struck out eight.

Quincy had lost the opening game, 14-6.

four runs in the second inning as Gangi singled, Dan Reynolds sacrificed, Steve Barrett reached on an error and John Russell walked to the load the bases. Craig was hit by a pitch and Marc Swirbalus singled as Canton's right fielder mislaid the ball, allowing Barrett, Russell and Craig to score.

by Tony Centorino, Bill Starkie and Kevin McGroarty
TOE THE LINE

If a feathered wear pattern appears across the tire tread, it's often an indication that the toe alignment is off. "Toe" is the wheel alignment angle that refers to the way the tire travels in parallel lines (when viewed from above). When corresponding tires toe out, their leading edges are farther apart than their trailing edges. Most rear-wheel-drive cars call for a slight amount of toe-in when initially aligned because the rubber bushings and joints in their suspensions give a little. Many front-wheel-drive cars, on the other hand, call for a slight amount of toe-out due to bow in the drive wheels as they pull the car. Either way, a vehicle should have perfect parallel alignment (zero running toe) while being driven.

HINT: Excessive camber (inward or outward tilt of the wheels when viewed from the front) can also cause uneven tire tread wear.

LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO is your local service center that many of your friends and neighbors already rely on for their tire alignments. We pride ourselves on the quality of our service department. SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

George Bernard Shaw once said that progress is impossible without change; and those who cannot change their minds cannot change anything...Indeed, one of the key words of our modern life is "change."

We in our profession, the Funeral Service, have not been immune to these changes. Today we are coming to see, more and more, that Funeral Service has a greater meaning to our society than probably ever before in our history. Today's public is probably the most knowledgeable in the history of mankind. Yesterday's "taboos," misconceptions and questions are being forthrightly discussed and answered...and this is the way it should be. Gone are the days when a director was called upon simply because of religious beliefs and family custom. In today's society a funeral home's clientele cuts across ethnic and religious backgrounds. (Again, this is the way it should be.) At Deware we are proud that we have always adapted to constantly changing times. We are proud of our home and of our staff, who are always striving to give you the very best in unmatched service and thoughtfulness.

Sheets' $8 Million Bond Issue Package Awaits Council Action

requested by the councillors, and if my fellow councillors feel that it should pass, I have no desire to hold it up over the summer."

The special meeting next week had been scheduled before the bond issues went into committee Monday night, and Cahill said the package will be added to the agenda.

Cahill told councillors at the Finance Committee meeting that the city has greatly decreased its bond indebtedness over the last four years. In 1989, Cahill said, the city was almost $30 million in debt, as compared to a figure of just over $19 million today.

If the new bond package is passed, Cahill said Quincy's projected bond indebtedness will be $24,974,458.

"Even if all the bond issues are passed, we will be less in debt than 1989," he said.

Sheets said recently that bonding allows the city to finance the cost of such projects over several years.

City Auditor Robert Foy said terms of the various bond issues, assuming the package passes next week, will not be known until the bonds are sold this year.

Foy added that on Monday, two Wall Street credit rating agencies, Standard and Poors and Moody's Investor Service, again gave the city an A credit rating. Foy has said that such a rating is a good one, especially for a city, and added that the only higher ratings are AAA and AA.

The bond package includes:

•$1,725,000 for new water drains and sewer pipes in the Wollaston and Montclair areas including Newport and Wilson Aves., Belmont, Brooks and Harvard Sts. and Elmwood Park.

Department of Public Works Commissioner David Colton said these projects would eliminate flooding problems that residents in those areas have been experiencing.

•$1,810,000 for renovations to public buildings. Of this figure, $1,560,000 would go toward the city's school buildings and $250,000 toward municipal buildings including both Old and New City Hall, the police station, fire stations, John F. Kennedy Health Center and the Department of Public Works Building.

Superintendent of Schools Eugene Creedon told the council that schools needed money for roof repairs, plumbing and heating, painting, clocks and bells and other matters. The council, however, told Creedon that $1,560,000 was a high figure and that he would need to forward a more complete, school-by-school breakdown of the exact renovations needed before a vote on the bond issue was taken.

Creedon, for his part, said he had compiled such a list and was unaware why a copy had not been sent to the council. He agreed to forward a copy to the council as soon as possible.

Creedon went into specifics Tuesday, saying that $409,000 for roof repairs will benefit mainly Atlantic Middle School but also the Wollaston and Atherton Hough Schools; $63,000 for masonry and waterproofing is primarily for leakage at the Point-Webster School; $164,500 for painting and $79,100 for clocks and bells are for all of the city's schools; $93,000 for carpets and floors will go toward the Lincoln-Hancock School and North Quincy High School; $183,000 for plumbing and heating will benefit the Squantum and Parker Schools and Quincy High School; $13,100 for doors is mainly for the Squantum School and the Center for Technical Education; and $15,000 for lighting is for the Lincoln-Hancock School.

In addition, $450,000 will go towards accreditation, mainly for new handicapped accessibility at Quincy High School; $30,000 will pay for a new pool filter for the Lincoln-Hancock pool; and $30,000 will go towards Quincy Veterans Memorial Stadium, primarily for the field itself but also for some minor masonry work.

Colton and DPW Operations Manager Lester Gerry said the municipal buildings needed funding for painting, caulking, hot water boilers and other concerns.

•$1,000,000 for street renovations in the Wollaston Center area on Beale St. between Hancock St. and Newport Ave. Colton said it is important for the city to "make Wollaston look as nice as Quincy Center does."

•$1,150,000 for a flood control project in Squantum and repairs to seawalls in Houghs Neck. Colton said drains would be installed in the backyards of Squantum residents that would siphon water into the nearby marsh. He added that flooding has been a major problem in the area.

The seawall repairs would be done at Arthur Boyson Park and in the Post Island Rd. area.

•$1,495,000 for departmental equipment. This would include $120,000 for 10 police motorcycles, $410,000 for a fire engine and other equipment for the fire department; $709,000 for various trucks and other equipment for the DPW; $102,000 for various mowers and dump trucks for the parks department; $117,600 for dump trucks, mowers and other equipment for the cemetery department; $15,000 for a van for Animal Control, $20,000 for a 12-passenger van for the Council on Aging; and $30,000 for a backhoe for snow removal for the school department.

Asked by Councillor Michael Cheney why the school department could not borrow a backhoe from the DPW in the case of a snow emergency, Creedon said the schools needed at least one such piece of equipment in-house because the DPW is sometimes too busy to loan equipment to the schools.

Police Capt. Frederick Laracy and Fire Chief Thomas Gorman spoke on behalf of their departments while the equipment issue was discussed.

•$265,000 for police and fire communications, in particular the Enhanced 911 (E911) emergency service.

•$500,000 for repairs to a number of the city's water mains in the area of Furnace Brook Parkway, Northfield Ave., and Curlew, Martell and Sunrises Rds. Colton said such repairs would increase the quality of the drinking water that residents receive in their homes.

•$200,000 for new water meters throughout the city.

Other than minor concerns regarding the specific school expenditures, council members expressed enthusiasm about passing the package next week.

BUSINESS & REAL ESTATE

Local Stop & Shop Stores Raise 3,400 Pounds Of Food, $1,000 For Needy

By BILL DONCASTER
Stop & Shop's recent "Food For Friends" drive raised over 3,400 pounds of food and over $1,000 in its two Quincy stores to help feed the hungry in Southern New England.

The drive was part of a chain-wide campaign encompassing Stop & Shop's in Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island. As a whole, the campaign raised 94 tons of food and $25,000 in donations.

Robert Tobin, president and CEO of Stop & Shop, said, "the event presented many heartwarming stories of shoppers helping the less fortunate. In one store (in Western Mass.) a woman filled a grocery cart with food which she donated because she remembered all too well what life had been like when she was in need, and that was just one of the many examples of generosity."

The Store on Southern Artery raised 2544 pounds and $180 by itself. According to store manager Mark

DePasquale, store employees volunteered to stand next to food donation boxes, and manning a hot dog stand where all proceeds went to "Food For Friends."

"It's the second year we've done it," DePasquale said, "people in this area have been very receptive." He said City Councillor Ted DeCristofaro was on hand "shaking hands and urging customers to help out."

The Newport Ave. Stop & Shop raised 859 pounds and $828. They too had a hot dog stand where a hot dog and a Coke cost $1, with all the money going to "Food For Friends."

Less successful was a system for soliciting donations at the register.

The system would, upon handing the cashier a voucher, add $1 to a customers food bill at the time of checkout, the total being removed when the cashier finishes her shift and put into the fund.

"There was some confusion with that," said Dennis Carr, store manager at Newport Ave., "Some people thought it was a coupon for a dollar off, we had to explain it to a lot of people."

DePasquale reported that response to the voucher system wasn't overwhelming at Southern Artery either. "People were more interested in food donations," he said.

DePasquale is already putting "Food For Friends" behind him and gearing up for Stop & Shop's campaign for the Jimmy Fund and Dana Farber Institute.

A $1 donation goes straight to cancer research, and buys a scratch ticket to win free products donated by vendors, or a chance to win as much as $10,000.

"Hold on to your tickets," DePasquale said, "Last year we had six $10,000 prizes go unclaimed. We ended up giving them away by drawing names."

"I think people are more interested in making the donation than they are in the prizes," he said.

Quincy Hospital Hosts Leaders For Community Rounds

Quincy Hospital recently hosted community leaders from the greater Boston area, who were teamed up with key hospital personnel, to get an "insiders view" of Quincy Hospital and the services it provides.

Participants in the Community Rounds program included:

City Councillor Joseph LaRaia; Cecilia Yu, Asian outreach coordinator, South Cove Community Center and Quincy Hospital; Roberta Zysman, Dr. Harvey Katz, and Jaqueline Rosenthal of the Harvard Community Health Plan; James D. Asher, president, WJDA; Thomas J. Zukauskas, executive director, Massachusetts Cerebral Palsy Association of the South Shore; Dr. Joseph Lau, South Cove Community Center; and Jim Pansullo, WEEL.

The half-day programs began with a welcome by Ellen Zane, chief executive officer, who highlighted some of the recent changes in the hospital's programs and facilities.

Doris Sinkevich, administrator for nursing, provided and overview of the hospital's clinical programs and teamed each of the visitors with a health care professional who escorted them to their first morning assignment.

Each participant had the opportunity to directly experience the everyday routine of two hospital departments. These included oncology, cardiology, recovery room, family-centered maternity, the respiratory/heart station, rehabilitation services, the pharmacy, laboratory, and radiology departments.

Participants expressed great enthusiasm about their experiences, and the new understanding it gave them about the day-to-day challenges faced by health care providers in a community hospital.

Dana Childs Elected President State Collectors-Treasurers Assn.

The Massachusetts Collectors and Treasurers Association has unanimously elected Quincy Collector-Treasurer Dana F. Childs president for the year beginning July 1.

Childs has been collector-treasurer of Quincy for more than six years and has risen rapidly in the association's ranks.

Upon assuming his post as Collector-Treasurer with the City of Quincy, he became active in the affairs of the State Association of Collectors and Treasurers and began pursuing their programs leading to Certification in both offices. Two years ago he achieved that goal and today displays certificates in his office, which designate him as a Certified Massachusetts Municipal Collector and a Certified Massachusetts Municipal Treasurer.

The State Association, with over 700 members dates back to 1928.

In order to be awarded Certification, an individual must attend the Association's Annual School at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst for one week in August of each year for three years, where grueling courses in property tax collections, motor vehicle taxes, municipal finance law, cash management and many other pertinent subjects are taught. At the end of the three years the candidates must then pass the Certification Boards examination.

Shortly after being

Certified, Childs was appointed to the Association's Education Committee. He has continued to attend the Annual School which is required in order to maintain his Certifications and additionally has served as a member of the faculty the past two years, teaching one of his specialties, property tax collections.

Childs expressed his gratitude not only to the members of the Association for conferring this honor upon him but especially so to the people of Quincy for having supported his efforts to acquire and improve his expertise in the field of tax collections and treasury management. He promised to let neither contingency down.

RON LEAMAN, right, foreman of the Quincy DPW Sewer, Water and Drain Department, was honored as the employee of the year by DPW Commissioner David Colton during a ceremony at the department's recent open house.

Ronald Leaman DPW Employee Of The Year

As part of the celebration of National Public Works Week, the City of Quincy Department of Public Works named Ronald Leaman its 1993 Employee of the Year.

Leaman, a foreman in the sewer, water and drain department, was chosen from a list of three nominees. The other nominees were June Farand of the transportation division and David Baharian of the highway division.

The announcement was made by DPW Commissioner David Colton at a recent ceremony.

Last year's winner, Barbara Sealund, presented Leaman with a plaque given testimony to his leadership, professionalism and positive attitude. Council President Charles Phelan extended the best wishes of the mayor and city council to this year's nominees and award recipient.

Colton said the Quincy DPW celebrates National Public Works Week and honors its employees in an effort to demonstrate "the pride we all feel for the job we do and the role we play within the city. Many people work very hard and long to ensure the public health and safety of the city residents."

Four employees were also recognized for long-time service to the DPW. They were Anthony Demeo of the engineering department; Donald Pitts of the highway department; Carmen Leone, supervisor of custodians; and Loretto Coletti of the transportation division. Each has received 25 years or more of service to the city.

City To Sue MWRA For Rate Changes

Cheney. "I would say (the lawsuit will probably be filed) before September."

McGrath said Tuesday that Cheney's timetable is probably an accurate one.

"I would say that's a fair statement," he said.

Ward 1 Councilor Peter Kolson, whose own actions against the MWRA have included organizing last month's "Tea Party" at Marina Bay--at which MWRA sewer and water bills were ceremoniously placed into Boston Harbor in a re-enactment of the Boston Tea Party--also had little comment after the executive session.

"We're pursuing this in the best interests of the citizens and the rate payers," said Kolson. "The lawsuit is pointed at trying to straighten out certain inadequacies. I can't really say anything else."

Residents in all 43 MWRA communities were invited Kolson's "Tea Party," which drew a crowd of about 600 residents and officials. Local officials at the protest included Sheets, City Council President Charles Phelan, Ayers, and State Rep. Ron Mariano.

Other communities have refused to pay their MWRA assessments for the fiscal year ending June 30 and/or held protests similar to the "Tea Party" such as bill-burning ceremonies.

Other protests are being planned for the future, according to Kolson.

MWRA rate payers have been funding the majority of the $7 billion Boston Harbor cleanup since it began several years ago. The Environmental Protection Agency is considering allowing the MWRA to downsize the harbor cleanup by at least $750 million, saving rate payers money.

A recent report issued by Inspector General Robert Cerasoli projected that water and sewer bills for an average family could climb from $545 today to $1,891 by the year 2003 and $2,010 by the year 2005.

MWRA officials have disputed Cerasoli's claim, saying rates will be only $1,207 by the year 1999, the last year on their projections.

Zane Elected Mass. Hospital Association Board Trustee

Ellen Zane, chief executive officer of Quincy Hospital, was recently elected to the Massachusetts Hospital Association Board of Trustees.

Founded in 1936, the Massachusetts Hospital Association is a not-for-profit organization that represents the collective interests of acute and specialty hospitals in Massachusetts. The 28-member board sets policies and priorities for the association.

Since 1990, Zane has been chief executive officer of Quincy Hospital where she served as chief operating officer since 1987. Prior to joining Quincy Hospital, she was vice president for professional services at Morton Hospital and Medical Center in Taunton.

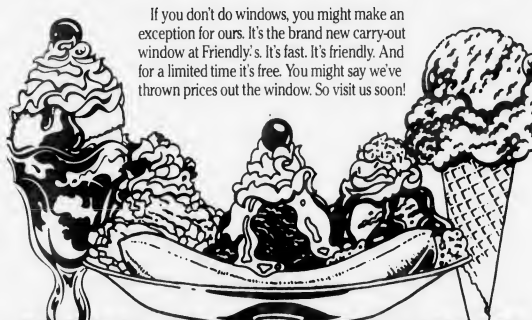

Zane is a member of the Health Care Management Association of Massachusetts and the American College of Healthcare Executives.

She also serves locally on several boards, including the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and the Cooperative Central Bank of Massachusetts.

"I'm pleased that someone with Ellen Zane's skills and experience is joining MHA's board of trustees, especially as national health care reform presents us with unprecedented challenges," said MHA President Stephen Hegarty.
